CONGRESS IN WAVE OF PATRIOTISM ENDS

HOW AMERICA MET WAR TASK IN SIX MONTHS

Details of Vast Work Told in Statement by Officials.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., Oct. 6.—[Special.]—"Six months from the day war was declared finds the United States mobilized for the supreme task ahead."

This is the summing up of the situation given by the committee on public information in a comprehensive résumé of the activities and achievements of the government since the declaration of war on April 6.

"The transition from conditions of peace to those of war, from the standpoint of rapidity and thoroughness, is without precedent in the history of democracies," the committee asserts in a brief introduction to the résumé.

ALL BRANCHES REVIEWED.

Detailed reports are given from all the governments, showing their multiplied activites, and the résumé treats of the major achievements by congress in passing the legislation that provided the sinews of war.

In the first sixth months, which has largely been a period of preparation, a small peace army has been built into an army of a million and a half, capable of expansion to 3,000,000 within a year, and to a greater strength if war continues; the navy has three times as many ships and three times as many men as it had before the war, and already has sent a large fleet to European waters to join the operations of the allied fleets.

DETAILS OF THE REPORT.

The report in detail as it treats of the activities of congress, the various executive departments and coöperating commissions and committees, follows:

CONGRESS.

The extraordinary session of the Sixty-fifth congress has enacted more legislation of importance than any preceding session. It has broken all records in the enactment of great appropriation bills and laws bestowing powers upon the chief executive and his assistants. Here are a few of the important legislative enactments:

The first war time general deficiency appropriation bill, carrying $163,000,000, of which $100,000,000 was to be expended by the president for national security and defense.

FIRST BOND BILL PASSED.

The first bond issue bill authorizing the secretary of the treasury to sell $5,000,000,000 worth of bonds (of which amount $3,000,000,000 was for loan to our allies) and $2,000,000,000 in one year certificates of indebtedness.

The army, military academy, and sundry civil appropriation bills which had failed in the Sixty-fourth congress. The total was $422,000,000.

The selective draft law, providing for the raising of an army of 1,000,000 men by the draft.

A bill authorizing the president to take over any vessel owned wholly or in part by any citizen, corporation or subject of any nation with which the United States may be at war.

HUGE BUDGET FOR WAR.

The first great war budget—appropriating $3,281,000,000 for the military and naval establishments on account of war expenses.

Mob Loose in Twin Cities' Car Strike

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 6.—Widespread rioting broke out in the Twin Cities' street car strike late tonight when a mob of more than a thousand stoned street cars, smashed windows, cut trolley ropes, and forced strikebreaking train crews to leave their cars in all sections of the downtown district.

Three cars stood on the leading business street shattered, and the mob rushed off to stop other cars. Street car traffic was practically suspended and crews fled from their posts at every opportunity, fearing physical injury. Falling glass injured several persons slightly.

Two sticks of dynamite were found on one street car track in an outlying district when a motorman stopped his car within a few feet of the charge. Power wires at one substation were cut, leaving several lines powerless.

Service at midnight was totally suspended and cars will not be run until at least broad daylight.

Several arrests were made by deputies. Among those placed in jail was Ray Kemp, private in Company A, First Minnesota infantry, who was charged with attempting to incite riot.

600 BOXERS TO CLASH AT ONCE AT FT. SHERIDAN

Fort Sheridan, Ill., Oct. 6.—[Special.]—Beginning Monday morning, candidates at the second reserve officers' training camp will all enter upon a strenuous course in boxing.

The First regiment will be formed about the roped arena on the parade ground and will be given their first lessons by Martin Delaney, physical director for the Chicago Athletic club, who has volunteered his services. More than 600 pairs of boxing gloves will be distributed and visitors will be enabled to see 300 fistic bouts at once.

The Second and Third regiments will follow in turn. The periods of instruction will be for thirty minutes each, between 9 and 11:45 every morning except Saturday.

If the candidates are to have the comfort of stoves when they enter the trenches week after next they must be purchased with company funds, as there are no government funds available.

ALL NIGHT FANS FOR GAME TODAY

Bleacher fans began gathering early last night at the entrance to White Sox park to insure gaining admission to the second game of the world's series this afternoon. Victory of the White Sox had a stimulating effect and the crowd was larger than Friday night. Early this morning several hundred were in line.

THE WAR

French retake positions in Verdun region; repulse attacks elsewhere and raid German trenches, Paris says.

Berlin reports drumfire on Flanders line.

Rome claims Austrian attacks repulsed.

U-BOAT PUNCH DWINDLES; U. S. CUTS SEA RISK

Washington, D. C., Oct. 6.—A reduction of nearly 25 per cent in premiums for insurance of American vessels and cargoes traversing the war zone was announced today by the government's war risk insurance bureau.

The reduction was made, it was officially announced, "because of the decrease in the risks." Unofficially it was regarded as the government's expression of its opinion in terms of dollars and cents that the U-boats have passed the zenith in their campaign of frightfulness.

Indications have not been lacking for the last three weeks that the government intended to revise its war risk insurance rates in the light of reduced effectiveness of German submarines. It hardly was thought, however, that the cut would be large.

RISKS ON SEA FEWER.

Announcement of the reduction was made in this cryptic statement by the treasury department:

"The secretary of the treasury today announced that the bureau of war risk insurance has reduced its rates on all American steamers and cargoes traversing the war zone from 6½ per cent to 5 per cent.

"This reduction is made because of the corresponding decrease in the risks."

Determination of the war risk premium is based upon many factors, but primarily on the number of vessels traversing the war zone and the number of sinkings. The effectiveness of methods used in combating submarines also enters largely into consideration.

FIRST INSURANCE REDUCTION.

From the government's announcement it is regarded as apparent that officials believe effective methods have been adopted to deal with the U-boats, although details of these methods cannot be revealed.

Today's announcement marks the first reduction in any government insurance risk to any waters infested by submarines. Heretofore the revisions have all been upward.

The first increase was announced March 21, before America's entry into the war, and approximately seven weeks after the German admiralty put into effect its campaign of ruthlessness. This increase was approximately 50 per cent, or on the average from 2 per cent to 3 per cent of the value of the ships and cargoes.

BOOST RATES WITH WAR.

Little more than two weeks after America's entry into the war the rate was increased approximately two-thirds, or generally from 3 to 5 per cent. Announcement was made that the increase was put into effect to bring American rates to a parity with those maintained by other governments.

It is significant, however, that the increase was announced on the same day that the German submarines ended the week of their maximum achievement—the week of April 21, when a total of forty vessels of more than 1,600 tons was sent to the bottom.

The third and last increase, announced July 27, brought rates up to 6½ per cent.

PERU BREAKS WITH GERMANY; URUGUAY TO ACT

LIMA, Peru, Oct. 6.—Peru formally broke relations with Germany tonight. In accordance with an overwhelming vote in congress for such a rupture the government handed passports to the German minister.

Uruguay Near Break.

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 6.—From Montevideo, Uruguay, come word tonight that congress was momentarily expected to vote an overwhelming majority in favor of an immediate rupture in diplomatic relations with Germany.

Urges America to Save Food for "War After War"

Washington, D. C., Oct. 6.—America must save food for the "war after the war" as well as for the present conflict, the food administration declared today.

The food administration pointed out that a saving of 6 cents per day per person in the United States will amount to $2,000,000,000 a year.

WOMEN LURED BY OFFER OF JOBS AS TAXI DRIVERS

Men Promoting Company Arrested After Complaints.

Lady chauffeurs-to-be wept in unrestrained disillusionment yesterday as police swooped down on the offices of the Chicago Taxi company, 186 North La Salle street, and arrested the officers on charges of obtaining money by means of a confidence game from Chicago women.

Those taken were Charles O'Connor, 1507 East Marquette road, president of the company; H. V. Broenstrup, 666 North State street, vice president; Alfred H. Meyer, 2853 Burling street, treasurer, and Fred Stacey, 940 North Clark street, secretary.

Women Complain.

The raid on the Chicago Taxi company was made on complaint of women that the company had promised to teach them to drive automobiles for a fixed tuitional fee and to employ them later as chauffeuses at a large wage and commission.

More than 600 women made application, the police say, and, in addition to sending in their physical measurements and photographs, were required to provide a cash bond of $200, or else a surety bond, but preferably a cash deposit.

They were told, according to Lieut. John Sullivan of the detective bureau, that they would be paid $15 a week and 5 per cent of all taxi fares in addition to their tips, which alone would bring them twice the amount of any chauffeur's salary.

A Talking Point.

Stress was laid on the argument that because of the army draft the women were doubly assured of success. The smartest women's tailors would provide them with uniforms.

Applicants were also informed, the police say, that the company was soon to be incorporated and would shortly receive a consignment of 150 cars to operate in the loop and at principal corners of the city. The company has one car, partly paid for, the police say.

Dozens of women, the police say, had made deposits of from $5 to $100 and about twenty-five were waiting to put up their cash bonds when the police raided the offices. The complaints against the officers were made by Mrs. Agnes Grisley, 1984 String street, who deposited $100; Mrs. M. Creighton, 1014 George street, who paid $50, and Mrs. O. Glantz, 817 Belden avenue, who paid $75.

Failure to provide bonds of $15,000 each caused all the officers to be put in cells at the detective bureau. O'Connor and Broenstrup are already under indictment for using the mails to defraud, according to the police.

CHRISTMAS FOR OUR MEN IN FRANCE

Willard Reid, president of the Reid-Geisler Manufacturing company, is the first contributor to "The Tribune" fund to purchase Christmas boxes for the soldiers. With this subscription for $10 he wrote: "I have just noticed in this morning's issue your plan for distributing at least 5,000 Christmas boxes to the American soldiers in France. Details of your plan have not yet been announced, but the plan appeals to me so warmly that I want to make the contribution to it immediately."

Mr. Reid's contribution will buy "Tribune" Christmas presents for five of the men who are in France to fight for our country.

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, in coöperation with the Red Cross, announces a plan whereby Chicago patriots and the backers of the boys in any section of the United States may send Christmas gifts to the American soldiers in France.

Because of the regulations imposed by the government in the transportation of such remembrances and the difficulty attending the efforts of individuals to send their heart messages to the soldiers, THE TRIBUNE has worked out the plan which can be carried forward effectively at little expense.

Any person who desires to be one of those participating in the big shipment can do so by sending to THE TRIBUNE a check, money order, or cash, for $2. That provides for a complete kit for one soldier. Any person may pay for as many of these kits as he desires. That is all the expense imposed on the sender.

THE TRIBUNE and the Red Cross will take charge of the clerical work, the packing, the shipping, and the army folk will see that the packages reach the boys. Whatever expense is attached to this work will be borne by THE TRIBUNE and the Red Cross.

Each person who so participates in the Christmas cheer to the soldiers will be requested to submit his or her name and address. This will be printed on a return postal card, which will be packed with each kit. On the receipt of the kit "somewhere in France" the soldier will return his acknowledgment direct by mail to the individual who gave the $2 that bought the present.

If any participant, for instance, should desire to send ten kits or twenty kits, or even more, his name on the return postal card would go in each kit contributed by him, and he or she would expect to receive in due time that many acknowledgments from as many different soldiers.

The sending of kits through the agency of the Red Cross to a particular soldier is prohibited. The war department has ruled that all soldiers must be treated alike and that presents must be sent without personal addresses.

The kits will be exactly alike. They will contain, perhaps, more useful things for $2 than could possibly be got together in any other way.

The contents of the kit will include such things as soap, toothbrush, aluminium comb, pad of writing paper and pencil, darning cotton of various colors, white thread, khaki linen thread, buttons of two colors, needles, safety pins, a goodly quantity of "makings" or smoking tobacco, playing cards, a towel or an abdominal band.

SENATE HEARS CHARGE "LA FOLLETTE AIDS FOE"

Call Made to Nation to Stand United and Win War.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 6.—[Special.]—With Senator La Follette's lone outcry against the war and against the government overwhelmed in the senate by a flood of patriotic oratory and scathing invective and with a finale of national song singing in the house, the first session of the Sixty-fifth congress—the greatest war session in the history of the republic—adjourned at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

The last hours of the session gave ample proof that congress, the sole war making power, is more than ever convinced that the world cannot be made safe for the United States, much less "safe for democracy," until the menace of Prussian militarism is blotted out.

NO ONE DEFENDS HIM.

La Follette stood alone in opposing the expressed will of the nation, not one of his former anti-war colleagues venturing to utter a word in his support as the storm of denunciation broke forth in the replies of Senators Kellogg, Robinson, and Fall to his attempt to justify his actions in regard to the war.

A revelation of the unity of purpose of the congress to prosecute the war to the end was the interruption of the replies to La Follette to permit the senate, in open session and without debate, to confirm the promotion of Maj. Gen. John J. Pershing to the newly created rank of general.

The scene in which La Follette bade defiance to the overwhelming majority of his colleagues and of the American people was dramatic. The galleries were crowded and behind the full attendance of the senate stood scores of members of the house. In his room in the senate lobby President Wilson signed eleventh hour legislation.

ROBINSON REPLY SCATHING.

The most stirring patriotic appeal and withering invective elicited by La Follette's speech was poured forth by Senator Robinson of Arkansas.

"There is no compromise on this issue," Robinson thundered as he confronted La Follette. "There are only two sides to this conflict—Germanism and Americanism; the kaiser or the president. I want to know where you stand. I heard every word of the senator from Wisconsin and I do not know where he stands. I read his speech as reported from St. Paul and I do not know where he stands. The American people are wondering where he stands.

TIME TO TAKE STAND.

"The hour has come for loyal Americans to assert their manhood. We do not want any halfhearted support of this flag. You had the right to question the wisdom of the war, if in your honest judgment you doubted it; but when congress passed the declaration of war then, instead of going about the country and stirring sedition and gathering together the socialistic and discontented elements of the country and seeking to inflame them against your flag, your country, and your president"—the senator broke off in an excess of indignation and then burst forth, shaking his finger at La Follette:

"By God, you ought to stand here and support the flag and the president and help bring victory to American arms."

INQUIRY TO BE PUSHED.

Despite the elaborate attempt made by La Follette to justify his actions the investigation of his public utterances, on which is based the demand for his expulsion from the senate, will proceed. A subcommittee of the privileges and elections committee of the senate, composed of Senators Pomerene, chairman; Walsh, James, Dillingham, and Fall, will begin consideration of the charges at a meeting next Monday morning.

The house adopted without question a report of a special investigating committee recommending qualified censure of Representative Heflin for insinuating without production of proof that thirteen or fourteen congressmen had been influenced by German agents to oppose the war. This disposes, for the time being at least, of the controversy aroused by the revelation of the Bernstorff $50,000 slush fund to influence congress against declaring war.

DENOUNCED BY KELLOGG

Senator Kellogg, as the man who presented the petition which brought the entire matter before the senate, was the first to reply to the Wisconsin man's defense.

"A week ago," he said, "I presented to the senate a petition from the Minnesota commission of public safety containing a copy of a speech purporting to have been made by the senior senator of Wisconsin, in St. Paul, on the 20th of September. The petition was properly referred to the committee on privileges and elections.

"At that time I made no comment thereon and should not have done so but for the speech of the senator today. I shall not now anticipate the action of the committee or of the senate upon this question or express an opinion as to what should be done in the matter. But I cannot allow this occasion to pass, or this congress to adjourn, without expressing my emphatic dissent from some of the views stated in that speech."

NOT "WALL STREET WAR."

Senator Kellogg read a lengthy extract from the St. Paul speech in which La Follette contended that the United States was not justified in declaring war.

"After we have declared war and when we are calling upon brave men to sacrifice their lives, when we are marshalling the resources of a mighty nation for a struggle unparalleled in history," commented Senator Kellogg, "I believe that we should be extremely cautious and scrupulously accurate in stating the grounds of conflict and causes of the war.

"I deny that we went to war to secure the right of American citizens to ride on ships loaded with munitions for Great Britain or loaded with explosives in violation of American statutes. I deny that we went to war to protect the loans of the house of Morgan & Co. to foreign governments. I deny that we went to war to insure profits to munition makers, and I believe that such a statement is a slander upon the intelligence, the honor and the patriotism of this country.

"What we did go to war for I shall not hark back to the cause of the war being the central empires and the entente allies, although from a most painstaking investigation I am convinced

TASK WELL DONE

Wilson Gives Praise to Congress for Work It Has Done to Carry On War.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 6.—The work of the congressional session adjourning today was praised by President Wilson in a statement saying:

"The needs of the army and navy have been met in a way that assures the effectiveness of American arms, and the war making branch of the government has been abundantly equipped with the powers that were necessary to make the action of the nation effective.

"The Sixty-fifth congress, now adjourning," the president added, "deserves the gratitude and appreciation of a people whose will and purpose I believe it has faithfully expressed. One cannot examine the record of its action without being impressed by its completeness, its courage, and its full comprehension of a great task.

"I believe that it has also in equal degree and as far as possible in the face of war safeguarded the rights of the people and kept in mind the considerations of social justice so often obscured in the hasty readjustment of such a crisis.

"It seems to me that the work of this remarkable session has not only been done thoroughly but that it has also been done with the utmost dispatch possible in the circumstances or consistent with a full consideration of the exceedingly critical matters dealt with. Best of all, it has left no doubt as to the spirit and determination of the country, but has affirmed them as loyally and as emphatically as our fine soldiers will affirm them on the firing line."

President Wilson went to the capitol shortly before 2 o'clock to sign bills and to be present at adjournment of congress. Among the bills signed by the president were:

The urgent deficiency bill, carrying $7,758,124,000; the trading with the enemy act; and the army and navy insurance bill.

PATRIOTISM AND LA FOLLETTEISMS

Attacks Which Were Made on Attitude of Wisconsin Man and His Defense.

Following are some of the patriotic utterances by senators in reply to La Follette:

"No more dangerous doctrine could have been preached and no more insidious utterance could have been heard from any source than those by the senator from Wisconsin, in my judgment. I refer to his St. Paul speech."—Senator Fall.

"I have no right or wish to criticize any man who voted against this nation going to war, although I may disagree with him, but we are at war and I believe men of this body, men of influence, should not make statements tending to aid and encourage the enemy and to cast dishonor and discredit upon this nation."—Senator Kellogg.

* * *

"I say to you that while I cannot find language within the rules of the senate to appropriately characterize the sentiments uttered on this floor this morning by the senator from Wisconsin, if I entertained those sentiments I would not think I had the right to retain a seat on the floor of the United States senate. I would apply to the kaiser for a seat in the bundesrath."—Senator Robinson.

"I think all men recognize that in time of war the citizen must surrender some rights for the common good which he is entitled to enjoy in time of peace. But, sir, the right to control their own government according to constitutional forms is not one of the rights that the citizens of this country are called upon to surrender in time of war."

* * *

"More than all, the citizen in time of war must maintain his right of free speech. More than in times of peace it is necessary that the channels for free public discussion of government policies shall be open and unclogged."

* * *

"Lincoln, Webster, Clay, Sumner—what a galaxy of names in American history! They all believed and asserted and advocated in the midst of war that it was the right—the constitutional right—and the patriotic duty of American citizens, after the declaration of war and while the war was in progress, to discuss the issues of the war and to criticize the policies employed in its prosecution, and to work for the election of representatives opposed to prolonging war."

that imperial Germany has been preparing for more than thirty years to spring on an unsuspecting world.

"To that preparation she has brought all the resources of her great empire and the marvelous energy of her concentrated government; that when the opportune time came, when she thought Europe was unprepared to meet her onslaught, she availed herself of an excuse to plunge Europe into war that she might realize her dream of conquest and imperial mastery.

"I am convinced that the allied nations, France, England and Russia, used every reasonable effort to prevent this world calamity. Sir, Germany stands convicted by the judgment of the civilized world and this war is a blot upon the pages of history which sacrificed blood and time will never efface.

Sacred Treaties Violated.

"But whatever may be said as to the original cause of the war between Germany and the allies, this nation rests upon solid grounds, backed by international law, by the dictates of humanity and the instincts of self preservation.

"Germany violated her sacred treaties with this country. She closed the ocean to our commerce and the commerce of the world. She sank merchant ships in violation of international law and the universal custom of all civilized nations. She murdered noncombatants, innocent women and children; she defied and scoffed at our authority. She tried to induce a neighboring nation, with which we were at peace, to make war upon us by promising that nation a part of our territory.

"She violated our hospitality by having her ambassador, her consular agents and her spies plot in our midst against our peace and safety. Sir, today, when we are at war, her spies and her agents are in our midst. There are duties which a nation owes to its citizens, and to the world which it cannot ignore without danger to its institutions.

Pledge "Scrap of Paper."

"Mr. President, it is unnecessary for me to recite the details of the record of the sinking of American and foreign passenger ships—a record so black, so treacherous, so barbarous as to stir the indignation of all civilized nations. It is sufficient here to say that in addition to the sinking of the Lusitania and many other ships, on the 24th of March, 1916, her submarines sank the Sussex in the English channel, having on board a number of American citizens. This was a passenger ship. There was no claim that it was armed or carrying munitions.

"Following a demand by our government on May 4, Germany gave her solemn pledge that thereafter 'merchant vessels, both within and without the area declared a naval war zone, shall not be sunk without warning and without saving human lives, unless the ship attempted to escape or offer resistance.'

"But this pledge, like all other pledges of the imperial German government, was treated as a scrap of paper, and on the last day of January, 1917, the German government declared itself bound by no promises and threatened a ruthless submarine warfare against all the world."

Unfair to Men Serving.

Senator Kellogg submitted a statement containing the number of American ships sunk immediately following this decree and American lives lost by the sinking of more than twenty vessels, American and foreign.

"Are our brave and patriotic young men who are going to Europe to fight our battles to be told they are fighting for no cause; that they are giving their lives that munition makers may reap a harvest; that banking houses may loan money?" he continued. "Is this congress, this nation, so sordid that our noble sons on the field of battle are to be sacrificed for these purposes and all the splendid patriotism and the marshaling of the resources of this mighty nation are for no honorable purpose?

"Sir, we owe it to ourselves, we owe it to those brave men, we owe it to history, we owe it to the nations allied with us in this tremendous conflict, to place our disapproval before the world of this slanderous accusation.

No Warning from Bryan.

"I have it upon the highest authority that it is not a fact that President Wilson was warned by Secretary Bryan before the sailing of the Lusitania that it had on board 6,000,000 rounds of ammunition, besides explosives, and that the passengers who proposed to sail on that vessel were sailing in violation of the statutes of this country. In fact, we have the highest authority that the Lusitania was not armed and that she did not carry a cargo prohibited by the statutes of the United States."

He quoted the American note of June in support of this statement.

"This solemn statement of the secretary of state to the German government has never been successfully controverted," he continued. "Neither is it an accurate statement that the passengers who sailed upon the Lusitania did so in violation of the statutes of the United States."

The senator had the statute on explosives on ships read.

"It is not unlawful nor in violation of the laws of nations to carry contraband of war or for passengers to ride upon such ships," continued the senator. "But however this may have been, it was not within the laws of nations, within the principles of humanity and justice governing the civilized communities of the world, the right of Germany to sink such a ship without warning and taking off the crew and passengers and landing them in a place of safety.

Brutal Defiance of World.

"But this is not all. Germany did sink our ships and take the lives of American citizens thereon when there was no pretense that they were carrying munitions of war or explosives, and this without warning and in brutal defiance of this nation and the world. The time came when no self-respecting nation, believing in the principles of self-government and enlightened civilization, could longer ignore this monstrous menace to free institutions.

"If we believe in the right of a people to govern themselves unmolested by the dictates of arbitrary power; if we believe in the institutions of our own government and all they mean to us; if we believe in self-preservation, in a peace that shall not make the world an armed camp, it is our duty to prosecute this war, to uphold the national arm until a lasting and honorable peace can be had, based upon these rights.

"Are we as a nation willing to subscribe to a doctrine that will set back the wheels of government for five hundred years? It would be a blot on the history of our country and the history of civilization to consider it for a single day.

Free Speech and License.

"I have no quarrel with the senator in his quotation from a long line of statesmen reserving to themselves the option to express themselves on the right of the country to engage in war, including Webster, Lincoln, and John Fox. Our land was not filled with German spies, spreading strife, discord, and anarchy, and plotting with foreign nations. They were not engaged in the mightiest conflict the world has ever seen to maintain the principles of eternal justice.

"I refer the senator from Wisconsin to President Wilson's letter to the Ohio agitators. I am as jealous of the right of free speech as any member of this body or any citizen of this land. It is a right acquired by the struggles of our ancestors for 700 years, and immutably fixed in our written constitution, and I believe that the freedom of speech and the freedom of the press are absolutely necessary to human liberty.

"But this is a question of erroneous statement of facts rather than of free speech.

"I have no right or wish to criticize any man who voted against this nation going to war, although I may disagree with him, but, sir, we are at war, and I believe men of this body, men of influence, should not make statements tending to aid and encourage the enemy and to cast dishonor and discredit upon our prosecution of the war and sustaining the justice of the cause of the German empire.

"Could these people be blamed for believing in a cause, however lacking in justice and right, if these are the reasons which led us into this great conflict, and sustain us through its trying ordeal?"

Denounced by Robinson.

Senator Robinson of Arkansas followed Senator Kellogg.

"The senator from Wisconsin," Senator Robinson said, "seems to me strangely inconsistent in insisting upon his right under the constitutional guaranty of free speech to declare in substance that this government has entered upon war for no just cause, and to assail the executive department of the government for its manner of conducting this conflict, to assail the legislative branch of the government for their failure to perform its alleged duty, and even to attack the courts of the United States for their failure to protect the citizens of this country in the enjoyment of their constitutional rights.

"If it is the right of a senator of the United States to speak freely upon topics of this character, why should the senator from Wisconsin or any other senator entertaining these views denounce newspaper men and other citizens of this country who, in the exercise of the same right of free thought and free speech, have declared that the senator ought to abandon his seat in the United States senate and seek membership in the German bundesrath?

Lincoln and Webster.

"The senator from Wisconsin has sought to justify his attitude in this debate upon the record of Abraham Lincoln and Daniel Webster. It may be recalled that Mr. Lincoln, who introduced the resolution denouncing and criticizing his government for entering the Mexican war and for its manner of conducting that conflict, was defeated for re-election by an Illinois constituent.

"Daniel Webster is not remembered, his name does not linger in the memory of millions of American citizens, because of the act of which the senator from Wisconsin has spoken today, because of his criticism of his government for entering the Mexican war; but Daniel Webster will live as long as men love liberty in the hearts of the American people because he stood in this sacred presence many years ago and declared himself for the preservation of his country and the maintenance of his flag.

Says Senate Should Quit.

"It is a singular thing to me, that a senator of the United States should consume two and a half or three hours in denouncing his government and have not one word for that flag, not one word to utter for the commander in chief of the armies of the United States, not one word to express encouragement of the men who have already been sent to the far-stretched battle fronts of Europe, and who are now upholding with their lives, the honor, the dignity, the safety of this great nation.

"If it is a privilege of free speech for senators to test the patience of their colleagues and the patience of the citizens of this nation, it is equally a right of other citizens, in the exercise of free speech, to criticize the conduct of senators.

"If I entertained the sentiments which the senator from Wisconsin has expressed in this presence this morning I would not wait for the United States senate to pass upon the question of my loyalty or disloyalty. I would seek the companionship of those whom my discussions and my sentiments are calculated to support.

Speech at St. Paul.

"The senator from Minnesota [Mr. Kellogg] has discussed an address credited to the senator from Wisconsin made in St. Paul some days ago. In that address the senator from Wisconsin is charged with saying that the United States went to war for the purpose of vindicating the right of venturesome citizens to ride on passenger vessels transporting ammunition. I want to know from senators now assembled whether they believe that that is a frank exercise of the right of free speech.

"The senator from Wisconsin is one of the best informed men in the United States senate. I want to know from you, sirs, whether or not you believe that that was a statement of the sentiments of the senator from Wisconsin.

"If he believes that the United States is involved in this conflict for that cause or if he believes that that is the principal cause which brought the United States into this conflict, his attitude is justified; but where does he get his information?

Forced Into the War.

"The whole speech of the senator from Wisconsin is based upon the erroneous assumption that the United States declared war against Germany and forced war on her. We did no such thing. The United States recognized a state of war which had already been existing between the United States and Germany for many months, for some years; and that state of war was brought about by the brutal, lawless disregard of the German government of the rights of American citizens and of the sovereignty of this great nation; and a senator who can find it in his heart to say, here or elsewhere, that the United States went to war for a trivial cause is, to say the least, lacking in information which a senator should possess.

"The senator, during the course of his address, referred to the failure of the courts to protect citizens of the United States in the exercise of their rights as citizens.

"I was astounded when, at the very beginning of his address, he made the statement that government agencies, acting under the authority of the executive, are invading the private homes of the citizens, are arresting and confining citizens, innocent and loyal American citizens, in jail without warrant and without cause; that they are violating every private and sacred right of the people of this government.

"I say to you that, while I cannot find language within the rules of the senate to appropriately characterize the sentiments uttered on this floor this morning by the senator from Wisconsin, if I entertained those sentiments I would not think I had the right to retain a seat on the floor of the United States senate. I would apply to the kaiser for a seat in the bundesrath."

ATTACK BY ROBINSON

Senator Robinson was in a fighting mood when he arose and plunged directly into his denunciation of the Wisconsin man.

"The correct construction of that language," Senator Robinson said, "is that it is designed to prevent the allies, in case of victory, from compelling Germany to indemnify Belgium for the misery and desolation which she has so lawlessly brought to that kingdom, for the wreck and ruin which has followed in the path of the German armies as they lawlessly invaded the kingdom of Belgium.

"It will be remembered that at the outbreak of the war Germany invaded both Belgium and France. She justified her invasion of Belgium on the ground of alleged military necessity, and the kaiser promised indemnity at the end of the war. He recognized that he was violating international law. He recognized that he was tearing up statutes and denouncing them as mere scraps of paper. He said that in order to carry out the military purpose of the German army it was necessary to violate the sovereignty of Belgium and to invade her, and that when the war was over they would make reparation for that damage.

Acted on False Claim.

"Germany violated the sovereignty of France. What was the excuse given for the invasion of France? She said French aviators had dropped bombs on the Nuremberg railway line. That statement, just as the statement about munitions on the Lusitania, was proved to be false. The German who gave that evidence and made that affidavit concerning the Lusitania to Von Bernstorff afterward pleaded guilty to perjury. German agencies of high authority have denounced the statement that French aviators before the outbreak of the war dropped bombs on the German railway lines as equally false.

"It will be remembered that the Franco-Prussian war of 1871 was precipitated by the false telegram of Ems, sent by Count von Bismarck. So, in this war, Germany invaded Belgium and France in violation of the law of nations.

"I have not language nor time to recite the many brutalities imposed upon the people of Belgium by the German army. If I could command your attention and express these outrages in language that would accurately define them your blood would boil in horror. I shall not speak of German wrongs against foreign nations. I shall speak of German wrongs against the United States, which the senator from Wisconsin and every other senator here have sworn to vindicate.

Great Fund of Corruption.

"The senator from Wisconsin has insisted that the United States ought now to declare the purposes of this war and the terms of peace. The answer to that, Mr. President, is that that is exactly what the kaiser wants. The authorities of this government now have proof that more than $27,000,000 has been spent by representatives of the German government in carrying on that propaganda; and it is unfortunate for the country and unfortunate for the senator from Wisconsin that he has lent himself, his great talents, and his services to the promulgation of the ideas and theories and desires of the kaiser.

"It is not only true that the traffic in munitions, as conducted by citizens of the United States with the respective belligerents in this war prior to our entry into the war, was entirely consistent with the law of nations but it would have been suicidal for the United States to have estopped itself of the ability to secure munitions from other governments in case of war with a foreign foe by declaring the policy that citizens of neutrals shall not sell munitions to belligerents in time of war.

"It is well known that the United States at the outbreak of this war was one of the smallest nations in the manufacture of munitions. It was well known that Germany was the greatest munitions making country in the world; and for the United States to have lent itself to this German propaganda of forbidding the sale by American citizens of munitions to the allies would have been to deny herself the right of self-defense in case of war with Germany.

Millions for Spies.

"The senator from Wisconsin has characterized as diabolical the acts of the executive department of this government in making investigations of those who were suspected of being disloyal to the country. He has said that every private right guaranteed to the citizen by the constitution is being invaded by the agents of the government of the United States.

"It may be true, Mr. President, that in some instances unnecessary investigations have been made, but I suspect that if the senator from Wisconsin would produce his evidence here, those who made the affidavits to which he has referred in condemnation o fhis government are German sympathizers, and some of them German spies.

Millions Paid to Spies.

"Mr. President, the expenditure of millions of dollars by the German government in the United States, the hiring of countless agents, the placing throughout this land of numerous spies, has made necessary activity upon the part of the department of justice and other agencies of this government in order to protect our country and our people against the iniquitous schemes and devices of those German hirelings.

"Let the senator from Wisconsin and others be not deceived. The great majority of the American people are loyal. Loyal to that flag, loyal to the men in the trenches and in the camps; loyal to the president of the United States in every effort to conduct this war to a successful termination; and neither slackers, traitors, nor spies can prevent the consummation of that act. If I had my way about it, every spy proved to be such would be executed, and every German hireling in the United States would be placed in jail.

When to Talk Peace.

"We pray for peace. We will make peace. When? When the army of the kaiser is rolled back to Berlin; when from the fields and homes of France arises the shout of victory; when bleeding Belgium begins to arise from her desolation and cries, 'Glory! Glory! Liberty! Liberty!' through the combined forces of civilization and liberty, through the power and wrath of the American people.

"God pity the man who comes in the way of his wrath. God have mercy on the men who would paralyze the arm of American power in this great conflict, because the American people will show him no mercy.

"Now, the kaiser and the senator from Wisconsin talking about wanting no war of conquest, wanting a guarantee from the United States and our allies that, whatever the result, we will neither profit by nor make recompense, and at the same time leaving Germany to enjoy the fruits of her victory if she can obtain them. That may be free speech. A senator can say it, a fool can utter it, but it is not patriotic Americanism.

War Cause Holy One.

"If ever there was a holy war, this is one. Every wrong and outrage that human ingenuity can conceive Germany sought to perpetrate on the United States, and the longer we waited to resent it, in the hope that peace might be maintained, the greater was the outrage perpetrated.

"We realized that unless we recognized the state of war which we had forced upon us nearly three years ago and did our best to join with the allies in defeating Germany, when peace had come to Europe, when the allies had settled back to their normal activities, Germany, carrying out her plans conceived before the war began, would have come to the United States and have demanded tribute from this government, and then, on American soil, we would have had a conflict which would have excelled in its bitterness and barbarism anything that human history recalls.

"It is better for the American army to go to France and fight them than to wait until the war is over and invite Germany to attack us here at home. Let him who doubts this declaration look for a moment on bleeding Belgium and prostrate Poland.

"If men can find it in their hearts let them declare that the United States ought to wait until the war is over in Europe and then fight Germany here. But the moment we make that declaration in exercising the right of free speech let them move and move hastily across the line into German territory.

"It is no time to talk peace when the Hun is at your gate. It is no time to talk peace when the Hun is boasting of his victory. The time to talk peace is when the armies of France, Russia, Britain, and the United States are driving the enemy back across the Rhine and making Germany feel what ruthless warfare means, imposing on the German people some of the burdens which have fallen on France and Poland and Belgium.

Why Britain Struck.

"Some have said and the spirit of the address of the senator from Wisconsin has been that we are in an unholy and questionable alliance with Great Britain and France. I have been amazed at the description of the sacrifice, the resolution with which the British people have made this contest. At the beginning of the war Great Britain was totally unprepared, and it is the best proof that she was not expecting a conflict with Germany. On the other hand, for fifty years Germany has been arming and training and preparing for the great conflict.

"They had been looking out and investigating to see how they could best strike France and Britain, and the United States. England was resting in fancied security. When Germany invaded Belgium and France and England went to the rescue, not alone from a spirit of humanity and patriotism against outrages that were being perpetrated, but with the knowledge that it was necessary to do so in order to preserve their own existence, what did gallant France do? You may read human history from the beginning until now, and you will never find a record of a braver struggle than the French people have made."

"DANGEROUS DOCTRINE." —FALL.

Messrs. La Follette, Kellogg and Robinson had consumed so much time that there were only a few minutes remaining when Senator Fall arose.

Pointing his finger at Senator La Follette, Senator Fall said:

"Utterances that are proper at one time are not proper now. If the senator in the exercise of his freedom of speech embarrasses the administration in carrying on the war, the senator in my judgment is not exercising his constitutional rights. The senator makes this mistake. Some sincere people become convinced that they are the only honorable people.

"No more dangerous doctrine could have been preached and no more insidious utterance could have been heard from any source than those by the senator from Wisconsin, in my judgment. I refer to his St. Paul speech."

La Follette Makes Plea.

Senator La Follette at this point attempted to reply to the attacks made on him.

"I had hoped," he said, "to have an opportunity to produce my authority for the statements made in the St. Paul speech, but, as I cannot have that chance, I shall have to make my statements in another place and at another time."

Mr. Fall had scarcely regained the floor and renewed his address when the time agreed upon for adjournment was reached. Mr. Fall ceased speaking. The whole house and galleries arose and the session ended with members and spectators united in singing patriotic airs.

LA FOLLETTE DEFIES "CLAMOR OF THE MOB"

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 6.—(Special.)—In his speech in the senate today Mr. La Follette said:

"I have no intention of taking the time of the senate with a review of the events which led to our entrance into the war except in so far as they bear upon the question of personal privilege to which I am addressing myself.

"Six members of the senate and, as I recall, about fifty members of the house, voted against the declaration of war. Immediately there was let loose upon those senators and representatives a flood of invective and abuse from newspapers and individuals who had been clamoring for war, unequaled, I believe, in the history of civilized society.

"Prior to the declaration of war every man who had ventured to oppose our entrance into it had been condemned as a coward or worse, and even the president had by no means been immune from these attacks.

Calls Attack Libelous.

"Since the declaration of war, the triumphant war party has pursued these senators and representatives who voted against war with malicious falsehood and recklessly libelous attacks, going to the extreme limit of charging them with treason against their country.

"This campaign of libel and character assassination directed against the members of congress who opposed our entrance into the war has been continued down to the present hour, and I have upon my desk newspaper clippings, some of them libels against me alone, some directed as well against other senators who voted against the declaration of war. One of these newspaper reports most widely circulated represents a federal judge as saying in a charge to a grand jury, that certain distinguished senators, among whom I have the honor to be included, 'should be stood up against a wall and given what they deserve'—implying of course, that we should be shot.

"Accused Without Evidence."

"If this were a single or exceptional instance of lawless defamation, I should not trouble the senate with a reference to it. But, Mr. President, it is not.

"In these newspaper clippings which I have here, and which I shall not trouble the senate to read, unless it is desired, I find other senators, as well as myself, accused of the highest crimes of which any man can be guilty—treason and disloyalty—and, sir, accused not only with no evidence to support the accusation but without the suggestion that such evidence anywhere exists.

"If I alone had been made the victim of these attacks, I should not take one moment of the senate's time for their consideration, and I believe that other senators who have been unjustly and unfairly assailed, as I have been, hold the same attitude upon this that I do. Neither the clamor of the mob nor the voice of power will ever turn me by the breadth of a hair from the course I mark out for myself, guided by such knowledge as I can obtain, and controlled and directed by a solemn conviction of right and duty.

People Being Terrorized.

"But, sir, it is not alone the members of congress that the war party in this country has sought to intimidate. The mandate has gone forth to the sovereign people of this country that they must be silent while those things are being done by their government which most vitally concern their well being, their happiness, and their lives. Today and for weeks past honest and law abiding citizens of this country are being terrorized and outraged in their rights by those sworn to uphold the laws and protect the rights of the people.

"I have in my possession numerous affidavits establishing the fact that people are being unlawfully arrested, thrown into jail, held incommunicado for days, only eventually to be discharged without ever having been taken into court, because they have committed no crime. Private residences are being invaded, loyal citizens of undoubted integrity and probity arrested, cross-examined, and the most sacred constitutional rights guaranteed to every American citizen are being continually violated.

People Should Control.

"It appears to be the purpose of those conducting this campaign to throw the country into a state of terror, to coerce public opinion, to stifle criticism and suppress discussion of the great issues involved in this war.

"I think all men recognize that in time of war the citizen must surrender some rights for the common good which he is entitled to enjoy in time of peace. But, sir, the right to control their own government according to constitutional forms is not one of the rights that the citizens of this country are called upon to surrender in time of war.

"Rather in time of war the citizen must be more alert to the preservation of his right to control his government. He must be most watchful of the encroachment of the military upon the civil power. He must beware of those precedents in support of arbitrary action by administrative officials, which, excused on the plea of necessity in wartime, become the fixed rule when the necessity has passed and normal conditions have been restored.

The Right of Free Speech.

"More than all, the citizen in time of war must maintain his right of free speech. More than in times of peace it is necessary that the channels for free public discussion of government policies shall be open and unclogged.

"I believe, Mr. President, that I am now touching upon the most important question in this country today—and that is the right of the citizens of this country to discuss in an orderly way frankly and publicly and without fear, from the platform and through their publications, every important phase of this war, its causes, the manner in which it should be conducted, and the terms upon which peace should be made. The belief which is becoming widespread in this land that this most fundamental right is being denied to the citizens of this country is a fact the tremendous significance of which those in authority have not yet begun to appreciate.

People's Voice Should Be Heard.

"I am contending for the great fundamental right of the sovereign people of this country to make their voices heard and have that voice heeded upon the great questions arising out of this war, including not only how the war shall be prosecuted, but the conditions upon which it may be terminated, with a due regard for the rights and the honor of this nation and the interest of humanity.

"I am contending for this right because the exercise of it is necessary to the welfare of the government, to the successful conduct of this war, and to a peace which shall be enduring and for the best interest of this country when established. Suppose you succeed in stifling all discussion of the issues of this war, all discussion of the terms upon which it should be concluded, all discussion of the objects and purposes to be accomplished by it, and concede the demand of the war mad press and war extremists that they monopolize the right of public utterance upon these questions unchallenged, what think you would be the consequences to this country, not only during the war, but after the war?

Flays Allies' Trade Pact.

"I cite just one instance in the present European war. The entente allies assembled at 'the Paris conference' with the war feeling at white heat. They entered into a compact of commercial vengeance, to be executed against the central powers after peace should be declared. I believe that no single act has done so much to solidify the resistance of the central powers and secure the determined support of their peoples as this one act of the entente allies. The people of the central powers reason, and reason not incorrectly, that if they are to face commercial slavery and starvation after the war they may as well die fighting in the war.

"Mr. President, our government, above all others, is founded upon the right of the people to freely discuss all matters pertaining to their government, in war not less than in peace, for in this government the people are the rulers, in war no less than in peace.

"Any man who seeks to set a limit upon these rights, whether in war or peace, aims a blow at the most vital part of our government. And before this great fundamental right every other must, if necessary, give way, for in no other manner can representative government be preserved.

"Mr. President, what I have said has been exemplified in the lives and public discussion of the ablest statesmen of this country, whose memories we most revere and whose deeds we most justly commemorate.

Lincoln's War Attitude.

"I shall presently ask the attention of the senate to the views of these men upon the subject we are now considering. Closely related to this subject of the right of the citizen to discuss war is that of the constitutional power and duty of the congress to declare the purposes and objects of any war in which our country may be engaged.

"Abraham Lincoln was a member of congress at the time of the Mexican war. He strongly opposed the war while it was in progress, and severely criticized President Polk on the floor of the house because he did not state in his message when peace might be expected."

The senator quoted Sumner's appeal for cessation of the Mexican war and then added:

"Contrast this position taken by Charles Sumner at the Tremont Temple with that of the secretary of the treasury, Mr. McAdoo. He is now touring the country with all the prestige of his great financial mission and the authority of his high place in the administration.

Takes Fling at McAdoo.

"I quote the language of the authorized report of his speech before the Bankers' Association of West Virginia. According to daily press reports he is making substantially this same denunciation in all his addresses:

"'America intends that those well meaning but misguided people who talk inopportunely of peace when there can be no peace until the cancer which has rotted civilization in Europe is extinguished and destroyed forever shall be silenced. I want to say here and now, and with due deliberation that every pacifist speech in this country made at this inopportune and improper time is in effect traitorous.'"

Mr. La Follette then quoted at length Daniel Webster's opposition to the Mexican war.

Tells of Other War Critics.

"Lincoln, Webster, Clay, Sumner—what a galaxy of names in American history!" the senator exclaimed. "They all believed and asserted and advocated in the midst of war that it was the right—the constitutional right—and the patriotic duty of American citizens, after the declaration of war and while the war was in progress, to discuss the issues of the war and to criticise the policies employed in its prosecution, and to work for the election of representatives opposed to prolonging war.

"The right of Lincoln, Webster, Clay, and Sumner to oppose the Mexican war, criticise its conduct, advocate its conclusion on a just basis, is exactly the same right and privilege as that possessed by each and every American citizen in our land today in respect to the war in which we are now engaged. Their arguments as to the power of congress to shape the war policy and their opposition to what they believed to be the usurpation of power on the part of the executive are potent so long as the constitution remains the law of the land."

Free Speech Not New.

Then La Follette delved into English history, citing Lloyd George's opposition to the Boer war and his charges that the British committed atrocities.

"Mr. President," he continued, "I have made these quotations from some of the leading statesmen of England to show the people that free speech was no new doctrine born of the constitution of the United States. Our constitution merely declared the principle. It did not create it. It is a heritage of English speaking peoples which has been won by incalculable sacrifice, and which they must preserve so long as they hope to live as free men.

"I say without fear of contradiction that there has never been a time for more than a century and a half when the right of free speech and free press and the right of the people to peaceably assemble for public discussion, has been so violated among English speaking people as they are violated today throughout the United States.

Breaking Up Peace Meetings.

"Today in the land we have been wont to call the free United States governors, mayors, policemen, and even the new fledged soldier in his first khaki are preventing or breaking up peaceable meetings called to discuss the questions growing out of this war and judges and courts, with some notable exceptions, are failing to protect their citizens in their rights.

"It is no answer to say that when the war is over the citizen may once more resume his rights and feel some security in his liberty and his person. As I have already tried to point out, now is precisely the time when the country needs the counsel of all its citizens. In time of war even more than in time of peace, whether citizens happen to agree with the ruling administration or not, these precious fundamental personal rights—free speech, free press, and right of assemblage so explicitly and emphatically guaranteed by the constitution, should be maintained inviolable. There is no rebellion in the land, no martial law, no courts are closed, no legal processes suspended, and there is no threat even of invasion.

Congress Must Keep Power.

"This leads me, Mr. President, to the next thought to which I desire to invite the attention of the senate, and that is the power of congress to declare the purpose and objects of the war, and the failure of congress to exercise that power in the present crisis. I believe that had congress exercised the power in this respect which I contend it possesses, we could and probably would have avoided the present war. I believe that if we are to extricate ourselves from this war and restore this country to an honorable and lasting peace congress must exercise in full the war powers intrusted to it by the constitution."

Mr. La Follete analyzed the war powers of congress and the executive beginning with the debates in the constitutional convention. He contended that congress had surrendered to the executive in declaring war on Germany.

No Time for Shirking Duty.

"A minor duty may be evaded by congress, a minor responsibility avoided without disaster resulting, but on this momentous question there can be no evasion, no shirking of duty of the congress, without subverting our form of government," he continued. "If our constitution is to be changed so as to give the president the power to determine the purposes for which this nation will engage in war, and the conditions on which it will make peace, then let that change be made deliberately by an amendment to the constitution, proposed and adopted in a constitutional manner.

"The universal conviction of those who yet believe in the rights of the people is that the first step toward the prevention of war and the establishment of peace, permanent peace, is to give the people, who must bear the brunt of war's awful burden, more to say about it. The masses will understand that it was the evil of a one-man power exercised in a half dozen nations through the malevolent influences of a system of secret diplomacy that plunged the helpless peoples of Europe into the awful war that has been raging with increasing horror and fury ever since it began and that now threatens to engulf the world before it stops.

"No conviction is stronger with the people today that there should be no future wars except in case of actual invasion, unless supported by a referendum, a plebiscite, a vote of ratification upon the declaration of war before it should become effective.

Refers to Army Draft.

"The president has asked the German people to speak for themselves on this great world issue. Why should not the American people voice their convictions through their chosen representatives in congress?

"Ever since new Russia appeared on the map she has been holding out her hands to free America to come to her support in declaring for a clear understanding of the objects to be attained to secure peace. Shall we let this most remarkable revolution the world has ever witnessed appeal to us in vain?

"We have been six months at war. We have incurred financial obligations and made expenditures of money in amounts already so large that the human mind cannot comprehend them. The government has drafted from the peaceful occupations of civil life a million of our finest young men—and more will be taken if necessary—to be transported 4,000 miles over the sea with their equipment and supplies to the trenches of Europe.

Pictures War's Horrors.

"To such excesses of cruelty has this war descended that each nation is now, as a part of its strategy, planning to starve the women and children of the enemy countries. Each warring nation is carrying out the unspeakable plan of starving noncombatants. Each nurses the hope that it may break the spirit of the men of the enemy country at the front by starving the wives and babies at home, and woe be it that we have become partners in this awful business and are even cutting off food shipments from neutral countries in order to force them to help starve women and children of the country against whom we have declared war.

"The question is, are we to sacrifice millions of our young men—the very promise of the land—and spend billions and more billions, and pile up the cost of living until we starve—not for a peace without victory but for a peace, so far as we are yet advised, satisfactory to the allies? Shall the fearfully overburdened people of this country continue to bear the brunt of prolonged war for any objects not openly stated and defined?

"The answer, sir, rests, in my judgment, with the congress, whose duty it is to declare our specific purposes in the present war and to state the objects upon the attainment of which we will make peace."

Right to Own Opinion.

Departing from his prepared speech, Senator La Follette said:

"American citizens may hold all shades of opinion as to the war; one citizen may glory in it, another may deplore it; each has the same right to voice his judgment. An American citizen may think and say that we are not justified in prosecuting this war for the purpose of dictating the form of government which shall be maintained by our enemy—or our ally—and not be subject to punishment at law.

"He may cry aloud that our boys shall not be sent to fight and die on European battlefields for the annexation of territory or the maintenance of trade agreements, and be within his legal rights. He may express the hope that an early peace may be secured on the terms set forth by the new Russia and President Wilson in his speech of Jan. 22, and he cannot lawfully be sent to jail for the expression of his convictions.

Hint of Revolution.

"It is the citizen's duty to obey the law until it is repealed or declared unconstitutional. But he has the inalienable right to fight what he deems an obnoxious law or a wrongful policy in the courts and at the ballot box.

"It is the suppressed emotion of the masses that breeds revolution.

"If the American people are to carry on this great war; if public opinion is to be enlightened and intelligent, there must be free discussion.

"Gradually, reluctantly, congress and the public are beginning to perceive that we are in this terrific world conflict, not only to right our wrongs, not only to aid the allies, not only to share its awful death toll, and its fearful tax burdens, but, perhaps, to bear the brunt of the war."

Manualo
THE PLAYER-PIANO THAT IS ALL BUT HUMAN
THE INSTRUMENT YOU WERE BORN TO PLAY

requires only the application of the musical feeling that is born in all of us to play for you as satisfactorily and as sympathetically as it plays for the artist who performs by hand. Your musical wishes instinctively expressed to its pedals make it respond as fully as if you were playing upon its keys. Through the Manualo you enjoy the sensation of really playing a musical instrument. You never think that you are operating a machine.

The Manualo satisfies everybody who plays it. Every member of your family would enjoy it immensely, from the youngest who can reach the pedals to those who ordinarily might think themselves too old to play a musical instrument. Come in and try it, and bring some of your folks to try it, too.

Wisconsin Acts to End Combine of 5,000 Producers.

Direct evidence that the milk board forced the distributor companies to "kick in" the new milk price of $3.42 per hundred pounds, raising milk to 13 cents a quart in Chicago, was offered yesterday when the state of Wisconsin brought suit against 100 members of the Milk Producers' association in an action to break the alleged conspiracy.

Here is the copy of a letter from C. H. Potter, chairman of the milk board, advising secretaries of association locals that the Borden company had acceded to the demand for a higher rate. It is filed as a portion of the complaint:

"Dear Sir: The Borden Dairy company has notified us that they will pay our price of $3.42 per cwt. for the month of October, delivered at their plants in the country, and we hereby instruct that the milk of your local be released to this company. You will notify your members.

"Respectfully,
"The Milk Board,
"C. H. Potter,
"Chairman."

5,000 Men Involved.

The suits have been filed in Racine county and affect all of the 5,000 members of the Milk Producers' association in that portion of Wisconsin in the Chicago district, an estimated radius of 75 miles from Chicago. The suits were filed by Attorney General Walter Owen, Deputy Attorney General Walter Drew, and District Attorney V. H. Whaley, of Racine county. Violations of the new state anti-trust law are alleged in that the producers have united for the purpose of forcing upward the price of foodstuffs.

The State's Demands.

That the Milk Producers' association is adjudged a conspiracy in restraint of trade.

That the activities of the association and its locals be dissolved.

That all contracts be declared null and void and their makers be barred from enforcing them.

That the producers be enjoined from participating in a boycott.

In Court This Week.

One of the first demands to be heard by Judge E. B. Belden is that on a temporary injunction and is returnable on Oct. 12. It is declared by the attorneys for the state that many of the 5,000 members of forty-four Wisconsin locals probably will be brought into court.

Under a Wisconsin statute which permits questioning to determine if there is cause for action under the anti-trust laws the attorneys discoverd that the headquarters of the association are in Chicago and that each member pays $2.50 a year dues—$1.50 to be diverted to the purposes of the general offices and the remaining $1 for the expenses of the local.

Much of the direct evidence of an alleged conspiracy is in the form of letters and documents seized. Orders to the Wisconsin locals seem to have been sent from the milk board, which is the governing standing committee of the association.

Letter in Evidence.

One of the so-called price fixing letters follows. It was addressed to all secretaries and presidents of locals:

"At the directors' and delegates' conference held in Chicago Sept. 21, 1917, it was voted to make a price for the month of October only. The months of November, December, January, February, and March, to be adjusted later, awaiting the action of the food administration in regard to feed. The price per can for October is $2.54, F. O. B. Chicago. Contracts are being printed and will be mailed to you on Monday or Tuesday, the 24th or 25th."

This was signed by W. J. Kittle, secretary of the Milk Producers' association. The attorneys for the state point out that the price of $2.54 per can refers to a can containing two-thirds of 100 pounds and therefore on the scale of $3.54 per 100 pounds.

Slugging Charged.

State's Attorney Hoyne's milk investigation, which now has become a triangular affair, was confined yesterday to the probing into the records of the milk wagon drivers' union and the books of the three milk concerns whose offices were raided by Assistant State's Attorney Nicholas Michels on Friday.

The assistant state's attorney said that he had found a copy of the minutes of the meeting of the wagon drivers' union which disclosed the names of the men who assisted in slugging. Mr. Michels refused to say what prompted the union to resort to slugging or to make public the names of the alleged assailants or their victims.

One of the notations found in the diary of Steve Sumner, secretary and business agent of the milk drivers' union, which was taken from the secretary's home, reads:

"September 24, 1917—4:30 met dealers at La Salle hotel. L. Rosen did 38½ Dowd 33."

This meeting, according to Mr. Michels, was held three days after the price of milk was raised by the Milk Producers' association, and is taken as important evidence in establishing the connecting link between the dealers and the union. Mr. Hoyne's aid said he had considerable evidence indicating such a combine.

Excerpts from Diary.

Mr. Michels also gave out additional excerpts taken from the business agent's diary:

"March 22—Baldwin sentenced me to seventy days in jail. No fine. Took an appeal. The girls and Sol Siedman two terms in jail, all took appeals and gave bonds. We are like political prisoners of Russia, sent to jail for free speech.

"March 23—Too sick to work. Got in Baldwin's court. Air as bad as the judge—foul.

"Dec. 15, 1916—Had strike on 4170 Drexel; the landlord would not allow but one milkman in building; by 5 o'clock they agreed to let all in.

"April 6, 1917—Took in O. P. from Fortieth west on Price success. The gamblers tried to put Pa Grimsley off watch; nothing doing. Board meeting until long after midnight."

"May 8, 1917—Five dealers joined the C. M. D. A. today. I settled three store disputes, got four drivers in union and five dealers in association."

Sumner Explains Book.

"The book of mine that was taken by State's Attorney Hoyne's men is simply a little note book in which I jotted down memoranda of what I had done during the day," said Steve Sumner last night. "I wrote it and have nothing to conceal.

"There seems to be some confusion over my reference to dealers. The dealers I referred to are the men who own one wagon and drive it themselves. I have got about 200 of them to join. They are members of the Chicago Milk Dealers' association, which is an entirely different organization from the Illinois Milk Dealers, to which Bowman's, Borden's and the other big concerns belong.

"The union men would much rather have prices low, as they work on commissions.

"If State's Attorney Hoyne really wishes to help out the milk situation, he can do a good work by stopping the loss on bottles. About $1,000,000 a year is lost in this way."

"The 'C. M. D. A.' mentioned in Sumner's diary is not the Illinois Milk Dealers' organization," said Guy Guernsey, attorney for Sidney Wanzer & Sons. "The large dealers all belong to the Illinois, not the Chicago association."

WAR CAKES

Here Is Recipe for Corn Flapjacks That Will Melt in Your Mouth.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 6.—[Special.]—Order a "stack of corn" or a "stack of kaffir" instead of a "stack of wheat" cakes at the hotel or restaurant! Pancakes made of corn or kaffir corn or one of these grains with a little wheat flour are fully as palatable and nutritious as cakes made of wheat only, food specialists of the United States department of agriculture say. Millions of wheat cakes are consumed at the American breakfast table every morning. Get the "stack of corn" habit and save the wheat.

Corn cakes with sirup are appetizing and satisfying. The following recipe is recommended:

CORNMEAL PANCAKES.

One cup cornmeal; one cup flour (wheat); two teaspoons baking powder; one teaspoon salt; one-half tablespoon sugar; one tablespoon melted butter; one egg; one cup milk.

6 YEAR TERMS IN DRAFT TRIALS

Enid, Okla., Oct. 6.—Maximum penalties of a sentence of six years in the federal prison at Leavenworth and a fine of $1,000 today were given to each of the eight men convicted of conspiracy to resist the selective draft law. Eight of the eleven defendants in the so-called Working Class union and "Jones Family" case were found guilty yesterday. The others were acquitted.

A motion for a new trial was overruled.

The defendants were given ninety days in which to file bills of exception and were allowed bond in the sum of $15,000 each.

Maj. Gen. J. E. Kuhn Will Wed Washington Girl

Washington, D. C., Oct. 6.—[Special.]—The approaching wedding of Maj. Gen. Joseph E. Kuhn, divisional commander of the national army camp at Fort Meade, Annapolis Junction, Md., became known today when George Bond Cochran of this city announced the engagement of his cousin, Miss Helen H. Squier, to Maj. Gen. Kuhn. Both Miss Squier and Maj. Gen. Kuhn are prominent socially here. Maj. Gen. Kuhn served as observer with the German army until Berlin decided its relations with this country were such that it no longer cared to have competent United States observers with its armies.

HEFLIN RAPPED FOR BERNSTORFF 'SLUSH' CHARGES

Committee Finds No Proof of Congress' Disloyalty.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 6.—Qualified censure for Representative Heflin of Alabama for making charges of disloyalty against "thirteen or fourteen" members of congress in connection with the Bernstorff $50,000 slush fund was the burden of the report of the special investigating committee adopted unanimously by the house today.

"While your committee," the report said, "makes no recommendations in the premises, we beg to state it as our opinion that in so far as Mr. Heflin's imputation might fairly be construed to impute disloyal or corrupt motives to any member of congress, notwithstanding the fact that he now denies any intention of conveying any such imputation, his conduct in that respect is subject to criticism.

"But inasmuch as the serious question of disloyalty to our country on the part of some members of the house has been raised by Mr. Heflin, it is the opinion of your committee that the direct and parliamentary course of action would be the instigation by him of proceedings for the expulsion from congress of those whose loyalty he challenges."

Inasmuch as Representative Heflin told the committee, and has told the house, that he has no proof of disloyalty to sustain the charges he made against certain members, and since it was well known in the house that Heflin would not instigate expulsion proceedings, this part of the committee's report was construed as a direct rebuke for Heflin's actions and charges.

INSURANCE FOR U. S. FIGHTERS NOW IN EFFECT

Washington, D. C., Oct. 6.—War insurance for America's soldiers and protection for their dependents will begin at once under the terms of the act signed by President Wilson today.

"It is the most humane and progressive measure introduced in congress since war was declared," Secretary McAdoo said, "because it deals fairly with the families of our soldiers and sailors and with our fighters themselves. It should heighten immeasurably the morale of our army and navy and the civil population back of them.

"From now on men entering the army and navy and those who have already been drafted or volunteered will have the comforting assurance that their loved ones at home will not be dependent upon the fortuitous chances of charity.

"America now fighting to reëstablish justice and liberty throughout the world will begin to treat with adequate justice its own soldiers and sailors."

3 DEAD, 1 HURT IN DRAFT FIGHT

San Antonio, Tex., Oct. 6.—A telephone message from George West, Live Oak county, tonight says that as a result of a two days' effort on the part of the county officials to arrest members of the Loso family, Mexicans, for alleged failure to report for service in the national army, Deputy Sheriff William James and two of the Loso brothers are dead, and Serapio Loso, their father, is fatally wounded.

German Paper in Gotham Refuses Liberty Loan Ads

New York, Oct. 6.—[Special.]—The New Yorker Volkszeitung, a Socialist newspaper published in German, has refused to publish any advertisements of the Liberty loan. Max Weigel, advertising manager, said tonight:

"As Socialists we are opposed to any war measure and are justified in refusing any advertising which would tend to prolong the war. We are justified in working in opposition to the prosecution of the war.

"About two years ago we were offered advertising for the German loan. The publishing association held a meeting and decided against any such advertising. It was under this rule that the copy was refused."

NO LIMIT

Experts Predict Year of War Will Cost United States $20,000,000,000 with Increases as Struggle Goes On.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 6.—[Special.]—Government experts predict that war expenses for the fiscal year 1918-1919 will aggregate a minimum of $20,000,000,000.

This figure is reached on the rough calculation that every million men in the service will cost approximately $7,000,000,000. This figure covers pay, subsistence, transportation, clothing, medical and hospital attention and the supply of arms and ammunition of all calibers.

The custom is to begin the preparation of estimates early in October in order that they may be ready for submission to congress when that body meets the first Monday in December. The expectation is that in addition to the estimates which will be communicated to congress on that date numerous deficiency items will be submitted later.

It is not possible to predict accurately what the expenses of a second year of war will be, since conditions change so quickly at times as to throw all calculations out of line. That the prosecution of the war will become increasingly expensive is generally conceded.

WILSON MASTER MIND OF WORLD, LANE DECLARES

Ogden, Utah, Oct. 6.—"Every man and woman must do their bit, every child can do his part, that those ideals fostered in the long years this nation has been in existence may not be shattered by a ruthless enemy."

Such was the keynote of an address delivered here this afternoon by Franklin K. Lane, secretary of the interior, at a Liberty loan massmeeting.

"I ask you in the name of the president to become financial partners of the United States in this great enterprise—I ask you to become preferred stockholders in Uncle Sam's corporation," Mr. Lane continued. "I ask you to put every dollar you can in Liberty bonds.

"This I ask you in the name of the president, who sits alone in the White House, meeting from day to day the problems of conducting the greatest enterprise upon which this nation has ever engaged. His is the master mind of the world; he is the leader of liberal thought the world round. Place in his hands the power to make the world safe for democracy."

AMERICANS IN GERMANY NOT FORCED IN ARMY

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 6.—A dispatch received here from Berlin says that during a discussion in the reichstag on compulsory service for aliens, Col. Marquardt said that persons without nationality would be called for service only if they settled for good in Germany. There was no question, he added, of calling upon Americans who had lost their nationality owing to the impossibility of obtaining extensions to their passports.

A representative of the ministry of foreign affairs then stated that in certain cases Americans would have to prove they really are Americans.

A resolution introduced by a social democratic member providing that former subjects of enemy states who had lost their nationality without acquiring German nationality should be exempt from military service was adopted by a large majority.

The Republican Assails Foes of La Follette

The Republican pointed out in its yesterday's issue that food prices have advanced 62 per cent since the European war and that wages have gone up but 19 per cent. Editorials in the issue criticized THE TRIBUNE and other newspapers for being against the speeches of United States Senator La Follette.

M'CORMICK SAYS U. S. MUST SPEED UP TO WIN WAR

Congressman Hurries Home from Europe to Push Work.

BY W. S. FORREST.

[UNITED PRESS STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

PARIS, Oct. 6.—Congressman Medill McCormick of Illinois is so impressed with the imperative necessity that America must fight the war with materials as well as with men, that he cut short his trip in Europe today and arranged to hurry back home that he might plead for more speed in war preparations.

"No mere marshaling of men in this war will compensate for any deficiency of organization behind the lines, or the assembling of an almost incredible amount of artillery and of aircraft," Mr. McCormick told the United Press today.

U-Boat Biggest Problem.

"After six weeks' study of the submarine problem, I believe it is still by all odds the most important question facing America and the allies. Of bare second importance, however, is the problem of transport supply.

"My observations indicate that Germany is weakening—despite the Russian collapse. She is on the defensive on all western fronts. But it is necessary to remember that she is fighting on inside lines now, behind pill box defenses."

"Austria Wabbling."

Mr. McCormick's most recent war front trip was to the Italian battle lines.

"The Italians are doing marvelous work," he declared. "It is the allies' duty to coöperate with Italy's campaign to the fullest extent. Italy already has Austria wabbling."

The Illinois representative has been traveling constantly and studying the war for eleven weeks. He has visited every war front in Europe except that in Greece and conferred with all important military and civil officers.

To Give Data to Officials.

Mr. McCormick is convinced that America must concentrate every energy toward the problem of providing unheard quantities of munitions and supplies and of solving the question of transporting them. He will hurry to Washington on his arrival in America, to lay this data before officials.

Veterans' Ball Postponed.

Announcement is made that the reception and ball of the National Veterans' Reserve corps and the Daughters of the Republic which was to have been given on Tuesday evening on the municipal pier, has been postponed for a few days. A new date will be announced.

FRENCH DEPUTY ARRESTED IN BOLO SPY PLOT

German Fund to Use on U. S. Congress May Run Into Millions.

BULLETIN.

PARIS, Oct. 6.—Deputy Turmel, who has been seeking to explain why a large sum of money from Switzerland was found in his rooms in the chamber of deputies, was formally placed under arrest today. His arrest makes the fifth growing out of the famous "Bonnet Rouge" case and Bolo Pasha. The authorities refused specific information as to the charge against Turmel.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 6.—[Special.]—The state department has in its possession documentary evidence that Count von Bernstorff, the former German ambassador, not only was the distributor of a gigantic peace slush fund in this country but directed the operations of Capts. Von Papen and Boy-Ed, the discredited and recalled German military and naval attachés.

The disclosures to be made when the next Bernstorff cipher telegrams are given to the public promise to overshadow the revelations thus far made of Bernstorff's plots to influence congress, his Bolo-Pasha French slush fund, and his part in the Zimmermann intrigue to embroil Mexico and Japan against the United States.

Von Papen and Boy-Ed were banished for their proved connection with plots to destroy munitions-carrying ships, to destroy bridges, cause strikes in munitions factories, and other criminal activities.

Was Congress Fund $5,000,000?

Bernstorff repudiated the actions of the envoys and insisted they received orders from the German war office and admiralty. Now it develops that he was the guiding spirit in these intrigues and the documentary evidence will show his as the master hand.

The $50,000 fund which Bernstorff asked from his government to be used in influencing congress grew today when it became known that figures in the German code frequently were to be multiplied by ten or 100. It has not been officially admitted that this multiplication system was applied to the Bernstorff request for $50,000, but it was plainly seen that if this was the case the sum Bernstorff asked was $500,000 or $5,000,000.

Responsibility for acting as the medium of communication between Bernstorff and Von Jagow in the request for the $1,700,000 slush fund exposed yesterday appeared today to rest on the Swedish foreign office and the Swedish envoys in either Buenos Aires or Mexico City.

Courier Sent to Sweden.

Secretary Lansing absolved the Swedish legation in Washington from blame, but he limited his absolving statement to the legation here.

Baron Akerhielm, counselor of the Swedish legation in Washington, has been sent to Stockholm as courier from the Swedish legation on an unannounced mission, the purpose of which it is believed is to advise his government of the angry feeling aroused in North and South America by the revelations of Sweden's alleged duplicity in furthering plots of Bernstorff and Luxburg.

Tells of Bolo Deal.

New York, Oct. 6.—New York's probe into the Bolo Pasha affair dovetailed precisely tonight into the state department's revelations of German Ambassador von Bernstorff's anxious interchange of messages early in 1916 with German Foreign Secretary von Jagow. Deputy Attorney General Becker in a lengthy examination of Adolph Pavenstedt, German banker, established the fact that the "leading political personality," mentioned by Von Bernstorff, was Bolo Pasha, the French intriguer.

Pavenstedt detailed numerous conferences which he had with Von Bernstorff at Washington and at the Plaza and Ritz Carlton hotels in New York, in Bolo Pasha's scheme to corrupt the French press. He said he gave Bernstorff full information concerning Bolo Pasha's purchase of an interest in Humbert's newspaper, L'Journal, of Paris.

He said he gave Bolo Pasha the password, "Sanct Regis," by which, according to the Bernstorff cables, the renegade was to get into touch with the German foreign office through the kaiser's minister in Switzerland.

Diamonds Are Cheaper Now

Experts say that not for years—perhaps ever—will diamond prices again be so low.

Diamond mining has practically ceased. The famous Roberts Victor and many other South African diamond mines are full of water since they stopped working at beginning of war. The supply of fine diamonds on hand is diminishing.

The expense of pumping out the mines and sinking new shafts when war ends will be enormous. Skilled labor will be scarce. Heavy war duties must be added.

This crisis finds us prepared. Our stock of perfect blue gems from the Roberts Victor mines has no equal west of New York.

Each gem has been personally selected. And mountings so beautiful—so well adapted to display to the utmost advantage the beauty and character of the stone—could only be originated by experts.

Prices range, according to size, from $250.00 per carat up to $600.00. Self interest urges you to make an early selection.

BIG GUN DUELS HOLD BOARDS ON FLANDERS LINE

Germans Quit Advanced Posts Under Blows of Haig's Artillery.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Big gun actions are in progress along the Flanders front, with indications that the Germans, as usual in this form of combat, are playing the secondary rôle.

Field Marshal Haig's report on Friday night's activities mentions only the increased fire from the German artillery, failing to reveal what his own gunners are about, the statement recording additionally only the fact that there was no infantry movement by the Germans during the night except by a raiding party in the vicinity of Hollebeke, which was driven off.

Germans Quit Advanced Posts.

Press reports, however, show that the Germans are suffering heavily from the effects of the British artillery fire. Some of the advanced positions to which they were still clinging after Thursday's attack have become too hot to hold under the British pounding, and from these the German lines have been withdrawn somewhat, British reconnoitering parties finding them evacuated.

The overwhelming nature of the British fire employed in the present offensive is being paid tribute to by the Germans, it is noted, by the invention of a new term to describe the bombardment. It is no longer "drum fire," nor even "whirlwind fire," that is spoken of, but "hurricane fire." It is fire of this sort, or measurably near it, that is preventing the German counter attacks from being launched as promptly or proving as effective as they formerly were.

French Retake Verdun Ground.

The Germans are still trying to retrieve some of their lost ground north of Verdun. An attack Friday night near Hill 344 was unsuccessful in dislodging the French, except temporarily, from an advanced position. The line was shortly afterward reëstablished.

GERMAN DEAD LITTER FIELD.

BRITISH FRONT IN FRANCE AND BELGIUM, Oct. 5.—[Delayed.]—The Germans suffered severely in the British attack Thursday and a trip along the battle front east and northeast of Ypres showed hundreds of bodies of German soldiers in the debris.

At many places shell craters were filled with dead. Here and there were wounded, sometimes under a pile of corpses, which the British stretcher bearers had not been able to reach.

Along one section of the Australian front a thousand bodies were counted. A little further south there was another lot of 700. Some of these had been prisoners who were making their way back within the British lines when they were caught in their own barrage and killed. One officer of the Prussian guards who was captured near Polygon wood said that British shell fire did terrible havoc among his men.

Plane Riddled; Pilot Unhurt.

A British airplane with an Australian assistant pilot had a remarkable experience yesterday. The pilot and observer kept at work despite the clouds and the rain. The Germans fired many shells at the plane but it continued in action.

When the pilot was finally forced to volplane down behind his own lines, it was found that his machine had been struck so often that it was of no further use. Neither the pilot nor the observer was injured.

Today the pilot asked that he be allowed to go up again. His superior officer, however, thought that he had had enough excitement for the time being and refused permission.

Plans for organizing Junior Red Cross units in the public schools of Chicago were discussed by Miss Justin R. Cook, director of the Chicago chapter of Junior Activities of the American Red Cross, at a luncheon of the Ella Flagg Young club in the Hotel La Salle yesterday. A Junior Red Cross unit may be formed in any school that subscribes $20.

OFFICIAL WAR REPORTS ON ALL BATTLE FRONTS

FRENCH FRONT

BRITISH.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—The enemy's artillery has shown increased activity on the battle front, but no action has been attempted by his infantry. An attempted raid on our trenches south of Hollebeke was driven off by rifle and machine gun fire.

Welsh troops successfully raided the enemy's lines northeast of Gouzeaucourt, bombing dugouts and inflicting casualties upon the garrison.

Our artillery was active all day on the whole battle front. The enemy's artillery fire was directed mainly against our new positions on the ridge from Broodseinde southward, but no counter attacks developed. An additional 380 prisoners were taken by us in the last twenty-four hours. On the rest of the British front there was nothing of importance to report.

AVIATION.

The weather Friday continued unsettled and stormy, and again made flying difficult. Successful artillery work, nevertheless, was accomplished, and many photographs were taken by our airmen.

Enemy airdromes in the Lille area were attacked with bombs, and the railway stations at Westroosebeke, Iseghem, and Courtrai also were bombed during the day. In addition, the last named two stations were attacked at night. In all, more than two tons of explosives were dropped. The enemy aircraft were active in the battle front. Four of his machines were brought down and three were driven down out of control. Five of our machines are missing.

GERMAN.

BERLIN, Oct. 6.—Front of Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria: In the fighting district of the Flanders front a destructive artillery fire which was powerful throughout the day increased in the evening to waves of drumfire between Poelcapelle and Gheluvelt. There was no English infantry attack of importance and advancing reconnoitering detachments were repulsed.

Front of the German Crown Prince: Northeast of Soissons artillery activity increased in intensity and method. Northeast of Reims a French attack failed. On both banks of the Meuse our storming troops penetrated enemy positions at Malancourt, Bethincourt, Forges, Samogneux, and Bezonvaux and everywhere returned with prisoners.

AVIATION.

The stormy weather restricted aerial activity, but five enemy airplanes were shot down.

FRENCH.

PARIS, Oct. 6.—Several enemy attacks on our small posts in the region of Craonne and Hurtebise were without success.

On the right bank of the Meuse [Verdun front] a more serious attack on our trenches in the vicinity of Hill 344 resulted in a spirited combat. Our soldiers drove back groups of the enemy which gained a footing in our advanced position. Our line was reëstablished entirely.

We made several successful incursions into the enemy trenches, south of Butte de Souaine, northwest of Faye-En-Haye and northwest of Regneville. Our detachments penetrated as far as the support line, destroying a number of shelters and bringing back prisoners.

There was intermittent artillery fighting over the greater part of the front.

NIGHT STATEMENT.

The two artilleries were quite active in the region of Braye-En-Laonnois and on the right bank of the Meuse, north of the Bois Le Chaume. In the Vosges we carried out a surprise attack in the neighborhood of Senones.

RUSSO-ROUMANIAN FRONT

RUSSIAN.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 6.—Northern front: In the Riga region small enemy detachments attempted to attack north of the Pakoff high road and east of Lemberg. They were repulsed by our fire.

On the other battle fronts only fusillades and scouting encounters occurred.

AVIATION.

On Thursday enemy airplanes bombed Galatz, Roumania, causing several casualties among soldiers and civilians.

GERMAN.

BERLIN, Oct. 6.—Nothing of importance occurred.

MACEDONIAN FRONT

FRENCH.

PARIS, Oct. 6.—Calm prevailed along the whole front yesterday. Enemy patrols were repulsed west of Lake Ochrida. Allied airplanes bombarded enemy establishments north of Gievgeli and near Resna.

GERMAN.

BERLIN, Oct. 6.—At several points the artillery fire was more lively than usual. East of Doiran an attack by an English battalion was repulsed by the Bulgarian protecting troops.

ITALIAN FRONT

ITALIAN.

ROME, Oct. 6.—In the Daone valley of the Trentino on Thursday night enemy parties with the support of artillery of the forts in their rear attacked our positions. They were repulsed. On the Bainsizza plateau, north of Vipacco, and in the Dosso Faiti sector of the Carso front violent artillery duels occurred. South of Podlaca we captured some prisoners in patrol engagements.

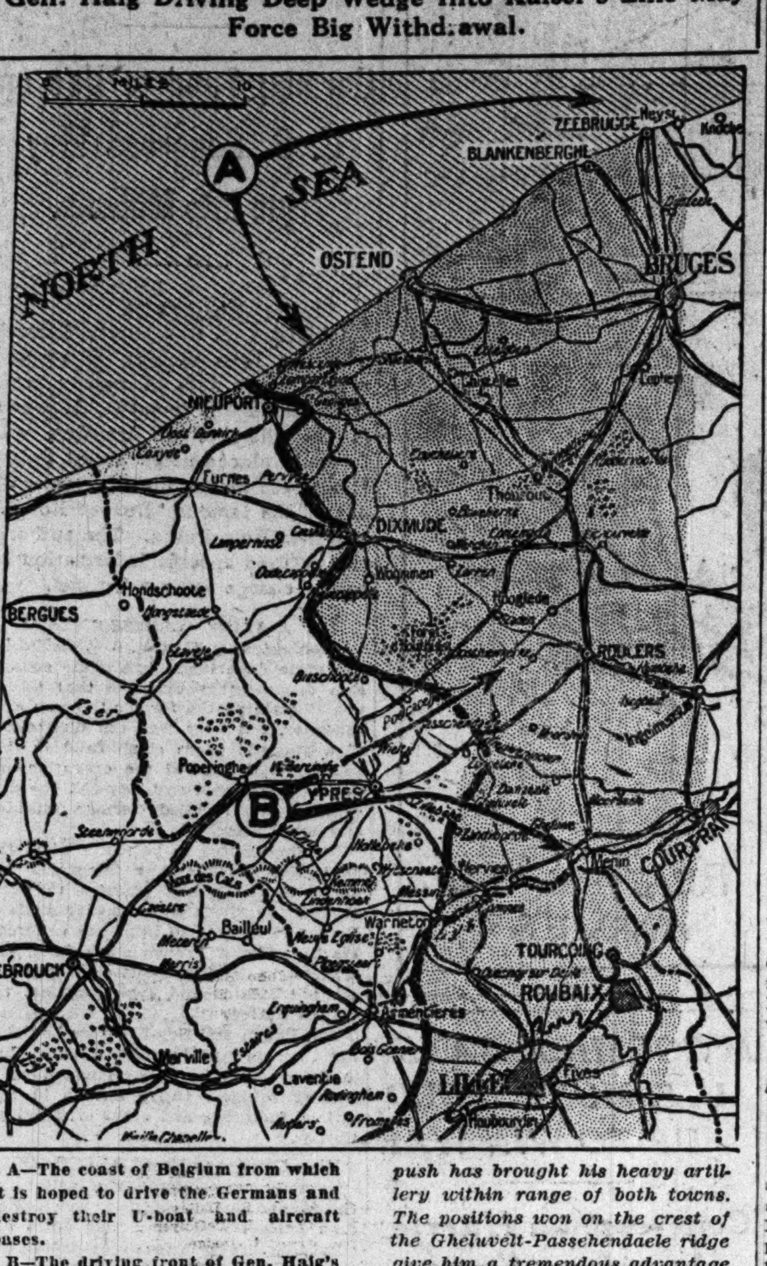
SUPPLEMENTARY

GERMAN.

BERLIN, Oct. 6.—On the western front rainy weather prevailed and there was nothing of importance. In the east local engagements occurred near the Sereth.

THE SMASH IN FLANDERS

Gen. Haig Driving Deep Wedge Into Kaiser's Line May Force Big Withdrawal.



A—The coast of Belgium from which it is hoped to drive the Germans and destroy their U-boat and aircraft bases.

The last smash by Gen. Haig's armies in Flanders has carried the cutting edge of the wide salient he is driving into the kaiser's lines over six miles east of Ypres. Practically the same tactics that were employed in the joint offensive of the British and French forces in the battle of the Somme are being followed.

By pounding back the German center of the northern line in Flanders the British hope to so imperil the enemy's positions to the north and south that a retirement on a wide front will become imperative.

Gen. Haig's immediate objectives in his drive on the center are Roulers to the northeast and Menin to the southeast of Ypres. His last push has brought his heavy artillery within range of both towns. The positions won on the crest of the Gheluvelt-Passchendaele ridge give him a tremendous advantage in dominating the terrain between his new line and the German bases he is aiming for.

Co-operation by the allied fleets is expected when the break in the German lines to the north comes. It is hoped to sweep the enemy from the Belgian coast as far as Zeebrugge, thereby eliminating to a large degree the nearby U-boat and aviation bases.

To the south the capture of Menin on the Lys river is expected to force the Germans out of the corner of northeastern France, of which the city of Lille is the center.

There have been persistent rumors that the Germans are preparing for a great withdrawal in Belgium and northern France and Gen. Haig is straining every resource to make this withdrawal, when it comes, as disastrous as possible to the enemy.

GERMAN VICE CHANCELLOR TO DO PEACE WORK

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 6.—Dr. George Michaelis, the German imperial chancellor, in explaining to the reichstag the duties of the vice chancellor, according to a Berlin dispatch, said it was not intended to make the vice chancellor an intermediary between the chancellor and the secretaries of state or to make his post superior to those of the latter.

The vice chancellor was only to be intrusted with general powers which were not within the province of the secretaries of state.

The chancellor, added Dr. Michaelis, needed a representative who was free from the burden of a state secretaryship to coördinate the work of the committee which would undertake the gigantic economic tasks in connection with peace negotiations and the transition period. He agreed to the office being annulled at the end of the first financial year.

Pershing and Bliss Are Now Real U. S. Generals

Washington, D. C., Oct. 6.—In open session just before adjournment, the senate confirmed the nominations of Major Generals Pershing and Bliss for promotion to the full grade of general, today.

The following were confirmed as major generals:

Brig. Gen. Henry P. McCain, adjutant general.

Brig. Gen. John L. Chamberlain, inspector general.

Brig. Gen. William Crozier, chief of ordnance.

Brig. Gen. George O. Squier, chief signal officer.

Neutral Ship Held Until Assured It Will Return

Washington, D. C., Oct. 6.—Indications that the American government and the allies are determined that the northern European neutral countries shall not hold their shipping idle were seen here today in the refusal of the exports administrative board to permit the 10,000 ton Dutch steamer Nieuw Amsterdam to sail with a cargo of foodstuffs for Belgium unless assurances are given that the vessel will return.

STALEMATE TALK STIRS ANGER OF GEN. PERSHING

Weight of U. S. Forces Will Win War, He Says; Scores Pacifists.

AMERICAN TRAINING CAMP IN FRANCE, Oct. 5.—[Delayed.]—American newspapers which have just arrived in France telling of efforts in certain quarters in the United States to spread the idea that the western front can never be broken or the Germans driven out of France has aroused not only Gen. Pershing but the entire American army. Further resentment has been caused by the information that these reports had been taken up by German newspapers in an attempt to belittle America's effort in the war.

Gen. Pershing declared immediately and vigorously that America's fighting men will carry the cause of the entente allies to a successful issue over Germany.

Germans on Defensive.

"German propaganda working in America through the agency of our pacifists would spread this idea among our people in order to weaken our initiative," Gen. Pershing said. "Having lost its tactical advantage in the Ypres salient, which it enjoyed for more than two years, the German army continues to yield ground before the hammering British assaults.

"Everywhere on the western front, despite the large number of German troops which the Russian situation has released, Germany is on the defensive and the allies are on the offensive.

U. S. to Force Victory.

"America has the resources in men and material, once they are prepared, to add the weight which must force a military decision against Germany. Our troops are imbued with a spirit of aggressiveness, a spirit that means we are going to win this war and that we have no idea of allowing ourselves to be influenced by pacifists or enemy propaganda. Neither have we any false notions that victory is going to be an easy matter. But that only makes our determination stronger.

"Every man, from top to bottom, has entered this war imbued with the fighting spirit, which means that the cause of the allies will be carried to success."

Scandinavians Protest Conscription of Aliens

Salt Lake City, Utah, Oct. 6.—One hundred and fifty Scandinavians at a meeting here passed resolutions calling upon the Norwegian and Swedish governments to protest against the conscription of aliens in the United States, as proposed at Washington, and calling upon President Wilson and congress to defeat the measure.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, via Paris, Oct. 6.—After interminable meanderings through a French labyrinth with the objective of reaching the British front line and then to find one's self facing a half buried cement blockhouse with the information that you are now in the line was rather disconcerting, to say the least.

With dramatic license our conductor had neglected to mention that it was the old line wrested from the Germans some time before and that our original destination was still in front of us.

The blockhouse was fifteen or twenty feet square. An armor plated steel machine gun turret could be seen from the level of the ground and this, too, was partly covered with loose earth. The structure was one of the strong points which the Germans placed in advance of their first line, connected with the rear by deep communicating trenches, most of which were covered with timbers and presenting a three foot thickness of earthwork for the roof.

As we stood in the shelter of this formidable obstacle which the British soldiers took from the enemy, several shells whined their way overhead and burst with explosions, sometimes in front and sometimes behind the trench we occupied. Our submerged position made it impossible to see the bursting of the shells as they hit the ground and our inexperience made us unable to judge the distance of contact from us by the sound.

Also confusing was the fact that our position was in a salient which was in range of the German guns, not only in front, but others on either flank. To the uninitiated this made it impossible to satisfy our natural curiosity as to the nationality of the particular shell whose whistle was most disturbing at that minute. Some shells passing over us from the rear were pronounced of German extraction by trench authorities, whereas we trench pilgrims, unfamiliar with the bulge in the line, could not understand why they were not British shells when they came approximately from what we thought was British territory.

And Shells Pass Overhead.

It was all puzzling, and for that matter there was nothing that could be considered particularly clubby in any of the shells that passed over us from any direction. Whatever their respective nationalities, the intent of some of them could hardly be questioned. It seemed distinctly un-American.

Our conductor inquired if we would be interested in seeing the front line first aid station a few yards back. A clergyman lecturer in our party developed a painful nail in his shoe and expressed pleasure at the suggestion. It was a smile of beatific satisfaction that the reverend gentleman used to express his satisfaction when learning that the station was safely located deep in an old quarry.

During repairs to this our first casualty, two of us pushed aside a gunny sack curtain at the entrance of the German blockhouse and accepted a cheery invitation from the darksome interior to partake of Irish stew.

The padre still limped when the party rejoined us from the first aid station. The clerical gentleman was interested in a large clay jug which he found in the trench. He placed a knowing nostril to the mouth of the jug and partook of a critical inhalation. Then he viewed the enigmatical letters " S. R. D." blown in the yellow surface of the container.

Helped Padre, Anyway.

"There's no question what was in it," the padre said. "But what do the letters 'S. R. D.' represent?"

Four Tommies who were near offered suggestions.

"Sandy's regular drink," one of them said.

"Sergeant's repeat dose," another volunteered.

"Sometimes received dry," a third one said.

"Seldom reaches destination," was the fourth suggestion.

It is a dram of "S. R. D." that the men receive after a cold, wet night in the trenches, and it is carried on army books as "service rum diluted."

I subscribe to its potency, because the padre's single whiff eased his limp and deadened the pain from the nail in his shoe and started us forward on the last hundred yards between us and the actual first line. They say it's great stuff to take before going "over the top."

Speakers Address Clubs After Massmeeting at the Cort.

Women everywhere yesterday were taking an active part in the great drive for the sale of the second issue of the Liberty bonds. The government has intrusted the women's campaign largely to the Woman's Liberty loan committee.

Following a patriotic massmeeting for men and women at the Cort theater, where a message was read from Gov. and Mrs. Lowden announcing their $25,000 subscription, and where Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, Mrs. George Bass, and others spoke for the bonds, the women adjourned to various club meetings in the downtown hotels, where they "Liberty loaned" until sunset.

Defends Woman's Party.

Mrs. Lawrence Lewis Jr. of Philadelphia, one of the prominent members of the executive committee of the woman's party, who arrived in Chicago yesterday, in a little meeting at the Stratford hotel defended Mrs. H. C. Havemeyer and others of her party from the charge of seeking to block the sale of bonds.

"It is ridiculous," said Mrs. Lewis, "to accuse these women of seeking to prevent the sale of the bonds. Mrs. Havemeyer was one of the most active workers in the campaign for the sale of the first issue of bonds, and I have no doubt will sell a number of this issue. Our party is not disloyal or unpatriotic. Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont and myself and any number of other women belonging to our group have bought the bonds.

Mrs. Bass Speaks.

Mrs. George Bass, chairman of the new war committee of the Political Equality league and member of the National Liberty Loan committee, spoke for the bonds at the meeting at the Congress hotel, which opened the season for the league. She urged the women to forget everything else until the loan had been raised. "We must work for everything, and in every way that can possibly help to win the war," said Mrs. Bass.

War work, from various angles, will be the great endeavor of the league during the coming winter. It was decided to enter into the war work actively with Mrs. Bass as the guiding genius in Chicago. Committees will be appointed and the coming work placed in charge of community units.

FIGHT OUT WAR IN SKY, KAISER'S ANSWER TO U. S.

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 6.—Germany is now trying to get her army off the earth and wage the future battles of the world war in the air. She is developing gigantic and tremendously powerful airplanes. Already she has probably developed a model capable of transatlantic flight.

From reliable German sources tonight it was learned that this is Germany's answer to America's $640,000,000 appropriation for aviation. Those who know asserted that if America expects or hopes to compete in the forthcoming air war, she must possess machines capable of flying from Germany to New York—duplicating what Germany is believed already to possess.

During the last fortnight it has been reported that Germany is using Gotha airplanes driven at almost incredible speed by four 260 horse power engines. These newest eagles carry fuel capable of sustaining them in flights for ten hours. Two pilots operate them, and there are two gunners in the crew besides a captain, who also operates the wireless.

'SNOW BABY' A BRIDE

Admiral Peary's Daughter, Born in the Arctic, Is Married to Capt. Edward Stafford of the Coast Artillery.

Mrs. Edward Stafford

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 6.—A unique and interesting wedding took place here today in Old St. John's church, when Rear Admiral Peary, discoverer of the north pole, gave his daughter, Marie A. Peary, to be the bride of Capt. Edward Stafford, coast artillery corps, U. S. R.

Miss Peary was born well above the snow line during her father's explorations, and is affectionately known over the country as "the snow baby." Capt. Stafford is the son of Justice and Mrs. Wendell P. Stafford of the District Supreme court.

The bride was attended by her cousin, Miss Madge Diebitsch of Texas, Miss Helen Blodgett, Miss Laura Graves, Miss Jeane Holmes, and Mrs. Broderick Rafter.

Justice and Mrs. Stafford, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Peary, and the bride and bridegroom received at the bride's home after the ceremony. Capt. and Mrs. Stafford will make their home at Fort Monroe, Va., where the bridegroom is stationed.

NEUTRAL PARADE PROHIBITED IN BUENOS AIRES

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 6.—Fearing possible disorders the authorities this afternoon formally prohibited the holding of what was planned as the greatest neutrality demonstration in the city's history.

Proponents of the parade expected to have thousands in line. Every effort had been made to stage a demonstration which would put in the shade the recent meeting of war supporters.

Considerable ill feeling has already been engendered by the preparations and with the public stirred by unrest in the general strike the authorities decided to take no chances.

COOK COUNTY LEADS DISTRICT IN LIBERTY LOAN

$10,000,000 Bonds Sold in Seventh, Exclusive of Chicago.

Approximately $10,000,000 worth of Liberty bonds have been purchased in the Seventh federal reserve district, exclusive of the big Chicago loans, according to reports reaching the loan committee in Chicago yesterday. The allotment for the district is $700,000,000.

Cook county leads in the returns. Little has been heard, however, from Milwaukee, Indianapolis, Detroit, and other large cities in the district, and it is believed when they report the totals will rise considerably. Milwaukee, for instance, is reported to have passed the $10,000,000 mark.

Only a little more than 1 per cent of the allotment has been subscribed in the figures submitted, however, and 25 per cent of the time for the loan is up.

List of Subscriptions.

	No. of subscript.	Amt.	Pct. of quota
Cook county....	3,565	$3,979,400	2.20
*Illinois	978	1,252,340	1.37
Indiana	1,188	1,583,700	1.66
Iowa	842	495,950	.40
Michigan	533	955,400	.77
Wisconsin	746	695,700	.83

*Outside of Cook county.

Active Work Downstate.

Every day the downstate campaign is becoming more active. Representatives of the federal reserve bank have been perfecting county organizations for the work. At a large meeting in Clinton, Ill., Theodore F. Elworth, who has charge of the work in four counties, obtained a subscription of $50,000 from the John Warner bank and another of $50,000 from Vespasian Warner.

Among the new large subscriptions in Chicago is one for $1,500,000 from the Commonwealth Edison company and affiliated companies. The Illinois Trust and Savings bank took $1,000,000 worth of the bonds and the Advance Rumely company of La Porte, Ind., $500,000. Of the latter amount $100,000 was subscribed through a La Porte bank and the remainder in Chicago.

Other subscriptions announced yesterday were: Fairbanks, Morse & Co., $150,000; J. T. McLaughlin, $100,000; Cassoday, Butler, Lamb & Foster, $50,000; E. V. Price & Co., $30,000; F. W. Lamb & Co., $10,000; Robins Conveying Belt company, $5,000, and Eitel Bros. of Bismarck hotel $2,000 (additional).

Bonds for Christmas Gifts.

The subscription of Eitel Bros. was obtained through Harold A. Hancock of the flying squadron. The bonds will be distributed among relatives and friends as Christmas presents. Eitel Bros. previously took $5,000 worth of the bonds.

Gov. and Mrs. Frank O. Lowden purchased $25,000 worth of the bonds, placing their subscription through the women's committee of the loan. It was announced at the women's massmeeting at the Fort theater, at which Mrs. George Bass and Mrs. Kellogg Fairbanks spoke.

Deputy sheriffs purchased $10,000 worth of bonds when 100 of them each took a $100 bond at a meeting in Sheriff Traeger's office.

All of the motion picture theaters in the country will run slides from now until the end of the campaign, Oct. 27, urging movie fans to subscribe. There are 17,500 such theaters in the country.

Record of Teams.

The work of the flying squadron is considered excellent. Working largely among those who take the smaller bonds, they have sold during the week a total of $5,481,950 worth of bonds. That does not include their work yesterday. The team of G. L. McCandless is in first place with a total of $3,054,250 worth of bonds sold. J. H. Briggs' team is second with $336,550. Following is the week's record of all teams:

Schools Open to Salesmen.

Supt. John D. Shoop notified the principals and teachers of the public schools that salesmen may talk to teachers and to the children regarding the loan. The teachers were among the heavy subscribers to the first loan and it is believed that the children will take the word home to their parents and thus aid materially in increasing the sales.

4 PER CENT

Secretary McAdoo to Explain Soon How to Convert 3 1-2 Per Cent Liberty Bonds Into New Ones.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 6.—[Special.]—In response to numerous requests as to the method to be used in converting 15-30 year 3½ per cent Liberty loan bonds into 15-30 year 4 per cent bonds, Secretary McAdoo announced today that there would be issued by the treasury department within the very near future a circular setting forth the manner in which this conversion should be undertaken.

The terms of the 3½ per cent bonds require that an interest adjustment be made on each and every bond converted. The treasury department has devised a method whereby this adjustment of interest can, in a large measure, be made without the actual payment of any cash by the holder of the bond to the government, or vice versa.

Holders of the 3½ per cent bonds are reminded that the date of issue of the new bonds into which their bonds will be convertible is Nov. 15 and that no conversions can be actually accomplished prior to that date, although opportunity will be given to the holders of the 3½ per cent bonds to deposit their bonds for conversion several weeks in advance of the actual date of issue.

U. S. LOSES SHIP ON DUTY ABROAD; NO LOSS OF LIFE

Washington, D. C., Oct. 6.—An American patrol vessel on duty in foreign waters has been lost, the navy department announced today. A dispatch from Admiral Simms states that the ship foundered, but the entire crew and officers were saved and safely landed.

The accident occurred on the morning of Oct. 4. An investigation is being made into the loss of the vessel. The department stated that beyond a bare announcement of the loss no further details are given.

This patrol vessel is the first American naval ship to be lost in foreign waters. The department early this week announced the damaging of a large destroyer on duty as a result of a collision with a British naval ship.

PEACE TO BEAR 1 OF 2 BRANDS, U. S. OR GERMAN

New York, Oct. 6.—"A peace can only be one of two things—a German peace or an American peace—for America now is accepted as the champion, the protagonist, and the spokesman of all the allied powers," T. P. O'Connor declared tonight in announcing his appearance as a lecturer for the National Security league in its patriotism through education campaign.

"An American must be a pro-German or a pro-American," the Irish Nationalist continued. "America's intervention has transferred the situation and the choice has been made and is being lived up to by the men of my race."

15 Hurt in Collision of 2 Passenger Trains

Calmar, Ia., Oct. 6.—Fifteen persons were injured, several seriously, when two passenger trains on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul collided here today. The impact sent two coaches of one of the trains from the track. The trains were from Decorah and Jackson Junction, Ia.

Will You Wait Until All Hudsons Are Sold?

We Cannot Fill Orders at the Present Low Prices Much Longer, for Our Allotment Is Nearly Gone.

Of over 50 makes of cars, Hudson is the only one that has not increased its price since last January.

And because, in the past, it has been customary to set a date for higher prices to go into effect, many people have put off their purchase of a Hudson until the last minute.

Hudsons will advance, for with the present price of materials they cannot be manufactured and sold at today's prices after the materials now on hand are exhausted. But before that time comes our allotment of Hudsons will all be sold, and we will not be able to sell you a car at present prices.

When these other makes of cars sold at from $100 to $300 less than the Hudson, our sales were greater than the total sales of any two cars that have been advanced up to the price of the Hudson. Now that practically all the cars have advanced in price, Hudson sales are at their highest.

Remember, too, that Hudson is never compared with cars that sell at or near its price, but always with cars that sell at many hundreds of dollars more.

Men who planned to buy Hudsons next spring are ordering them today. They know then the price will be higher, and the demand greater. Today there are over 40,000 Hudsons in use—40,000 enthusiastic owners.

The present situation is an advantageous one. You can save money if you do not delay. Any day now we may exhaust our allotment. Then you will have to pay more.

PEOPLE OR WALL STREET? NOW IS PEOPLE'S TIME

Every Citizen Gets Right to Become One of the Bondholders.

Below will be found the third article by Theodore Roosevelt, which "The Tribune" prints simultaneously with the Kansas City Star.

BY THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

[Copyright: 1917: By Kansas City Star.]

Not many years ago one of the favorite cries of those who wished to exploit for their own advantage the often justifiable popular unrest and discontent was that "the people were oppressed in the interest of the bondholders."

The more ardent souls of this type wished to repudiate the national debt to "wipe it out as with a sponge" in order to remove the "oppression." The bondholders were always held up as greedy creatures who had obtained an unfair advantage of the people as a whole.

Well, the Liberty loan now offers the chance to make people and the bondholders interchangeable terms. The bonds are issued in such a way that the farmer and the wage worker have exactly the same chance as the banker to purchase and hold as many or as few as they wish. No matter how small a man's means, he can get some part of a bond if he wishes.

It Is Up to People.

The government and the big financiers are doing all they can to make the sale as widely distributed as possible. Some bankers are serving without pay in the effort to put all the facts before the people as a whole, and so make the loan in very truth a people's loan.

It rests with the people themselves to decide whether it shall be such.

The government must have the money. It is a patriotic duty to purchase the bonds. And they offer an absolutely safe investment.

Best Security in World.

The money invested is invested on the best security in the world—that of the United States; of the American nation itself. The money cannot be lost unless the United States is destroyed, and in that case we will all of us be smashed anyhow, so that it would not make any difference.

The people can, if they choose, now make themselves the bondholders. If they do not choose, and if they force Wall street to become the largest purchaser of the bonds, which must be bought somehow, then they will have no right in the future to grumble about the bondholders as a special class. We can now, all of us, join that class if we wish.

Seek 1,600 Negro Recruits.

A double drive for Negro recruits has been started at the Eighth regiment armory, 3517 Forrest avenue, under direction of Capt. Leonard W. Lewis. On account of the recent increase in the size of regiments it is necessary to get 1,600 more men for the Eighth. A stevedore regiment is also being recruited for service on the east coast of the Atlantic for the United States army.

HOW AMERICA MET WAR TASK IN SIX MONTHS

The espionage bill and the bill authorizing condemnation of lands for military purposes.

Authorization for an aviation service and an appropriation of $640,000,000 therefor.

The "food control bill" and legislation making more effective the war risk insurance bureau

The second bond issue bill, authorizing an issue of $4,000,000,000 additional to meet loans to foreign governments, $2,000,000,000 of one year certificates of indebtedness, and $2,000,000,000 of five year war saving certificates.

A deficiency appropriation bill, carrying more than $5,300,000,000, for the fiscal year 1918. This authorizes additional contract obligations of $2,000,000,000 and raises the limit of cost to carry out the provisions of the shipping act to $1,734,000,000. It further appropriates for the shipping fund $635,000,000.

The "trading with the enemy" bill and the soldiers and sailors' family insurance bill.

A taxation bill to raise approximately $2,500,000,000 in revenue toward defraying the expenses of the war.

WAR DEPARTMENT.

Without accident or disaster the war department already has sent a large expeditionary force to France.

Within three months the department constructed sixteen cantonments, or sixteen cities each capable of accommodating a population of 40,000. The sum of approximately $150,000,000 was spent for cantonment construction.

In these cantonments, or virtualy en route thereto, there are today about a half million men. When they are trained others can be readily supplied for similar training.

Army Is Made Modern.

The general staff, profiting by the lessons in Europe, made plans for bringing our army up to the new era in warfare and substantially revised the past organization of our armies to fit in with modern methods. The general staff is modernizing the entire army, unit by unit, in addition to fitting out the Pershing expedition along entirely new lines.

Following the April announcement of the adjutant general of the establishment of sixteen officers' training camps, approximately 27,000 officers received intensive training and received commissions for the various branches of the service.

A second series of training camps for officers has begun, and the third will begin in January. The adjutant general's office also procured more than 50,000 trained specialists for the enlisted reserve corps. About 30,000 officers in the reserve corps have been commissioned.

Big Increase in Officers.

At the beginning of the war we had approximately 20,000 officers. There are now around 80,000 officers.

The adjutant general's office, in charge of the records and correspondence of the war department, received about 3,000 pieces of mail per day last year. Now the mail averages more than 75,000 pieces a day and is increasing.

Development of the "Liberty motor," which has withstood every aviation engine test, is one of the major achievements of the war department and the aircraft production board. This was followed by the designing of a standard military truck.

Then came the letting of contracts for a great aerial fleet authorized in the $640,000,000 aviation appropriation bill. This aviation program calls for more than 20,000 airplanes ranging from light training machines to great battle planes. Aviation experts from the allied countries are in Washington and help to form an "international general staff on aviation."

Twenty-four flying schools have been authorized for training aviators in this country, and the majority of them are in operation. There are eight ground schools. Many aviators are now receiving intensive training behind the battle fronts.

Sixteen Training Camps.

In addition to the cantonments, flying schools and officers' training camps, the war department has maintained sixteen training camps for the national guard. The training of an army of more than a million men has progressed surprisingly.

The surgeon general of the army has increased the enlisted personnel of the medical department to more than ten times its size at the outbreak of the war, there now being more than 69,000 men in it.

Plans have been made for the construction of a large hospital at each one of the thirty-two national guard and national army cantonments, and for the construction of other large base hospitals at a dozen or twenty points scattered over the country.

NAVY DEPARTMENT.

The navy has in sevrice more than three times as many men and nearly three times as many vessels as when war was declared.

The navy and marine corps constitute a force of more than a quarter of a million men. On April 6 there were 64,680 enlisted men in the regular navy; now there are 143,726, an increase of 79,046.

The naval reserve force has increased from about 10,000 to 45,000; 14,500 naval militia are in the federal service; the coast guard, with its force of 5,000, has been transferred to the navy for the duration of the war; the hospital corps has been increased from 2,000 to 6,500.

The marine corps has increased from 13,266 enlisted men on April 6 to an enlisted strength, with reserves of 32,348. There are about 12,000 officers in the navy and 1,122 in the marine corps.

Atlantic Fleet Doubled.

Hundreds of vessels of various types, yachts, and fast motorboats have been taken over and transformed into patrol boats, submarine chasers, mine sweepers, and the various types needed for antisubmarine warfare, coast defense, and other purposes.

The Atlantic fleet comprises twice as many vessels as in peace times. Every battleship and cruiser that was in reserve has been fully manned and commissioned. Every warship is now a training school for the instruction of men in gunnery and engineering, and notable results have been achieved, especially in target practice with guns of the smaller calibers used in fighting submarines.

Since early in May, a month after war was declared, United States destroyers have been operating with the naval forces of our allies in European waters in the campaign against the submarines. Practically all our merchant ships are now convoyed by naval vessels.

The navy has organized, manned, and is operating the transport service and convoys the vessels carrying American armies to Europe. Not a transport has been sunk or a soldier lost in transportation across the Atlantic.

The largest ship construction program in history is being carried out by the navy comprising hundreds of vessels of various types, from super dreadnaughts to submarine chasers. Months ago contracts were let for every destroyer the American yards could build, and a considerable extension of shipbuilding facilities has been arranged to build the large additional number provided for in the bill now pending in congress.

New records in construction are being made, destroyers which formerly took twenty to twenty-two months to complete now being scheduled for completion in half that time.

Training of Recruits.

Twenty training camps have been erected, accommodating 85,000 men, to provide for housing and training of recruits.

Navy yards have been enlarged, immense foundries, machine shops, and warehouses erected; work is being pushed on dry docks, shipways, and piers. A big projectile plant is being erected at Charleston, W. Va., and a $1,000,000 aircraft factory at Philadelphia. Extensions of the naval gun factory will make that plant one of the largest of its kind. The entire "shore building" program emoraces an expenditure of $100,000,000.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT

The chief wartime activity of the treasury department has been the floating of the Liberty loan of 1917. Entrusted with full power to advertise and sell the bond issues authorized by congress, and to negotiate our loans to foreign governments, the treasury department staged a remarkable campaign that brought about an oversubscription of the first Liberty loan.

The second Liberty loan has been announced and America is responding to the call for funds. When the second issue of bonds shall have been sold the treasury department will have disposed of in a few months more than $15,000,000,000 worth of the long term and short term securities of the United States. As authorized by congress and as they are being placed by the treasury department the bond issues of this government at the beginning of the war are without precedence in the history of the world.

Aid for Production.

The department of agriculture has appointed 2,850 additional demonstration agents, has sent canning and drying experts into countless communities, and has waged a persistent and systematic campaign for greater production.

The department of commerce, through its bureau of standards, has worked out many things of value for offensive and defensive military operations.

The labor department has performed a vital task in encouraging labor to do its utmost for the war. Labor troubles have been settled. Thousands of laborers have been diverted to war employment, and boys have been trained to take the place of farm workers called by draft.

The interior department, through its reclamation work, has increased the nation's food supply, while geological and topographic experts of the department have aided the army plans. The bureau of mines particularly has been useful in stimulating production and investigating new supplies of resources needed in munitions manufacture.

SHIPPING BOARD

The United States shipping board, through its construction agency, the emergency fleet corporation, is now building a total of 1,039 ships.

Of these, 353, with a total dead weight tonnage of 1,253,900, are wooden ships; fifty-eight with a total dead weight tonnage of 207,000, are composite; 225, with a total dead weight tonnage of 1,663,800, are steel, while 403 vessels of various types above 2,500 tons building for private account, both foreign and American, and aggregating 2,800,000 dead weight tons, were commandeered in course of construction and nearly all of these will be completed by the emergency fleet corporation. This gives a total dead weight tonnage under construction at the present time of 5,924,700 tons.

In addition to this, there is included in the recently enacted urgent deficiency appropriation a provision and authorization for the construction of further vessels whose total dead weight capacity will be approximately 5,000,000 tons.

Thus the shipping board has under construction and contemplation a total tonnage of nearly 11,000,000 dead weight capacity.

In addition to the tonnage being constructed by the emergency fleet corporation, there have been taken over 103 German interned vessels with a total tonnage of 611,799 dead weight tons. All of these except 20, with a tonnage of 120,500 tons, have been repaired and are now in the service of the army or navy, or the allied government. The remaining twenty are still in process of repair and will be similarly employed when the work upon them is completed.

PAN-GERMANS WAR PROFITEERS, REICHSTAG TOLD

Socialists Press Demand on Michaelis to Show His Colors.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 6.—The reichstag, according to Berlin dispatches, discussed today the Socialist interpellation concerning the new German fatherland party, created by Admiral von Tirpitz and his followers. The Socialist, Herr Landsberg, declared the new party was a pan-German institution, its particular object being to obtain support for its leaders by means of war profits and the purchase of newspapers to influence public opinion and set forth Germany's war aims which would give them increased dividends.

The Socialists, on the contrary, Herr Landsberg declared, demanded the freedom of the nation should be promoted because democracy was its strength.

Referring to the agitation in behalf of the new party's propaganda against the reichstag peace resolution, Herr Landsberg said:

"We must get out of the suffocating atmosphere of a state of siege. The war minister must admit that he protects the agitation, as he himself wrote a polemic against the reichstag resolution.

Sword Cannot Defeat Pen.

"The way of the sword this time will not spoil the good work of the pen. The chancellor must in his own interest and that of the nation declare against Pan-German agitation. On his attitude greatly depends the country's welfare."

Herr Landsberg told how clergymen and the state authorities agitated among the population on behalf of the Fatherland party, and how officers, by speeches and the distribution of pamphlets, carried on a propaganda among the soldiers against the reichstag resolution.

Minister of War Von Stein, in replying to Herr Landsberg, declared the army command did not permit political agitation within the army. This caused a stir and cries of "O, O," from the left. Thereupon the president pointed out the impossibility of further debate under such conditions and begged the deputies to resume their seats.

Must Inform Army.

Minister von Stein, in continuing, said:

"The explanations given in the army are of quite different tendencies and purport. In view of the enemy's lies, which are circulated all around the world, it is clear that our soldiers must be enlightened concerning the real causes of the war and the enemy's intentions and the consequences if we lost. Men on leave must be enlightened regarding the difficulties at home, and to this must be added some explanation about supplies.

"The army hungers for intellectual nutriment and, therefore, the army command has issued general instructions regarding lectures, plays, cinemas, pamphlets and army newspapers. There is no word of politics in this. It may be true that certain impulsive natures exceeded these limits, but steps were immediately taken against this."

Minister von Stein asserted there were other sorts of agitation, such as reports that differences existed between Field Marshal von Hindenburg and Quartermaster General Von Ludendorff. He added that no two persons in Germany were so united in their convictions as these two leaders.

The war minister then charged that enemy agents were endeavoring to induce dissension and vacillation among the German people, therefore principles had been laid down for the army in the field and the army at home. He declared that the enemy, too, has his army propaganda to uphold to instill the spirit of victory in their ranks.

MOTHER

Seeks Custody of Daughter She Says Divorce Husband Took.

Mrs. Blanche B. Lusk

Seeking to regain the custody of her 2 year old daughter, Virginia, Mrs. Blanche Lusk filed a petition for a writ of habaes corpus yesterday in the Circuit court against her former husband, Joseph Lusk, 3345 West Twenty-third street, and his wife, Barbara.

According to Attorneys Heller and Kassel, who filed the petition, Lusk, who was divorced from his first wife on Sept. 12, asked her permission to take their daughter to visit relatives. That happened two weeks ago and Lusk has since refused to let little Virginia return to her mother, they say.

Attemps to reach Lusk last night were futile.

CHICAGO LAGGING IN SUBSCRIPTIONS TO WAR LIBRARY

Only $73,000 of $100,000 Fund Raised in Two Weeks.

"The Tribune" will be pleased to receive and acknowledge subscriptions to the war library fund of $100,000 being collected in Chicago. Yesterday's contributions were:

Mrs. S. Frank	$ 1.00
F. S.	1.00
Previously acknowledged	374.50
Total to date	376.50

With the close of the second week of the war library campaign the total subscribed by Chicago exceeds $70,000. The directors of the campaign believe there is still a chance for Chicago to reach its allotment of $100,000 in the $1,000,000 drive.

Harry A. Wheeler, a member of the national committee, returned to Chicago from Washington, and was surprised to hear Chicago is lagging.

"The plan," said Mr. Wheeler, "is to provide a large reading room in each training camp capable of housing 10,000 books. The books will be selected after a careful investigation as to the needs of the soldiers and by a competent library staff.

Carnegie Provides Buildings.

"The cost of the buildings does not come out of the fund, but is met by the Carnegie foundation. All the money collected will be used for the purchase, installation, and the administration of the books.

"It is planned to make the money provide library service at 258 different points, over a period of two years. This includes the purchase of new books to keep the libraries fresh, rebinding of the original books, and absorption of gift books.

Carlile Team Leads.

The city hall employés have given $2,527, and the employés of the county building about $2,500. Postoffice employés have subscribed $1,300, and the employés of Swift & Co. $1,000. W. B. Carlile's team stands at the head of the list. He turned over $7,679.80 yesterday. William Sanson and John I. Adams obtained about $6,000 of that amount.

Among the new subscriptions are the following:

C. H. Swift.

$200.

Commonwealth Edison company.

$150.

Edward F. Swift.

$100.

Spiegel-May-Stern company, Sturgis-Burn Manufacturing company, Edward Hines Lumber company, B. E. Bensinger, Agricultural Credit company, H. M. Byllesby & Co.

$60.

$50.

Benjamin Electric company, Public Service company, Reliance Manufacturing company, Augustus A. Carpenter, The Florsheim Shoe company, Chicago Bridge and Iron works, Kellogg Switchboard and Supply company, J. C. Deagan, Kinne-Rome company.

$25.

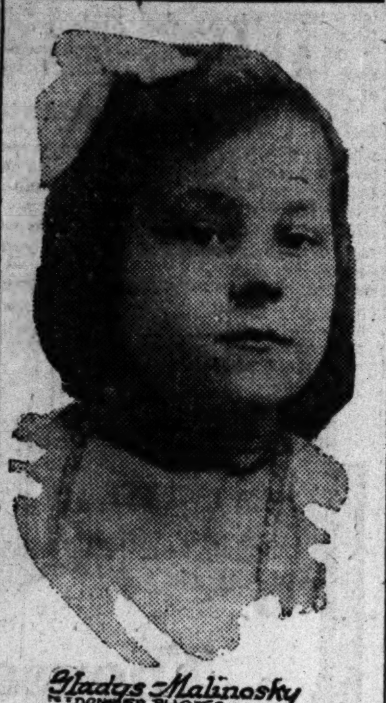
HELP FIND HER

Little Girl Disappears on Way to School.



Gladys Malinosky
DONNER PHOTO

Gladys Malinosky, pretty and only 14 years old, left her home last Thursday morning with her school books under her arm to attend her classes at Lake View High school. She never reached there.

Her parents have found no trace of her and have appealed to THE TRIBUNE to help find her.

This Library Fund Gift Wasn't 4 Cents, but $25

The stenographer failed to enclose the check for $25 with the letter from the Harter Manufacturing Co. to the Library War fund. Then the clerk of the fund listed the Harter contribution at four cents and THE TRIBUNE printed the list of contributors as listed by the clerk. The check for $25 was sent as soon as the error was discovered.

U. S. DESTROYER FIGHTS U-BOAT; FOE DISAPPEARS

Washington, Oct. 6.—In making public today an account of an action between an American destroyer in European waters and a German submarine, the navy department avoided any claim that the U-boat had been destroyed, although all indications pointed to that result.

The report on which the department's statement was founded was made by Vice Admiral Sims, in command of American destroyers in the war zone, indicating his belief that a victory had been scored, but Admiral Benson, chief of naval operations, pointed out that the experience of Great Britain and France in similar cases made it unwise to place too much confidence in circumstantial evidence.

Believe U-Boat Was Sunk.

The report showed the efficiency and skill of the destroyer crew, and drew a graphic picture of the pursuit of the submarine with shell fire and depth bombs. Admiral Benson said that in this and other incidents which also will be made public when military reasons permit, there is every reason to believe that the underwater craft was destroyed. He added, however, that the department would not make claims which could not be sustained beyond doubt.

The allied powers have found by experience that the German submarine commanders attempt to create the impression on the surface that their craft have been destroyed and thus terminate the pursuit.

Trick to Help Escape.

There have been cases where destroyers have dropped depth bombs and oil has come up, indicating a hit. The asumption is that the oil was released to divert attention while the U-boat crept away.

Admiral Benson made it clear that no government has definite knowledge of the number of German submarines or the rate of construction. Reports to all admiralties, however, agree that Germany has larger U-boats than those now in use, either already afloat or coming forward. He gave no figures as to the size indicated.

TURK AND FIXINS FOR N. W. U. UNIT'S XMAS IN FRANCE

There's going to be turkey and cranberry sauce and everything somewhere in France this Christmas if everybody will help. It's like this:

On next Saturday a dance is to be given and a new patriotic song by Elizabeth Ayres Kidd is to be sung and sold and all the proceeds are to go toward the dinner for Base Hospital Unit 12 of Northwestern university.

We're for Uncle Sam and a mighty land,
And a flag that waves in beauty grand;
We're for Uncle Sam and an honored land,
And we'll fight to the last American.
He's our trusted knight and our guide for right,
And we'll keep his star of courage bright.
So take your stand behind the band;
Support our president and Uncle Sam!

It is to be hoped everybody will take his stand.

A New Boot Shop for Discriminating Women

EVERY woman who delights in smart looking, perfect fitting shoes is interested in this announcement of the opening of an I. Miller Shoe Store for Women in Chicago, the date to be published in the near future.

For over 26 years Mr. I. Miller has been the style creator and manufacturer of fashionable footwear for the stars of the stage and for New York society. His genius in designing beautiful shoes is supplemented by a knowledge of scientific shoemaking that is a guarantee of perfect shoe comfort and service.

All shoes carried in the three New York stores, and in the Chicago store, are manufactured in the I. Miller factory, and are retailed at the smallest possible margin of profit. The immense volume of business done results in a value-giving power that can't be duplicated elsewhere in shoes of equal character and distinction.

Our opening "ad" will carry a message of great importance. Watch for it.

GRIM PEASANTS, SUAVE BANKERS, FIX SLAVS' FATE

Battle Over New Russian Cabinet Rages Hours; Congress Quits.

PETROGRAD, Friday, Oct. 5.—The government council, the representatives of the Moscow industrial interests, and five peasant and soldiers' delegates from the democratic congress, who have been in conference in an earnest attempt to settle Russia's political and economic crisis, had not reached an agreement when they took a recess this evening until late at night, after six hours' consultation with a view to the formation of a coalition cabinet.

The men, as they came out of the conference room, appeared still in a hopeful frame of mind, although the government spokesmen would not describe the situation as one to be viewed with optimism.

The conference, which was held in the winter palace with Premier Kerensky presiding, was a unique gathering—representative of revolutionary Russia. It was the first time that the shaggy peasants and soldiers, who had been accustomed to demonstrating against and attacking the bourgeoise, had sat with them on equal terms at the council table.

Name Parliament of 305.

The Moscow representatives, MM. Kishkin, Konovaloff, Tretiapof, and Smirnoff, wealthy industrial leaders, carefully groomed and suave in manner, contrasted sharply in the council room picture with their bluntly eloquent opponents in peasant garb.

It is understood that the government as well as the Moscow leaders stood firmly for the necessity of admitting representatives of the Constitutional Democrats to the cabinet and that this question was still the stumbling block at the hour the recess was taken.

The democratic congress adjourned tonight after having appointed a preliminary parliament of 305 members who will begin their sitting tomorrow and continue in session until the meeting of the constituent assembly.

Call New Congress.

Simultaneously the Petrograd council of soldiers' and workmen's deputies, disappointed with the work of the democratic congress, has ordered the convocation of a general council of the soldiers and workmen's deputies of all Russia to meet in Petrograd.

The adjournment of the democratic congress seemed to complicate rather than clarify the cabinet situation. The resolution adopted by the soldiers and workmen's deputies declaring the country in grave danger from a counter revolutionary movement also charges that the parliament convoked by the democratic congress includes conservative forces which are strong enough to block the course of true democracy.

The situation thus may resolve itself into the case of two parliaments sitting at once and each claiming power.

Sacred Image to Rule Soon, Russian Peasants Are Told

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

(Special Cable to The Tribune.)

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 6.—Russia soon is to come under the protecting arms of sacred images, which suddenly have been endowed with superhuman powers. These images have begun to show their powers and have found voice to express their missions in certain churches, where long they have been looked upon with great reverence.

The sacred images have been endowed with power to take control of Russia because owing to the arrest and exile of former Czar Nicholas and the muddling efforts of the revolutionary leaders afflicted Russia lacks a natural protector.

This story is being circulated by thousands of peasants in the vast farming district governed from Moscow. And hundreds of thousands are believing the story.

The sacred images found voices on the very day and at the very hour that the czar abdicated, the more convincing of the story spreaders say.

And in the government of Tomsk, Siberia, the older people continue praying to the czar. In their prayers they say: "So long as we had the czar we had everything—bread and goods; now we have nothing."

Similar prayers are being offered in the government of Ufim, where the peasants say: "Now you see no czar and no goods, and all these evils come from the revolution."

Basis of Propaganda.

The circulation of the stories concerning the sacred images and the printing of the peasants' words about the czar in their prayers afford events of far more importance than that of merely providing fresh curiosities in the annals of superstitions.

This is so because they are being made the basis of a widespread newspaper propaganda against the revolutionary elements by the reactionaries. They print the stories as proof of what the vast masses of the peasants think of the revolution.

The most remarkable fact in connection with this propaganda is that these stories are appearing in newspapers originally among the most loyal to the revolution, such as Volia Naroda, the Socialist-revolutionist journal, sometimes called Kerensky's paper.

Reactionaries Snap Them Up.

Naturally such stories are snapped up eagerly by the reactionary papers like Milukoff's Retsch and given further circulation as proving the peasants' growing distrust of the revolution and the provisional government.

The printing of this sort of propaganda has become one of the significant indications of the most ominous of the recent political developments in Russia, with its factional wrangling and the constant splitting up of the revolutionary parties.

The steadily rising tone of the demands of the Bolshevikists is causing the less audacious of the revolutionary elements to launch a more or less open campaign with the purpose of proving how the radical platform of the Bolshevikists and their declamations against a coalition cabinet are disgusting the country with all the workings of the revolution.

Started by Moderates.

Revolutionists who consider themselves constructionists as well as revolutionists regard a coalition cabinet as feasible and the only way in which to work out the government of the new republic to success. Their opponents insist that the acceptance of a coalition cabinet means betrayal of all that the revolution has accomplished or may accomplish.

To forward their opinions the moderate revolutionists inaugurated this backfire of reports from the interior in order to show the peasants' impatience with the delays caused by the factional wrangling. Thus the Edinstvo, the intensely Social Democratic paper of Plechanoff, the old revolutionist, reports a meeting in the province of Twerskos at which a resolution was adopted which said:

"Such famine, such outrageous prices, such lack of goods as now exist were not the case a year ago. These conditions came into being with the revolution. Therefore, to end the famine, we demand the restoration of the old régime. Let us have the czar again."

"Long for Old Regime."

The Volia Naroda prints an article signed by "Son of a Russian Village" which says:

"The Russian population, staggering under the burdens imposed, welcomed the revolution with great hope. They saw in it a means of escaping from their heavy troubles. Six months of useless talk, speechifying, and waves of incomprehensible words have changed their minds concerning the benefits of revolution.

"Thanks to certain people, who merely are trying to get the upper hand and have not at heart the interests or feelings of Russians, there is a reaction against the revolution. The people are beginning to long for the return of the old régime."

People Favored Korniloff.

Commenting upon this statement by "Son of a Russian Village," the Retsch says:

"It is remarkable that such news should be printed in papers pretending to hold the patent for expressing the nation's soul," and then it adds: "In full harmony with these mournful and anxious observations are the facts, confirmed by various papers, that Gen. Korniloff's revolt was very popular among the people."

The Retsch then prints this statement by one of its correspondents:

"I was not in Petrograd at that time. I was traveling, and when the news of Korniloff's revolt reached me, while on a train between Charkoff and Moscow, I must say that a majority of the passengers were not on the side of the provisional government.

"All this growing feeling will imperil greatly the revolution. It is high time that we ceased making speeches and turned to the work of organizing government and order in our country. When will we finally come to our senses, and who will give us the first push toward this work?"

WAR SECRETARY COMING TO URGE POLES TO ENLIST

Baker and Paderewski to Speak at Rally Here Next Sunday.

One week from today, on the anniversary of the death of Thaddeus Kosciusko, Polish citizens of the United States will start a campaign to gain recruits for the army which they hope will restore their native land to its old position as one of the world's great nations.

Paderewski and Secretary of War Newton D. Baker are to be the chief speakers at the meeting in the International pavilion at the stockyards when the campaign is started by the Polish central relief committee. Prince Poniatowski will be present with other members of the Polish commission, which is headed by Col. Gasiorowski. The official colors will be presented to the commission during the exercises. The standard has been made by members of Polish women's organizations in Chicago.

Baker's Statement.

"It has been brought to the attention of the war department that the military commission of the national department of the Polish central relief committee, located in Chicago, Ill., intends to start on Oct. 14, 1917, an active campaign for recruiting for the Polish army now engaged in fighting on the western front in France.

"Having in mind the attitude of this government toward a united and independent Poland, the war department is glad to announce that it is entirely in accord with the proposed plans of this military commission, and that the department trusts that this recruiting campaign, looking to the strengthening of the Polish army already fighting in association with the armies now in France, will be a success."

Paderewski's Plea.

Paderewski issued the following appeal:

"Our army is needed not for France but for Poland. Occupied by the enemy, Poland is prevented from sending her sons to join the ranks of freedom's champions. But you are here, you, the worthy sons of a valorous race. In your hands rests the honor of Poland and her future.

"Go, to give testimony that the American Pole is a worthy heir to the glory of Polish arms.

"On to the fight! Let the proud watchword of our forefathers be your watchword. The God of your forefathers, who made triumphant the swords of Chrobry, Lokietek, and Jagiello against the aggressive Teutonic hordes, will answer the prayer of the luminous, immortal Kosciusko's spirit, and will grant you victory and glory."

Indicted Head of Defunct Iowa Firm Is Acquitted

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Oct. 6.—Tom L. Wilder, president of the defunct Iowa Mercantile company of this city, who was indicted by a Jones county grand jury on a charge of cheating by false pretenses, was acquitted by a Cedar county jury today. The failure of the mercantile company cost 1,500 stockholders in eastern Iowa more than $100,000. Two other officers of the company who were indicted in this county have not been apprehended.

SOLID SIX SUN SHINES OUT EVEN IN COAL WEATHER

Paper Christens Itself as Official Organ of the School Board.

The Solid Six Sun, the new school board publication, was offered to the public yesterday at "two cents to our friends, free to all others." Its permanent motto is "Let the sun shine." It's temporary motto is a quotation attributed to Fred Lundin: "We don't want no highbrows. We want fellows what will vote."

There are four pages to the new publication, a large part of which is devoted to the idiosyncrasies of the "solid six," those six school trustees who shape the destiny of the board of education.

"Our esteemed contemporary, the Republican," reads the salutatory, "was established as the official organ of our most popular mayor. It extols his virtues and his policies. So the Solid Six Sun comes into being as the official mouthpiece of the Solid Six and their friends.

Date of Issue Problematical.

"Its day of publication will always be a matter of speculation. The Solid Six Sun may shine any day; then again it may not shine for weeks.

Although the name of Jacob M. Loeb does not appear in the paper, it is said authoritatively that he is the editor. There are no advertisements except the Sun's own back page advertisement of a prospective mystery story called "The Ghost of the Sixth Floor," or "The Buried Treasure, being a sequel to Grafty's History."

"Dr. Londeen" an Editor.

In the inside pages there are three special departments, called "HOW TO KEEP WELLthy," by Dr. Londeeen; "The Menagerie," being a department of Solid Six social notes; and "Letters from the Great Sun Family."

Some of the locals printed are:

"Hon. Al Severinghaus, the Thirty-third ward laundryman, has returned from Putnam, Ill. Al says he had a swell time hunting with some of the boys down there. By the way, we want all our friends to read Al's wonderful literary production known as 'Resolutions on that lively minority member.' There is some talk of getting Al to quit the laundry business and go into the magazine field. We're all for you, Al."

"We are going to be able to take care of a good many of the boys during the coal weather. Arrangements are being carried out by the civil service commission to hold examinations for real estate experts, building construction engineers, supervisors of furniture, and any other positions which we can think of. None of the good workers out in the wards need hesitate in suggesting any place which they think they might get employment in."

Northwestern Announces Changes in Time Tables

Northwestern trains will run under numerous time changes beginning tomrrow, according to time table announcements made by officials yesterday. This will affect both through and suburban trains. The Sunday train to Belvidere, Rockford, and Freeport, heretofore leaving at 9:05 a. m., will leave at 8:35 a. m. The daily train to Sheboygan, Manitowoc, Green Bay, and Rhinelander heretofore leaving at 11 a. m. will leave an hour earlier.

Fan Falls; $10,000 Suit.

Mrs. Mildred Gilogy, 6046 Dorchester avenue, filed suit for $10,000 yesterday against Jesse Beck, owner of a restaurant in Sixty-third street, for injuries alleged suffered when an electric fan fell on her head while she was dining.

PICKET CHIEF IS BAGGED IN ARREST OF 11

Washington, D. C., Oct. 6.—[Special.]—Eleven more suffragists, including Miss Alice Paul, chairman of the woman's party, and director of the heckling of President Wilson, were arrested at the east gate of the White House this afternoon for picketing.

They were taken to headquarters in the police patrol and were later released upon payment of $25 each for their appearance in police court Monday morning.

Miss Jeannette Rankin, congresswoman from Montana, today introduced a resolution in the house providing for a congressional investigation of conditions at Occoquan. The resolution provides for the appointment of a select committee of seven members.

It was referred to the rules committee and probably will be acted upon at the next session of congress.

Melrose Citizens in Protest.

A merry teapot tempest has arisen at Melrose Park. The village board has decided that the new controller's office shall consist of half the present public library room. The library board, backed up by a strong following of citizenry, has declared its opposition, and pending a joint meeting of the warring clans Monday night the controller is out in the cold.

AUTOS KILL 4; THREE VICTIMS ARE CHILDREN

Four deaths yesterday were caused by automobiles in various parts of Chicago. Mary Czalensk, 3 years old, of 1710 Newberry avenue, was run down and killed in front of her home by a truck driven by Fred Meyer of 4923 Potomac avenue. He was not held.

Mary Zuska, 9 years old, of 3424 South Union avenue, was killed near her home by a truck driven by Henry Vetter, 1416 Fifty-fifth street, who was arrested.

Peter Schrieber of 2049 Larrabee street, who was struck by an auto in Lincoln park on Sept. 23, died in the Columbus hospital. Samuel Lavine, a chauffeur, is being held.

Alexander Goletti, 5 years old, of 4940 North Ridgeway avenue, was knocked down and fatally injured by a truck near the Swedish Covenant hospital. He died in the hospital, where his father is a staff physician.

Mary Muskovich, 3 years old, of 1523 Devon avenue, is in a serious condition in St. Francis' hospital as the result of being struck by a motor car.

BART MACOMBER'S GRANDMOTHER ENDS HER LIFE

Mrs. Mary Macomber, 74 years old, grandmother of Bart Macomber, formerly University of Illinois football star, died yesterday in the West Suburban hospital an hour after she had swallowed poison.

Mrs. Macomber had lived for twenty years at the home of Frank B. Macomber, 511 North Ridgeland avenue, Oak Park, father of Bart Macomber. Her husband, Levi, 74 years old, also lived there.

"My mother had been worrying a great deal over the temporary mental derangement of her maiden sister, to whom she was strongly attached," Frank Macomber said yesterday.

An inquest into Mrs. Macomber's death will be conducted Monday.

Shoop Addresses Federation.

How school teachers may help in the war was told by Supt. of Schools Shoop at a meeting of the Chicago Teachers Federation in the Hotel La Salle yesterday afternoon.

POLICE SQUADS PICK UP CROOKS NEAR BALL GAME

Up to a late hour last night Chief of Detectives James L. Mooney had not received a single report of a pickpocket or con man who had successfully made a haul during the day.

With the large number of out of town visitors in the city Chief Mooney had expected that the pickpockets and con men would attempt to extend operations. Early yesterday he assigned forty picked men to look after that detail. He gave instruction to arrest every known criminal they encountered. The detectives were assigned to ride all street cars and elevated trains running to and from the White Sox baseball park. Detectives were detailed at cross lines.

More than twenty-five criminals were arrested during the day and efforts to obtain a release by habeas corpus attorneys were futile, as a number of the courts had closed. They will be locked up until Monday morning, when they will be arraigned for trial. Another drive will be made today.

Sergt. Maj. C. P. Taft Weds Daughter of Irving Chase

Waterbury, Conn., Oct. 6.—[Special.]—Miss Eleanor, the daughter of Irving H. Chase, was married here today to Sergt. Maj. Charles Phelps Taft II., U. S. A., son of William H. Taft and Mrs. Taft of New Haven.

The ceremony was at Rose Hill, the home of the Chase family. Flags predominated in the decorations. The Rev. Robert E. Brown, pastor of the Second church, officiated. The bride was given away by her father, Irving H. Chase.

The matron of honor was Mrs. James R. Sheldon Jr., the maid of honor Miss Lucia Hosmer Chase, and the flower girls Elizabeth Irving and Dorothy Mather Chase. The attendants were all sisters of the bride. The best man was Lieut. Walter Wolff, U. S. A., of New York, and the ushers were Capt. S. Kellogg Plume, Ensign Robert H. Holcomb, U. S. N., of Proctor, Vt., and Robert Taft of Washington, D. C.

Woman Swallows Poison.

A woman believed to be Mrs. Alice Veliet, 6730 South Racine avenue, walked into the South Clark street police station yesterday and said she had swallowed poison. She was taken to St. Luke's hospital, where she is not expected to live.

MILLER READY, HE SAYS, TO TELL OF SALOON CASE

City Prosecutor Harry B. Miller asserted yesterday he had not been called upon by State's Attorney Hoyne to explain his connection with the dropping of a case in the Municipal court against a saloonkeeper for whom Francis A. Becker is alleged to have interceded with the city prosecutor.

The state's attorney charged Mr. Miller had been named in a confession obtained during the investigation of Becker's activities on the north side.

"I have not heard from Mr. Hoyne," said Mr. Miller. "If he wants any explanation I am willing to give it to him. Hundreds of people are introduced to me and some of them ask favors, but getting the favors is another matter."

Sorority Holds Party.

3,000 ROOKIES COME HOME ON ONE DAY'S LEAVE

First Exodus from Camp Grant Fills Special Trains.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Camp Grant, Rockford, Ill., Oct. 6.—For the first time since they came to Camp Grant national army, men from Chicago, northern Illinois, and Wisconsin today were given leaves of absence for a period long enough to permit them to visit their homes.

Contrasted with the total number now in camp there were not many of them, for the order specified that leave could only be issued to those men who have been here two weeks or longer. But it was estimated that fully 3,000 men were carried from Rockford on special trains early in the afternoon and on regular trains later in the day.

The men going home included most of the 2,000 included in the first increment, who have completed their first month as soldiers. The leaves today run from noon until taps—11 o'clock—tomorrow night.

Tuesday Will Be Pay Day.

Beginning next Tuesday will be pay day for every man who arrived prior to Oct. 1.

The total pay roll for the camp for September will amount to $1,076,000, of which $726,000 will go to the 18,000 enlisted men sent in in the first two increments. The task of disbursing the money is in the hands of Lieut. O. W. Gralund, Q. M. C., assistant to Camp Quartermaster W. O. Smith.

C. S. Head in Uniform.

Cloyd S. Head, conscientious objector, who was sent here a prisoner last week, was today put in a uniform. After two days' freedom from policing work, during which he was allowed to remain in the guardhouse and think his case over, the Oak Park playwright determined to accept the offer of an assignment in a noncombatant branch. He was assigned to the sanitary trains which will do the ambulance and field hospital work of the division.

Earl Anthony, who says he is a minister, is the only one of the original eight prisoners still in custody. He insists that God doesn't want him to join the army in any capacity. His statement concerning his intimate conversations with the Deity probably will be repeated before a sanity board next week.

Men Fight It Out.

Thousands of men turned out this afternoon to see the "grudge battle" between Private Harry Cohen and Private George Heffernan of Company D of the Forty-fourth infantry. They quarreled during the week and the captain ordered them to hold their tempers until they could don the gloves during the boxing program of the One Hundred and Seventy-second brigade. They went at it hammer and tongs for two rounds, and both were battered up, but they shook hands when it was all over.

Two chaplains, the first to arrive, reported for duty. They are the Rev. Aloys Zingen, formerly of St. Ann's Roman Catholic church, Milwaukee, Wis., and the Rev. A. W. Center, who came from the parochial college at Columbus, O.

NEW ARMY PROMOTIONS

Second List of Men Who Win Honor at Rockford Is Given Out.

Wedding and Outfit Free to Some Soldier and Bride

You supply your own bridegroom, then get into communication with Thomas Convey, 1513 Wabash avenue—telephone Calumet 327—and enter yourselves in the Would-Be Bride and Groom contest to be staged at the fourth annual Home Furnishing Exposition on Oct. 18.

You—or at least one of the couples—will be selected as the handsomest and best matched and will thereupon receive a free home furnishing outfit and wedding ceremony at the Coliseum on Oct. 24.

Hurry.

U. S. Negotiates for Ships from Steel Corporation

New York, Oct. 5.—[Special.]—The steel trade understands that negotiations are proceeding between the government and the United States Steel corporation for fifty standardized steel ships, and it is expected that a contract will be made shortly. The ships will be constructed, or rather assembled, at Mobile, Ala., according to present plans, it is said, and the standard sections of steel will be supplied by the steel corporation's Birmingham properties, so that practically all the activities in connection with this work will be confined to the south.

Sorority Entertained.

Members of Theta Sigma Phi sorority were entertained in Hotel La Salle yesterday by Miss Marguerite Campbell, 5000 Dorchester avenue, at a tea and card party.

SMALL CROWD BUT BIG NOISE OFF TO ROCKFORD

The low water mark in the movement of national army men from Chicago to Rockford was reached yesterday when only 200 men from city districts started for Camp Grant. The quotas which left were from divisions 36, 64, 62, and 63.

As far as the loop district was concerned, there might have been no troop movement at all. The single train left Clybourn on the Chicago and Northwestern at 8:30 a. m., stopping at Avondale, Parkview, and Irving Park to pick up contingents. A stop was also made at Des Plaines for the contingent sent by Cook county board No. 1.

Whatever the men lacked in numbers they made up in enthusiasm. There were crowds at each of the stations to speed them on their way.

The last of the 20 per cent contingent will leave the city today on two trains. The divisions which will send men are Nos. 34, 47, 10, 11, 53, 50, 66, 74, 78, 80, 25, 38, 41, 44, 60, 68, 75, and 76.

JACKIES TO HOLD CELEBRATION ON COLUMBUS DAY

Capt. Christopher Columbus is coming to Chicago next Friday, which is the anniversary of the day he discovered the United States. He is going to arrive in an airboat, and will start from his craft, the Santa Maria, at Grant park, where he has been doing light housekeeping since 1893, the year of the world's fair.

When he gets to the camp at Grant park he will be met by an honor guard of 200 jackies, a part of the 1,000 now in training there. "Little Miss Chicago," daughter of Capt. Evers, will present a key to the city to Christopher. A number of patriotic societies will assist in making the day a glorious patriotic pageant.

There will be parades, baseball, athletic events, and lots of things. The camp expects to break up the middle of the month, and the jackies look forward to this as their last big fun time in Chicago.

Salvador Backs U. S. in War Against Germany

SAN SALVADOR, Salvador, Oct. 6.—The United States government has made an inquiry in regard to the significance of the declaration by the government of Salvador of neutrality friendly to the United States. The foreign office has replied that Salvador considers herself associated with the United States by reason of her sentiments in favor of pan-Americanism in the world struggle.

Only 1,688 Claims Filed Against Paisley Banks

Referee in Bankruptcy Sidney C. Eastman reported yesterday that but 1,688 claims had been filed by creditors against the defunct Paisley & Sons private banks despite the fact that 3,200 claims had been scheduled. Yesterday was the last day to file claims.

Winter Dangers!

You won't freeze to death this winter—even if coal is short and cold severe.

But you may die of the diseases produced by poisoned air and drafts—twin terrors that slaughter countless thousands every winter. As sure as day follows night the death rate from consumption, pneumonia, rheumatism, etc., will soar this winter as it has every winter in the past.

Berry Ventilators Will Protect You

Whole Ventilating System

The Berry Ventilator forms a perfect ventilating system in itself. It admits an ample supply of fresh air while the impure air is forced out through the opening between the upper and lower sashes. It screens the air and assures perfect ventilation no matter what the weather.

The Berry Window Ventilator is collapsible, operating like an accordion. It opens and closes with the window. It does not interfere with the operation of the window, and when not in use lies flat on the inside of the sill—out of the way. The amount of air admitted is easily regulated by raising or lowering the window.

One can attach it to the window or detach it within a single second. When attached it positively locks the lower sash whether the window is open or closed.

The Berry Window Ventilator is indestructible, and cannot get out of order. It is made of non-rustable metal, heavily enameled and finished in oak or mahogany.

PHONE OR WRITE

If you live in Cook County we will have a demonstrator call without expense or obligation to you and show you precisely how this wonderful invention works. If you live outside Cook County we will mail you free, descriptive literature, instructions for measuring your windows in ordering by mail, and our guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money refunded.

ACT NOW! IT MAY SAVE YOUR LIFE.

DUAL POWER Motor Cars

Entire control of power, speed and brake is in one pedal

You have always wanted this kind of a car. One that you can control with a feeling of absolute safety. You have felt that some day such a car would be perfected.

Our engineers have worked for the past two years on this one problem alone—to make the gasoline automobile simple to operate—safe to drive—convenient for you.

So now with the Woods Dual Power you get away from transmission gears and levers. You rid yourself of the nervous strain of trying to remember what to do next when you are caught in traffic jams or any tight places on the road. You can step into your Woods Dual Power—turn on the ignition switch, set your hand controls, and with one pedal control instantly start away without further effort.

With this one pedal you control every range of speed from a full stop to the highest speed you have set your control for.

You can drive your car under every condition without changing from your comfortable position on the seat.

Our engineers have perfected every detail of this wonderful combination of gasoline and electricity which has brought you the car you have wanted.

Come in and see what they have developed—get into the Woods Dual Power and drive it yourself. The whole operation of driving is as distinctive as walking.

If you could pick the transmission, the gear shifting lever, the clutch and the brake lever out of your present gasoline car, throw them away and still get greater flexibility of control of power than you now get, you would have a car that is equivalent to the Woods Dual Power.

That is what our engineers have done—they have thrown away the transmission, the clutch and the regulation type of brake control.

But they have produced the most luxurious, easiest riding, simplest controlled, quietest gasoline car on the market.

Come in and look at this new series Woods Dual Power.

RAINBOW MEN OF ILLINOIS FORMED INTO OWN CLUB

University Alumni with the 149th Form Body After Feast.

BY RICHARD C. BURRITT.

Camp Mills, N. Y., Oct. 6.—There has been born at Hicksville, Long Island, the Rainbow Illini club, which will affiliate with the charter organization. It came into the world on a full stomach, a soldier's delight, at the country estate of W. J. Walzer, graduate of Illinois university class of '15.

Mr. Walzer invited alumni and students of the university in Col. Henry J. Reilly's regiment to his Long Island home. Battery F, the University battery, and other university students belonging to the regiment, attended to the number of 150. After dining and dining and dining a division club was proposed.

They made Second Lieut. Dwight F. Heath, formerly a professor of mathematics, president; Danny Elwell, the top sergeant of Battery F, vice president, and Sergt. Karl Geisendorfer, secretary and treasurer.

Clubs to Aid Men.

Mrs. Athalie Unger of Chicago, who has been adopted as the "mother" of the Sixty-seventh Artillery brigade, has started a quadruple movement to provide comforts for the brigade which is composed of troops from Illinois, Indiana, Minnesota and Maryland. As a result of her activity the Chicago club of New York, Mrs. Henry P. Wall, of 51 West Ninety-fourth street, New York, president, has pledged coöperation, and so has the Illinois club of New York, Mrs. Thomas Slack, president.

Mrs. Wall visited the Illinois camp today with Mrs. Unger, preparatory to a joint meeting of the Chicago and Illinois club of New York, to be held at the Hotel Astor on Thursday, Oct. 11. Plans will be laid at the meeting to help supply deficiencies in equipment. The officers of the Chicago club, besides Mrs. Wall, are Mrs. John Marshall Gallagher, vice president; Mrs. Frederick William Waller, wife of the vice president of the National Biscuit company, second vice president; Mrs. Rupert Pitt O. Relle, formerly Miss Frances K. Porter of Chicago, recording secretary; Mrs. Irving Crane, treasurer, and Mrs. M. L. Rimes, corresponding secretary.

Girls to Make Ration Heaters.

In addition Mrs. Unger will seek the coöperation of President Nord of the Indiana Society of New York, and the presidents of the Minnesota and Maryland clubs of the same state. Former Illinois residents living in New York are keen to give all possible assistance.

U. S. Seeks $13,790 Fees.

Assistant United States District Attorney Witty yesterday asked Federal Judge Carpenter for an order instructing the Chicago Title and Trust company, receivers for the Graham & Sons bank, to turn over $13,790 naturaliation fees held in the bank to Richard K. Campbell, United States commissioner of naturalizaztion.

CAMP LOGAN MEN TAKE THEIR FIRST HIKE

Camp Logan, Houston, Tex., Oct. 6.—The first hike of the encampment took place on Thursday. All the artillery regiments went for eight miles, with all the animals and wagons. Under the hot Texas sun the walk was something of an exertion, but most of the men went through it like real Illinois soldiers.

The following promotions in the One Hundred and Twenty-second Field artillery were announced during the week. To be corporals:

Everett E. Friganza,
Warren P. Sherman,
Harold E. Currie,
Lindsey Fairweather,
Leland G. Wesley,
William H. Damron,
Lawrence S. Schulte,
Kenneth Kavanaugh,
Joseph E. Clark,
John Bettenbender,
Samuel J. Deitch,
George E. Doelle,
William Hartman,
Grover D. Motherwell,
John A. Rollins,
Thomas Milton,
Bruce Henderson,
Harold B. Schulte,
Fred Hatch,
Burt V. Miller,
Robert K. Hoy,
John D. McCarthy,
Walter R. Jackowic,
Hall F. Keggle,
John A. Trieder,
Duncan McVicker,
Benold A. Schwartz,
Fred A. Sell,
Edward A. White,
Leslie E. Delihan,
Reuben H. Aldine,
Frank K. McCarthy,

TO SERGEANT.

Archie Van Horn,
Gifford W. Stratford,
Joseph P. Skehan,
Matthew J. Berry,
Daniel F. Parker,
George Campbell,
Frank O. Pohrte.

A report went out some time ago that some of the officers of the quartermaster's department had been reassigned to Boston, Mass. Among these officers were Maj. F. W. Barber of Chicago and Capt. Shand of Chicago. The report was true at the time but the order reassigning the men has been rescinded and they will probably go through with this division.

The wives of the officers of the division are discovering that Houston with its many hotels and homes is a delightful place to spend the winter. Some of the wives here now are Mrs. John A. Holabird, Mrs. H. D. Orr, Mrs. Leland Bass, Mrs. Fred Lippert, and Mrs. William A. Swift. Mrs. Hill, mother of Gen. H. H. Hill, commander of the Sixty-fifth Field brigade, is at the Rice hotel for the winter.

Women-folk need not worry about the health of their boys here. We have a mosquito expert with us. The worthy is none other than Lieut. F. W. Davies of Boston. Lieut. Davies admits he is the champion mosquito Sherlock and exterminator of the country. He is open for a contest at any time. Yesterday he confided in THE TRIBUNE correspondent that there were but two uncaptured mosquitoes in camp and that they were to old and decrepit to do any harm.

JAIL BOUNCER OUSTS SHYSTERS AND BONDSMEN

Sheriff Traeger and Jailer Will Davies have declared war on the shyster lawyer and professional bondsman. They have created the office of "jail bouncer." Earl Waters, a guard, has been given that official title. He has been placed in the outside corridor of the jail and his duties are to drive away and prevent the shyster lawyer and professional bondsman from preying upon the weak and innocent mother, wife or sister who is forced to visit the jail. The innovation which has been on trial for a week is reported as meeting with success.

Fall from Porch Proves Fatal.

Nicholas Basaliga, 7061 Sixty-second street, Argo, died from skull fracture yesterday. Basaliga fell from the rear porch of his home on Sept. 26.

U. S. IS PREPARING CAMP LOGAN FOR WINTRY BLASTS

Mess Halls and Baths to Be Inclosed and All Made Snug.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Camp Logan, Houston, Tex., Oct. 6.—[Special.]—With the approach of winter the war department has decided to place glass in the mess hall windows to insure a warm place for the men at meal times.

The only cold weather here is caused by the so-called "northers"—a north wind accompanied by vast quantities of rain. The spell lasts three days at the most and then the warm southern weather prevails again.

Hot Baths to Be Provided.

All the shower baths in the camp will be inclosed and heated, providing hot baths as well as cold.

The plans also provide for the erection of an administration building to house all the branches of the division. Two hundred and fifty stables will replace the open corrals.

Enough winter uniforms for all the men are either at the camp now or on the way here. A new order from the war department provides for two suits of heavy wool underwear for every man.

Consolidating Regiments.

Consolidation of the regiments from twelve to eight companies preliminary to the complete reorganization of the infantry started today.

The Seventh infantry is noted for its brothers. Another set of four came to light today. This is the case of four Foxes. All of them have been detailed to the divisional military police. They are Fred, Charles, J. J., and Robert, all of Company K.

Three Times Married, Her Tie Is Severed Again

For the third time Mrs. Casse M. Lehmann Quintard has had her marital troubles solved by the courts. Yesterday Judge Joseph H. Fitch decided Mrs. Quintard's marriage to George W. Quintard of Bayside, L. I., should be annulled. Mrs. Quintard based her plea on the ground her marriage—this last one—took place within a year after she had been divorced from Otto W. Lehmann on April 1, 1915.

Mrs. Quintard's first venture in matrimony took place in 1904 when she eloped with Ernest E. Lehmann. Divorcing him in February, 1907, she married his brother two months later.

La Porte Company Takes $500,000 in Liberty Bonds

La Porte, Ind., Oct. 6.—The Advance Rumely company, farm implement manufacturers here, today subscribed $500,000 for Liberty bonds. The company purchased a similar amount when the first issue was being sold.

HAMILTON CLUB STIRS SLUGGISH TO PATRIOTISM

Members of the Hamilton club have been nightly conducting a campaign to instill patriotism into indifferent citizens.

The club, by its committee on national defense, has organized a "forum of patriotism" and is sending forth its ablest orators to all sections of the city.

The meetings are being conducted from seven passenger automobiles by teams comprising three speakers, supported by a military detail of three. Every night last week Dearborn street reverberated to bugle calls from three or more automobiles which race through the loop to some fixed point, where they diverge to their appointed corners.

As this campaign progresses it is expected that these nightly meetings will be announced in advance, affording persons who live in sections of the city to be visited an opportunity to prepare for and attend them.

FUND OF $15,000 FOR PROVIDENT HOSPITAL GROWS

Julius Rosenwald has interested himself in Provident hospital of Chicago, whose campaign for an emergency fund of $15,000 has just started. Mr. Rosenwald has contributed $500 to the hospital's deficit.

Mr. Rosenwald is in Washington, but William C. Graves, his secretary, spoke for him as to Provident hospital yesterday:

"Provident hospital stands alone among institutions of the kind in the middle west in its work to ameliorate conditions among colored young women and men. Over 150 colored girls have been graduated by Provident as trained nurses.

"In opening its doors to the young colored physician Provident also has done well."

Escaping Gas Kills Widow.

Mrs. Mary Smith, 65 years old, a widow, was found dead from gas from a defective jet yesterday in her home, 1610 Indiana avenue.

Bostrom Refuses to Revoke Blackstone Annex Permit

In spite of a council committee vote directing the revocation of a permit to the Blackstone hotel for the erection of a twenty-one story annex, Charles Bostrom, building commissioner, declares the permit will stand.

"The permit was issued according to law and with the approval of the corporation counsel," said Bostrom, "and I will not revoke it unless by court order."

The council objects to the hotel annex of 260 feet in height because an ordinance limits construction to 200 feet.

Failed to Pay for $15,000 Worth of Eggs, Charge

Edward A. Bates, arrested last Monday by postal authorities, was held to the federal grand jury yesterday by United States Commissioner Mason in $3,000 bail on a charge of using the mails to defraud. It is alleged Bates bought about $15,000 worth of eggs from farmers and failed to remit the money.

TRIAL IN INDIA REVOLUTION PLOT SET FOR OCT. 15

Federal Judge Landis yesterday set Oct. 15 as the day for the trial of the government's Hindu conspiracy case.

The defendants to be tried at that time are Gustav H. Jacobsen, Chicago real estate dealer; Albert Wehde, curio collector and art connoisseur, also of this city; George Paul Boehm, and Heranda Lal Gupta.

Baron Kurt von Reiswitz, formerly acting consul for the German empire in Chicago, and ten other defendants, most of them Hindus, also were named in the indictments, but the government announced only the first named four were to be placed on trial at this time.

All are charged with attempting to foment a revolution in India against the British government, and this government alleges the plot was laid in Chicago and other cities of the United States.

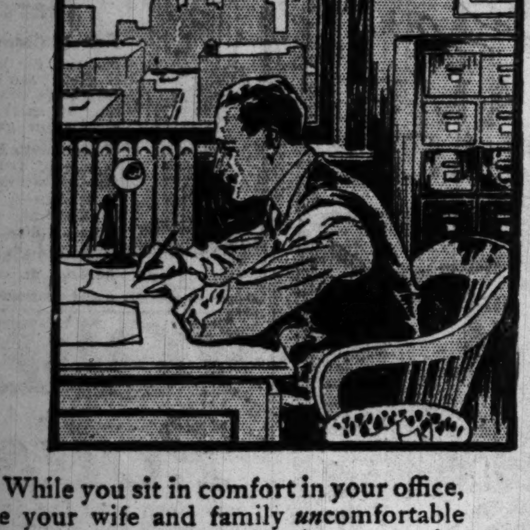
Your Office is Comfortable during Coldest Weather, but What About Your Home?



While you sit in comfort in your office, are your wife and family *un*comfortable in a house with a poor heating system?

Big-Building heating has gone away ahead of home heating. Until recently it was better and cheaper in every way.

But now comes the Dunham Home Heating System—as perfect for the home as the nationally-known Dunham Vacuum System is for hotels and office-buildings.

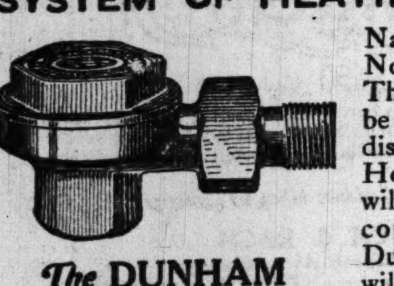
The Dunham System for the home will keep your family as warm and comfortable as you are in your office, and do it on the smallest possible amount of coal.

The Dunham System of Heating controls the dampers automatically—it never lets the fire burn more than is necessary. Overheating as well as underheating is prevented.

The Dunham System is absolutely quiet in its operation. No radiator will hiss or pound, drip or spurt. That wonderful little guardian of the coal pile—the Dunham Radiator Trap—will prevent this waste of heat-units.

The Dunham Home Heating System will not only save you money on your coal bill, but will enable you to render a real service to the Government. The war has made, and will continue to make, severe drains upon the Nation's coal resources. Not a ton must be wasted. The national supply must be conserved and equitably distributed. The Dunham Home Heating System will help you help your country. The coal the Dunham System saves you will release that much coal for war needs.

The DUNHAM SYSTEM OF HEATING



The DUNHAM Radiator Trap

This device is one of the fundamentals of the Dunham Home Heating System. It is known the world over to heating engineers as the device that revolutionized Vacuum steam heating. Leading architects everywhere use it.

EFFICIENT SERVICE

BOARD EXEMPTS DRUGGIST DESPITE 'THE NEIGHBORS'

First Certified Because of Fear of "What They Might Say."

Harry L. Block, a druggist at 638 West Eighteenth street, will not serve in the national army. Appeal board No. 1 yesterday reversed the decision of local board No. 45 and exempted Block.

According to his affidavit Block is 23 years old. He claimed exemption because he is the sole support of his sister, Lillian, 13 years old, and because of business obligations, which consist of meeting regularly a series of thirty-nine $50 notes in payment for his store.

Block also has a brother, Sidney, 19 years old, in the Naperville tuberculosis sanitarium, the board learned. It costs Block $11 a week to keep him there.

August Mattheis, chairman of exemption board No. 45, is a druggist at 2000 Canalport avenue, two blocks from Block's store. Last night he said the local board had certified Block because of conflicting testimony regarding his claims.

"We didn't want the neighbors to think he was let out becaue he was in the same business I was," he added, "so we decided to deny him exemption and let the appeal board work it out."

Asks $10,000 for Daughter's Death.

A suit for $10,000 was filed by Joseph Kunsky, through his attorney, Anton Zeman, in the Circuit court yesterday against Edward F. Kuester, whose automobile struck and fatally injured Kunsky's daughter Aug. 24.

WHY WE KNIT

Women of National Defense Council Score Sisters Who Use Up Needed Yarn for Own Adornment.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 6.—The woman's committee of the Council of National Defense is sending out a request to the women of America to aid in the conservation of wool. Miss Hannah J. Patterson, resident director of the committee, gave out the following statement today:

"With a serious world-wide need for economy in wool, and with nurses, soldiers, and sailors writing their friends and the Red Cross and other organizations for knit garments to help keep them warm in the rigorous winter climate of northern France and the North Atlantic, thousands of women in the United States are using up wool for their personal adornment. Six million garments have been requested of the American Red Cross, and that organization will exert itself to the utmost to provide that number.

"But sweaters cannot be made without yarn. The woman's committee is appealing to the women of the counrty to stop the practice of needlessly and wastefully using yarn for themselves. It is appealing to the spirit of loyalty and devotion to country which will keep any woman from using yarn for unnecessary sweaters for herself when our fighting forces need it."

Pickpockets Get $5,100 from Victim in Elevator

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 6.—Arthur Mittleberg, a real estate dealer, was robbed of $5,100 this afternoon by pickpockets in a downtown office building. Three men left the elevator before he discovered the loss and escaped after a chase when he later saw them leaving the entrance to the building.

GIVE YOUR CANDY MONEY TO WAR, IS SCHOOL SLOGAN

Austin high school pupils have been enlisted in Food Administrator Hoover's campaign for conservation.

"Give the candy money to the Red Cross" requests the latest daily bulletin of the school.

Among other things, here are a few measures of conservation laid down as a war service:

Wednesdays no white bread will be served in the lunch room. This will conserve wheat.

Fridays no meats will be served.

As to butter and sugar, surely we can all be more sparing in their use. Give the candy money to the Red Cross.

Talk about this conservation program at home. Help the homes to see the need of conserving wheat, meat, butter, fats and sugar.

The war is to be won or lost in the twenty million kitchens of America.

Patrick Fehey, who says he lives at 173 Chestnut stret, told the police yesterday that some one had robbed him of $11 while he was taking his afternoon siesta in a North Clark street saloon. Patrick's legs are off above where his knees should be. The stubs are protected by heavy leather casings. He carries crutches and is a bit hard of hearing.

"To think that any man could be so low as to rob a cripple! And to take the money out of there, at that!" said Fehey to the police, indicating the leather casing about his right stub. "But perhaps I've no kick coming after all," he continued, lifting on high in turn the left leg. "For I've just $1,000 tucked away in that one. One thousand dollars! They picked the wrong leg."

The police agreed that the joke was on the man who got the $11.

Poison Proves Fatal.

Mrs. Helen Rankin, who took poison on Sept. 21 in Jackson park because of a separation from her husband, Charles Rankin of Cleveland, died yesterday in the county hospital.

Mrs. Kearney Wins Counter Suit Against Husband

Mrs. Anna F. Kearney is not a habitual drunkard and her husband, Thomas E. Kearney, business agent for the steamfitters' union, is guilty of extreme and repeated cruelty, according to a verdict rendered yesterday in the Superior court. Hearing on a motion for a new trial was set for Oct. 20. Kearney made charges of drunkenness and neglect against his wife and she charged him with cruelty.

1,500 Newspapermen Coming to Convention

Fifteen hundred publishers, editors, circulation, and advertising men will be in Chicago this week to attend the annual convention of the Associated Business Papers, Inc., which is to be held in the Congress hotel Thursday, Friday, and Saturday. The organization is the international body of trade, technical, and class publications. Arthur J. Baldwin of the McGraw-Hill Publishing company of New York is president.

ILLINOIS GERMAN ALLIANCE BACKS ATTACKS ON U. S.

Tracts Assailing Democracy Circulated Among Members.

The recent convention of the Illinois branch of the German-American National alliance in one of its resolutions recommended to all its members they subscribe for a series of tracts issued by Jacob Willig, 3648 North Avers avenue, Chicago. Officials of the alliance said in reply to queries regarding these tracts they were mere "harmless discussions" of international political questions, with no especial reference to America and the war.

The tracts, which are issued weekly, also are sent free, with no explanation of how the expense is defrayed, to 211 German societies throughout the country with a membership said to aggregate 250,000, which are urged to impress upon their members the necessity of having them distributed through turner societies and the like.

"Democracy a Failure."

"That the German people care nothing for the salvation of democracy has this basis—that the so-called 'democracy' is now rapidly coming to be regarded as a failure."

"Whoever stands upon his right to follow his common sense and brains is, whether of high or low degree, whether he is Champ Clark, La Follette, Mason, Kitchin, Stone, or whatever may be his name, pointed to as a 'kaiserist.' William Hale Thompson is, as the 'patriotic' press announces, one of those who should be deported to Germany, since he hesitated to invite to Chicago the French and English guests with 'Papa' Joffre at their head, sent here by Washington."

"Shut In by War Fever."

"Whoever can be pleased that 'we,' who up to this time have lived in the deepest peace with Europe, must now 'defend' our country, despite the fact that, so far as any one can see and despite all declarations to the contrary, that our borders and our coasts are not threatened, he alone is a 'patriot.' And the people, shut in by the clever, press-compelled war fever, have no means and no press by which to give their opinions vent."

"One cannot take up a newspaper without reading of 'heroic deeds,' over which 'we' must be gratified. Phrases, and nothing but phrases, are fed to the people, of which not the least ridiculous is that of Elihu Root's message to the Russians, 'the world cannot exist half democratic, half autocratic.' The world has existed thus in spite of Root. The prince of Suabia could lay his head in the lap of any of his subjects without fear; the Republicans would seriously question whether Wilson could do this."

Says Press Rules Wilson.

"The press announces 'You have to stand by the president. This is your country.' Certainly, but one is not permitted to strive for what is really best for the country. What is best—that the press indicates. The administration only carries out what the reporters formulate."

"It is made plain 'we' must aid England and France as 'democracies' which were not at all prepared for war. Consequently we must aid with our men and our credit all other republics which might come into such a war without means and preparation. But if a bank would do business upon such a basis the stockholders would depose the directors."

Tears and Beers Merge Into Oblivion at Magic Name

An old, thin, clawlike hand slid slowly over the bar like an eagle's talons reaching for prey. Grimy fingers started to close upon four nickels. The owner drank his beer and did not see. But the fat, red faced, and white haired old bartender who looked like he might have spent centuries on the street was on guard.

Down came his pudgy hand upon the clawlike fingers. Glasses jumped, two men quarreling over the war stopped suddenly, and a couple of men stuck their heads out of the back room. The man rubbed his flattened knuckles. The bartender spoke:

"The street's changed. Y' can't pull that stuff no more. Schoemaker'll get ye."

The Tile Cabaret.

The Tile cabaret, with its ten performers and its seats for 150 giddy guests, breathed its last at midnight last night. The little drummer sipped his beer as he beat with one hand, toward the last, and the coatless piano man thumped furiously.

The blonde girl with the thin voice, the fat girl, and the dark girl with the baritone shook their feet wildly.

"They hate leave me," said M. Frank, proprietor. "They've been singing here for months—months. But the cabaret doesn't pay any more. I'm ending it up."

He watched the clock anxiously. Not a minute past time would he run.

"This is the last night. Why do you care?" he was asked.

"Schoemaker," he replied.

"What put the cabaret business to the bad?" said a visitor.

"Schoemaker," said another.

The Oyster Bay.

Over at the Oyster Bay cabaret Negro players were pounding out the music and blowing weird tunes. Only a few people were inside. Two boys in sailor uniform walked in. The man at the door walked them out again.

"Hell, they won't even let us sit down anywhere," said one.

A waiter nudged another, eyed the reporter, who had stood off the first rush for his hat, and said;

"One of Schoemaker's men, eh?"

"When I opened up here eight months ago," said I. Rothschild of the Erie cabaret, "North Clark street was wild and woolly. Everywhere were women of the wrong kind—and men. They're gone now. All gone. Men bring their wives now to sit around and hear the music.

"The old bunch is all chased away. If the places didn't get right they were closed. It's a different street. I'm glad."

"How did it happen?"

"Schoemaker," he replied.

The Bogey Man.

And so the bogey man who has cleansed North Clark street and purged it of its sins was found. He sat in the front office of the East Chicago avenue station. He's a man of few words and many actions. His name is Lieut. William H. Schoemaker and they say he works with two commands. They are 'Bring 'im in" and "Take 'im down in the cellar."

There's just one thing they fear more than Schoemaker in the Chicago avenue precinct—it's "the cellar."

Reputation Goes Before.

When Schoemaker went out there last summer they'd heard that he was some sort of grizzly bear. His reputation had traveled before. Men came and peeked in at the window to see him.

"Bring 'im in. Take 'im down cellar," was the command.

Thirty-two gamblers went down in the cellar in a bunch the other day. Men came and shuffled into the police station at first—only at first—to peer around.

"Bring 'im in," Lieut. Schoemaker would say. They come no more.

A Wealthy Visitor.

The other night a man who had grown vastly rich in the underworld drove up in a handsome automobile, stopped it a couple of doors down, and sent a man inside.

"I've come to bail out—" he said, naming a woman who had gone into "the cellar."

"Who sent you?" growled Schoemaker.

"No one," he said.

"Who sent you?" bawled Schoemaker. "Tell or the cellar."

The trembling denizen of the underside named the man. He said he was waiting nearby.

"Bring 'im in," said Schoemaker to a policeman.

The man was yanked from the car. Schoemaker looked at the door that leads to the cellar. A policeman stood ready.

"Me?" gasped the man.

"Your sort all look alike to me," said Schoemaker. "Keep your hands clean or the cellar."

The Ferndale Club.

Last night the old Ferndale club at 744 North Clark street died in ignominy. A half dozen boys and girls had been dragged out of the cabaret. The owners were fined yesterday morning and their "music taken away."

The place was silent and bare last night. The rear room, long gay, was as merry as a bat cavern. A visitor asked what was the matter.

"Schoemaker," muttered the barkeep.

WIVES, AGED 17, GO BACK HOME TO SPRINGFIELD

Mrs. Esther Carr, 17 years old, comely, went home last night to Springfield, O., feeling that it isn't worth while to be sought as a white slave victim. She was only looking for her 17 year old husband.

With Mrs. Carr went Mrs. Ina King, also 17, also comely, and also permitting a sad tear to trickle down her Greek nose. Over them watched Mrs. J. M. Flarida, mother of Mrs. Carr. A young man from Springfield did not go to the station. Instead he listened to sage advice from the police sergeant and hurried out of sight.

The girls came to Chicago on Friday. They had $25 and their transportation. They lunched at the Blackstone hotel and then found lodgings at 5317 Blackstone avenue. When Mrs. Flarida reached Chicago she told Mrs. Florence Van Amber, matron of the Clark street police station, about the young man from Springfield, who had traveled on the same train. Mrs. Van Amber had the young man arrested when he called for mail at the postoffice. The two women and the young man drove to the Blackstone avenue address and found the girls. Mrs. Carr cried and said she only came to Chicago looking for her youthful husband, who is a student in the Chicago Technical college.

Mrs. King said she was lonely for her husband, who is in France with the army, and she was sorry about inviting out the young man from Springfield. The girls agreed to go home. So did young Mr. Carr.

No white slaves.

Two Weddings in Hotels.

Miss Martha Schneider, 3910 West Monroe street, and Lieut. Chester Ihle, United States medical reserve corps, were married last night by the Rev. F. Fleming in the Hotel La Salle. At the Congress hotel Miss Gretchen Hyman, 4617 Ellis avenue, was married to Simon E. Obermeyer of St. Louis by the Rev. Tobias Schanfarber.

EIGHT AUTOS STOLEN IN DAY; 2 AT BALL PARK

Eight automobiles were stolen yesterday and seven in the twenty-four hours preceding, according to the "auto bulletin" of the police department. Two of the machines were stolen from in front of the White Sox ball park.

These were victims yesterday: H. Jaspar, 1315 South St. Louis avenue; Alex Gleckhaus, 2958 West Thirty-ninth place; Mrs. W. J. Harvey, 5043 Dorchester avenue; M. Bortz, 839 North Sacramento avenue; F. N. Vaughn, 2612 Nordica avenue; J. Bauer, 4737 Sheridan road; Oscar Swanson, [illegible] Berteau avenue; Mrs. C. W. Snyder, 2244 Jackson boulevard; Elite laundry, 219 East Thirty-fifth street.

The cars of Jaspar and Gleckhaus were stolen while they were watching the game.

Fight in Stables Leads to Arrest of Five Drivers

Thomas Baker of 4235 South Fifth avenue, William Mataitis of 3247 South Union avenue, Martin Fitzpatrick of 4514 Lowe avenue, Patrick Sheehan of 307 West Thirty-seventh place, and John Gerhardt of 3030 Groveland park, were arrested yesterday on charges of having attacked two other drivers attached to the Marshall Field & Co. stables at Forty-fourth street and Cottage Grove avenue. Twenty-five boys went on strike and two refused to go out, whereupon, it is charged, the five held went to the barn and attacked them.

Six I. W. W.'s Held.

Portland, Ore., Oct. 6.—Six mambers of the I. W. W. recently arrested at various points in Oregon and Washington on charges of seditious utterances, were held after preliminary hearing in the federal court here today in bonds of $10,000 each. United States Attorney Reames said he would seek their removal to Chicago for trial next Monday.

GLENCOE SPEED CASE TO BE PUT UP TO SCULLY

Evanston police officials yesterday announced the case of Otto Hanson, a chauffeur, fined by Justice Crocker of Glencoe for speeding, despite their protests, would be taken up with County Judge Scully.

Lieut. Thomas Duffy of the West Chicago avenue police station and Capt. Dennis McEnery of Evanston asked the justice to be lenient with Hanson in view of the fact he was arrested while hurrying to Fort Sheridan to take Henry Keirnan to the bedside of his dying mother at 2820 Sheridan road.

According to Capt. McEnery the costs amounted to $4, which he says is excessive, as there was no constable to receive a fee and the justice's costs are only $2 in such a case.

Seek to Attach Two Boats for Damage to Firm Docks

A petition for the issuance of an attachment against the steamer Wilkesbarre and the tug Iowa was filed yesterday in the Circuit court by Stein, Hirsch & Co., 2841 South Ashland avenue, to recover $1,543.61 damages sustained on April 15 when the steamer crashed into and destroyed a part of the docks of the complainant. The Wilkesbarre is owned by the Lehigh Valley Transportation company.

Chicago Girl, Aged 12, Runs Away from Convent

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 6.—[Special.]—Dorothy Partlow of Chicago, 12 year old student at St. Theresa's academy, East St. Louis, with Ruth Lewis of Mugo, Okla., also 12, disappeared from the institution at noon Friday and it is thought they have set forth for some movie studio.

A Big, Powerful Car of Smooth Performance

Its large battery capacity will deliver eighty to one hundred miles per charge, which is in excess of a motor car's daily travel.

It gives smooth performance all of the time.

There is never any jerking or puffing when getting under way, and never any complete stop when emergency demands that you move quickly.

It "picks up" swiftly and briskly.

Just advance the controller handle by a slight forward pressure and you are off at top speed. There are no gears to shift.

It is astonishingly flexible. Its many speeds, quick response to controller movement, and powerful, easily operated foot and controller brakes, take you through the most congested traffic with ease and safety.

It handles lightly and easily. Ball bearing steering mechanism, careful weight distribution and lever steering control, assure the handling of Detroit Electric Cars with no laborious physical exertion. Even a young girl can drive it with safety and certainty.

It is a man's car, a woman's car, and a wonderful all-year car for the entire family.

It is never cranky in cold weather—for it has no engine to chill, nor radiator to freeze.

You are overlooking modern advancement in motor cars if you do not investigate these facts.

When The Sun is Shining or It's Pouring Rain

Air-in
"The coat with lungs"

An AIR-IN is the last word in style and a new thought in comfort—a coat you can wear when the day is fine or when it is pouring rain. An AIR-IN is always comfortable because the special ventilated feature prevents that "stuffy" feeling some raincoats give.

The "lungs" of an AIR-IN are a series of vents or small openings under the plait in the back. The action of the body opens and closes these vents and forces a circulation of fresh air.

Every AIR-IN is guaranteed rainproof and there are models varied enough to satisfy the staidest conservative and the most fastidious young idea. Ask to see an AIR-IN today. Prices range from $13.50 to $25.00. For sale by leading clothing dealers.

TRAMP, TRAMP, TRAMP, THE BOYS ARE MARCHING

Jackies Are So Good at It That It Interferes with Drill.

Next time you meet a jackie from the Grant park training camp ask him how he likes parades. Then dodge.

Parading is becoming a habit with them. Everybody wants them to march. As a marching organization, designed to lend dignity to patriotic demonstrations, they are the most popular deep water fighters that ever got as far inland as Chicago. Their engagement book is as well filled as that of a debutante.

Considerable Marching.

After marching on four occasions last week the jackies have this schedule to look forward to:

Monday—They will march for the G. A. R.

Tuesday—They will assist in observing fire prevention day by marching.

Wednesday—They will march with bond salesmen to arouse Liberty loan enthusiasm.

Thursday—They will march to a tobacco fund meeting at the Coliseum.

Friday—They will march to help the Knights of Columbus raise this million dollar war fund.

Saturday—William Howard Taft will be here and they will march as a part of his entertainment.

And Next Week.

But that isn't all. Next week they will go to Englewood Monday, and Tuesday, when the Hamilton club has as its guest James G. Gerard, former minister to Germany, the jackies will march as his escort.

The marching gives the jackies plenty of exercise, but it is playing havoc with the camp routine. The only escape seen at present is a call for the men to go to a southern camp for the winter or east to be assigned to ships, and Capt. Edward A. Evers, commanding officer, believes this may not come before Nov. 1, although of course it may come any day.

POETS' MEMORIES

Ambulances in Italy to Be Named After American Singers.

The local campaign of the American Poets' ambulances in Italy has begun. Two committees have promised to help. The American poets' love and veneration for Italy gave the idea for the movement. The first ambulance to be designated as a poets' car was given in the name of Francis Scott Key, author of "The Star Spangled Banner," and the second was dedicated to Samuel F. Smith, who wrote the words of "America." With this auspicious beginning the work of naming went on, including such poets as Whittier, Longfellow, Lowell, Stedman and others.

One of the Chicago ambulances is to be given the name of William Vaughn Moody and the other that of Eugene Field.

The following subscriptions were received yesterday:

Charles G. Blanden	$ 25
Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor	100
Emerson Hough	10
Francis Angela	5
Total	$140

Ravenswood Organizations Unite to Promote War

Ravenswood citizens have projected an association of all organizations in the Twenty-sixth ward for the purpose of caring for the war interests of the district. It is proposed to support the interests of men in the army, navy, national guard, the home defense units, and also take care of a part of the work of floating Liberty loans and of arousing general support of the government. A survey of the situation with such a recommendation has been made by a committee composed of C. O. Brown, Dr. A. S. Burdick, F. W. Cady, W. F. Lipps, A. G. Osten, and F. D. Lyon.

He Flies So Well He Need Not Walk to Berlin

Walter Pack will not have to walk to Berlin, after all. He'll fly.

Walter was certified for service in the national army while enlisted for service in the aviation corps at Rantoul. District appeal board No. 1 refused him exemption.

His sweetheart, Miss Irene Ferguson, employed in the clerical department of the board, learned of the action and asked that the case be reopened. After the board had learned Pack is now a graduate aviator and is engaged in instructing students at Rantoul he was exempted.

HALL BARS ALL SOCIETIES WITH TAINT OF KAISER

There is at least one hall, popular with German societies in Chicago, which in the future will not permit societies which have names that arouse antagonism among loyal Americans, to use its premises. This is Wicker Park hall, 2040 West North avenue, run by the firm of Kaeding and Wolterding.

There had been some adverse criticism of the use of the hall last Sunday by the Deutsch-Amerikanischer Unterstuetzungs-Verein von Hindenburg. This is a benevolent society, originally organized for the relief of German families in East Prussia rendered homeless because of the Russian invasion of 1915.

Henry Kaeding, one of the proprietors of the hall, said yesterday that in the future no society with "Von Hindenburg," or "Hohenzollern" or any other name which has been prominently associated with militaristic Germany, will be permitted to use the hall.

Illinois Woman Burned to Death.

Galena, Ill., Oct. 6.—[Special.]—Mrs. Julia Pettigout was burned to death Friday night when she was preparing dinner. Her screams brought neighbors, who found her upstairs on a bed. She was one of the pioneer settlers of this county.

U. S. COMPLETES INVESTIGATION OF I. W. W. PAPERS

The examination by the government of all the records seized in the recent raids of the various offices of the I. W. W. throughout the country has been completed.

Yesterday United States District Attorney Charles F. Clyne informed George F. Vanderveer, of counsel for the defense, that his assistants had completed the investigation of the records and that the government was ready to return about 90 per cent of the property seized. The balance will be retained by the prosecution as material evidence.

Two more of those indicted and arrested in other cities were brought to Chicago yesterday. The prisoners are Alexander Cournos of Sioux Falls, S. D., and Joseph Usapiet of Springfield, Ill. Cournos, it is said, was formerly employed in the United States weather bureau at Sioux Falls.

Dance to Aid Hospital Unit.

In aid of Illinois field hospital company No. 3, in command of Maj. O. F. Frederickson, a dancing party is to be given in the Edgewater Beach hotel on Thursday evening. Dr. I. C. Gary is chairman of arrangements.

U. S. AND JAPAN URGED TO WORK IN HARMONY

A Pacific Port, Oct. 6.—Japanese residents entertained today members of the Japanese parliamentary, school, and railroad missions that have arrived here en route to eastern cities.

"Now that America and Japan are working together," said Marquis T. Masao, head of the party, "I think that we ought to get acquainted with each other so that we may work in harmony for the general good of the Pacific countries and the far east. I think Japan and America should work together for the industrial and commercial development of China. There is nothing to prevent that.

"If some nation wishes to take political action in China, that nation should consult Japan, because geographically we are so close together, historically we are related, and our institutions are interwoven."

The mission will be in this country two months.

Dr. Frost Preaches Farewell.

Dr. T. P. Frost, pastor of the First Methodist church of Evanston, will preach his farewell sermon today. Tomorrow evening Dr. Frost will be the guest of honor in a farewell reception. Members of his congregation have made up a purse which will be presented to the retiring pastor.

CATS TO PURR FOR THEIR NINE LIVES IN COURT TODAY

Felines of All Degrees Are to Be in Evidence in Maywood Row.

Gray cats, white cats, black cats, alley cats, haughty felines of select Maltese and Angora breeding, are likely to hold a cat convention tomorrow in Judge Pinckney's courtroom if the threats of Cornelius R. Adams and John Newell Lucas, attorneys for the complainants in the case of the lovers of cat in Maywood against the village board of trustees are carried out.

The now famous cat controversy of Maywood will be on trial. The cat owners are seeking an injunction restraining any and all officers, villagers, cat haters, bird fanciers, or other interlopers from enforcing an ordinance passed by the village board last June which provides that any cat caught off its owner's premises after dark in the bird mating season, between April 1 and Sept. 1, may be killed on sight without trial or benefit of clergy.

Ordinance Called Brutal.

The ordinance was passed at the instance of the Maywood Bird club, and Samuel A. Harper, its president and legal representative, says all its opponents are catty cranks.

Mrs. Flora Deoddy, the Rev. J. Nelson Brown and his wife, and Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Kavanagh, to say nothing of the eleven other complainants named in the bill filed by Attorneys Adams and Lucas, all insist that the village law is "unreasonable, illegal, brutal, contrary to the statues of the state of Illinois made and provided," which guarantee life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness to all law abiding cats, and a menace to a community dependent upon its feline population for the extermination of rats, mice, and other pests, as well as for pets for the kiddies.

The bill of complaint covers seventeen closely typewritten pages, setting forth in due detail all the virtues of the cat tribe and the cattiness of those who would indiscriminately slay the cats of Maywood.

No Quarter Asked.

It will be fought to the bitter end by both sides, no quarter asked or given, and no money spared.

The cats on exhibition will purr their prettiest; the bird fanciers will dart glances calculated to extinguish each of their nine lives at all the cats of Maywood, duly assembled to demand justice, while the cat lovers will rely upon their pets to convince the court that cats have rights too sacred to be invaded by a mere village board.

P. S. No dogs will be allowed.

N. B. It will be a bad place for rats.

Meow!

U. S. Releases Chicagoan Held in New Orleans

New Orleans, La., Oct. 6.—[Special.]—Samuel J. Weiss, 1321 North Campbell avenue, Chicago, was released from the custody of United States officials today on his own recognizance after being held since last Saturday on a charge of attempting to carry arms and ammunition into Mexico. He was chief wireless operator on the steamship Coahuila when arrested. Federal agents, it is said, suspected him of furnishing information to the German consulate in Mexico.

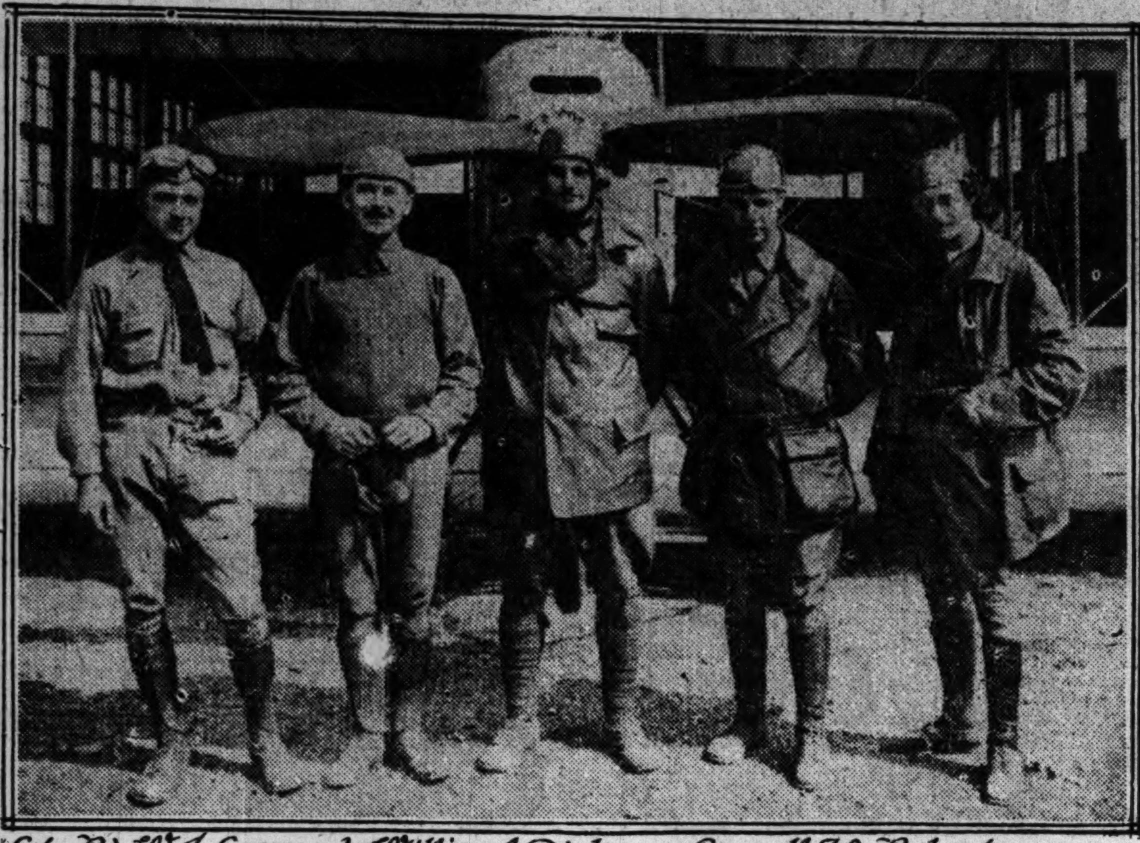
NO LONGER FLEDGLINGS

Five Chicago Boys Have Completed Two Training Courses in Army Aviation Schools.



(L. to R.) W. J. Leonard, Willis A. Diekema, Carroll H. Roberts
Philip J. Morey, Leslie J. Luders

They hope soon to be flying in France—these five Chicagoans, William J. Leonard of 2735 Flournoy street, William A. Diekema of 5448 East View park, Carroll H. Roberts of 3219 Michigan avenue, Philip J. Morey of Oak Park, and Leslie J. Luders of 4753 Sheridan road. The quintet received their theoretical training at the University of Illinois ground school here and have now completed their flying work at the Dayton, O., field.

HEARD FROM

Warren, Ill., Joins In to Give Smokes to Boys in France.

The latest subscription list to be added to "Our Boys in France Tobacco Fund" has been sent in from Warren, Ill. Forty-five residents of Warren have signed it. Others, who have added their names, live in Freeport, Nora, Stockton, and Elizabeth, Ill., Janesville, New Diggins, and Gratiot, Wis., and Cedar Rapids, Ia. How these names came to be placed on the same list it not explained by the senders.

The list is signed by the following: Clarence Myers, Fay Wainwright, C. E. Heath, Clarence Wainwright, Tom Alderson, Mrs. C. E. Heath, Addie Miller, Raymond Anschutz, Leon E. Miller, Jack Savage, George Mahon Jr., John Sincox Jr., William C. Wolfram, Clarence Wolfram, Howard Anschutz, John G. Rummell, Austin Burrows, R. Reed, Addie Miller, O. B. Balbac, Homer Opie, Carol Zeigle, Ray Perry, F. B. King, Roy Mills, Alva Myers, Clarence Wainwright, J. T. Miller, E. M. Maynard, W. E. Stackpole, Kenneth Zeigle, Louis H. Rowe, Daniel Keller, B. W. Mills, Elmer Pansing, Harold Singer, George Bausman, Bob Carson, Carl E. Heath, Thomas Lee, Ralph Randall, Jack Jensen, Mrs. Carrie Eby, Harry C. Tear, Tom Murray, Ethel M. Murray, Paul Roundtree, M. P. Moore, Kingsley Miner, F. Lauterbach, E. T. Meise, Charles F. Huett, A. J. Pegelow, J. E. Cuzine, Gustave Dittmar, Mrs. Minnie Wilcox.

Yesterday's contributions to the tobacco fund were as follows:

Gertrude Adams	$ 1.00
Citizens of Warren, Ill.	15.00
Metal Specialties Mfg. Co.	2.00
C. L. H.	1.00
Total	$ 19.00
Previously acknowledged	6,362.06
Grand total	$6,381.06

Several consignments of tobacco, cigarets, and pipes have been received. A large packing case has come from Cummings & Elliott, Hampton, Ia., and boxes have also been received from William Burkhart, La Salle, Ill.; W. E. Clark, Frankfort, Ind., and E. H. Sheridan, 621 Federal street.

UP GO SMOKES; THREE-FERS NOW ARE 10 STRAIGHT

Popular prices and bargain days in tobacconists' stores went the way of all commodity prices yesterday when many dealers made advances in both cigarets and cigars. Cigarets which heretofore have sold for 5 cents were raised in many instances to 6 cents and the higher priced brands correspondingly.

Cigars which have sold "three for a quarter" went to 10 cents straight. It was announced in many chain tobacco stores that "bargain days" are a thing of the past, and there will be no more price cuts to favor certain brands.

The statement that tobacco increases become effective in thirty days is corrected by the statement of W. W. Carlin of the Dealers' Cigar company, who explains the tax increase became effective Oct. 3 and is now in full force.

There is no tendency toward higher theater prices, it appears from inquiry among Chicago managers. Cohan's Grand Opera House will retain the old price scale, it was said, the Cort will continue to play at $2 and at Powers, where additional expense of production is involved, there will be an increase for the present production to $2.50 a seat.

Ever thought seriously about a used car?

Has it ever occurred to you that you could secure a car of a higher class than you perhaps thought you could afford—and a thoroughly dependable car, too—at the cost of a car of much lower class? Cars that were built last year, or before, cost less to produce—for material and labor then cost less. And in many instances they are better cars than those turned out today. Also new car prices have advanced. So there is the triple saving of (1) the used car price, (2) based upon the lower first price, and (3) the chances of better material and workmanship.

The selling of new Packard cars often involves the disposal of cars of another make—and sometimes used Packards. We would not consider a car that was not in excellent condition. We would not dispose of a car that was not exactly as represented. Packard reputation is at stake in all these transactions. And that is the buyer's guarantee—which makes Packard Used Car Department "the safest used car market in the world."

Decide on one of these big used car values rather than a new car of a lower grade.

No. 658.—Packard Twin Six, 2-35 7-passenger car with Victoria top. The paint is without a mar or blemish and is green—red wheels. Mechanically the car is perfect. Equipped with wire wheels, two extra, and many other accessories. Special upholstery, making it even more luxurious than ordinary. A car of wonderful power, flexibility and style. The price is $2,750.

No. 669.—1917 Cadillac 8, 7-passenger touring car. In perfect condition throughout. Handsomely painted, dark blue. An outfit that is dependable in every way and combines the three essentials—luxury, style and utility. Unusual value at our price of $1,750.

No. 518.—1915 Marmon 41, 7-passenger touring car. Bosch ignition starting and lighting system. Good tires all around. Beautifully painted, blue with carmine striping. A durable, reliable machine—ideal for touring. Original cost $3,350. Our price, $1,000.

No. 543.—Locomobile, small six, 5-passenger phaeton open car. Practically new tires all around. Newly painted maroon and equipped with many accessories. A fine car of wonderful durability and excellent appearance. Original price $4,400, our price, $1,250.

No. 551.—Packard 2-25 Twin Six, 4-passenger coupe. A roomy outfit, driven only 7,000 miles and in perfect condition. Beautifully upholstered in gray cloth and with every appointment to make it elegant and luxurious. Two extra tires, complete with tire covers, and complete equipment. An ideal car for the owner-driver. $3,500.

No. 401.—Packard 1-35 Twin Six, 7-passenger touring car. Newly painted, renewed and guaraneed. A machine of unsurpassed ability—powerful and flexible. Will give perfect satisfaction to the most exacting. A value that cannot be duplicated at our price of $2,000.

Now the $3. Section of Grand Opera Season Tickets Goes on Sale at 9 o'clock Tomorrow Morning

LAST MONDAY the Season Tickets in the $2 and $2.50 Section were placed on sale and before anyone well realized it, the entire number allotted to the Season Ticket privilege was completely sold. There will be no more Season Tickets in this Section this Season. Now, tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock sharp, the entire allotment in the $3 Section will be placed on sale at the Auditorium, 58 East Congress Street.

These will be the last of the moderate priced seats upon which the Season Ticket privilege will be offered at public sale. When these are gone, there will be no more.

The Discount On Season Tickets In The $3 Section Is Approximately 10%

The $3 seats are often called "the best seats in the house at any price." They are in the first nine rows of the balcony and they form the great arc of the brilliant Horse Shoe Curve. The number allotted to the Season Ticket privilege is limited and will not be increased this year.

The Extra Advantage

Every Season Ticket gives the purchaser ten performances—one performance each week or each matinee day for the ten weeks of the Season—and has three advantages. First, it gives you the same seat or seats on the same night or matinee day each week. Second, by the rotation of programmes it gives you all the great stars an equal number of times in all their ideal roles. So that it makes no difference what night or matinee day you choose, you are equally favored, and no opera is ever repeated for you.

And third, in the $3 Section there is a discount of about 10%. So that a Season Ticket of ten performances, costs you $27.50 instead of $30.00.

But the extra advantage in this particular section is that you secure the best seats in the house at a moderate price—possibly the best at any price and you are in a Section where either informal or full dress is equally appropriate.

Please Note: Do not form in line until you have gone first to the charts on the tables inside the lobby and an attendant has helped you choose your night and seats and given you a card. This will save time and prevent the hours of waiting that hundreds of people were obliged to undergo last week.

Orders may be telegraphed from out of town and checks follow by mail.

A Wonderful Season Assured

The most brilliant opera season Chicago has ever witnessed is now assured. All the old favorites will be here. Even the French Government has co-operated by releasing some of our greatest stars from the trenches and permitting them to come here for this great event. Some of them have been fighting for three years, so you can imagine the scenes that will be enacted when these artist-heroes appear again after their long absence.

New artists of International fame are coming from Milan, from London, Paris, Madrid, Barcelona, Buenes Aires and even Mexico City to make their first appearance here this year.

Favorite Operas will be sung again. Old Operas revived and new ones produced for the first time.

Galli-Curci, who is probably one of the three greatest singers ever known, will be here again. As a Season Ticket holder you will hear her the full quota of times. And when thousands of people in gala performances are turned away, your seat will be here.

Muratore, whose creation of great parts, such as Romeo and Don Jose and Faust have been the making of music history, will also be here.

Raisa, whose fame is becoming so great that people have been demanding some Opera where she and Muratore can appear together, will be here again and the Opera Fedora will be put on for them and for you.

Vanni Marcoux, who has been in the Ambulance Corps at the French front for three years is coming again to sing in Tosca and to repeat his wonderful creation of Don Quichotte.

New artists such as Genevieve Vix, the favorite of the great Opera houses of Europe and Marthe Chenal who has sung the Marsellaise in half the army camps in France, will make their initial appearance here this year.

The list of favorite operas and stars is too long to recount. Raisa and Crimi will appear in the Jewels of the Madonna. Rimini will give his Falstaff again in Verdi's opera. Stracciari, the new baritone, whose wonderful voice has been the talk of Europe, is making his first appearance here, and will sing Tonio in Pagliacci, with Anna Fitziu as Nedda. Chenal will open in the Opera Aphrodite. Cleopatre will be given with Maguenat as Antony. Carmen and Boheme and the Jongleur will be repeated with star casts. Dinorah will be given for the first time by the Chicago Company, and you will hear Galli-Curci in the wonderful Shadow Song.

Be Here On Time

Remember, only the Season Tickets in the $3 Section will be sold at this time—the best seats in the house at the moderate price, perhaps the best seats at any price. Remember, also, the number allotted to the Season Ticket privilege is limited, and the assurance of a brilliant Season has stimulated the sales far in excess of last year. So be here on time.

New Member Doubts Welcome from the Gotham Kind.

BY JACK LAIT.

The red-white-and-blue Sox hung one on the proud foe from an Atlantic port yesterday, to the indignant chagrin of many Friars, Lambs in good standing, William Fox stars, Shubert luminaries, K & E celebrities, Long Acre Square habitues, and other representative types of the hyphenated hybrid known as the Manhattan-American.

The section of Mr. Comiskey's nice grand stand given over to the notorious Broadway first-nighters looked like the successful opening of a western author's first play on Forty-second street—everybody was there and everybody semed displeased.

The critics from the cocksure east repressed their feelings, as becomes the demeanor of men accustomed to writing deathless sporting news for actors' breakfasts. They sought to wax ironical, as is their mun'cipal bent, but the hearty western spirit gave them the ha-ha, the star spangled banner floated on in triumph above, and the rarified stockyards zephyrs kissed Happy Felsch and the happy thousands. It was no soft spot for eastern sarcasm—the score didn't come through with a barrage, and the Giants hadn't supplied any camouflage—only camembert.

24 HOURS FROM BROADWAY.

When Al Jolson, who had canceled three nights in the Michigan hinterlands to enjoy a New York holiday in Chicago, saw the first Sox run over the plate, he turned, and, with a gulp, said to William Farnum, who wore a becoming cap of McKenzie plaids and a soft-shoe-leather kimono lined with lamb fleece:

"It's only the first run, Bill."

"Sure," said Farnum, absently. "Wait till the film plays Harlem."

Jack Gleason, the shouting rooter, though bereft of the shrieking support of Louis Mann, who always does the high comedy to Gleason's "straight" in the Polo grounds, muttered:

Cohan was there. His trademark was buntinged all over the park. When interviewed by your correspondent he tersely and tensely said:

"I can only say that, after having seen the Giants, I am more enthusiastic than ever about the Yankees."

O. HENRYS HOLD REUNION.

Many stars of the well oiled Remington (typewriter) were corralled in the press stand, and had the roof thereon caved in there wouldn't have been a bright paragraph in the Christmas number of a 20 cent magazine this year.

It was a transcontinental convention of O. Henrys. They hailed me with jest and jeer—with their customary free handed good fellowship—and joshed me roundly on my recently advertised appellation, "the new O. Henry." They seemed to resent the addition of a new one. But who are they to monopolize the mantle?

Irv. Cobb, the corpulent O. Henry, gave me the right hand of brotherhood and said he was glad I was getting on—he had always regarded me as a bright boy, and he hoped I'd do well.

"HAVE THEY THOSE HERE?"

Grantland Rice, the blond O. Henry, hailed me with a world's series bromide: "Say, where can a party get a taxi? You know, an auto with a Big Ben in it. Have they those here?"

Tad, the top of page O. Henry, and Sam Crane, the prehistoric O. Henry, were whispering sweet nothings to one another—sweet nothings, especially, when comparing data on the Giants' hits and runs.

Many other O. Henrys were among us. There was Victor Munoz of El Mundo, gasetto perfecto di Habana, who was chatting in neighborly fashion with Joe Page of Montreal, the international O. Henry—from the International league.

WHY DAY'S AN EXPATRIATE.

John I. Day, the cigaret rolling O. Henry of the New York Morning Telegraph, the Theatrical Thunderer, was formerly a Chicagoan, but his sympathies were clearly with the Giants, most of whom are engaged to marry prominent soubrettes who advertise in the columns of his journal. He said it was a regrettable incident, and that he felt for Heinie Zimmerman, who was being roughhoused vocally—and Heinie so sensitive and so unaccustomed to western slang.

We had a few local O. Henrys of our own to keep the stand balanced, notably Ring Lardner, the good angel of the western front, who said he hadn't slept a wink since his return to our shores—he misses the lullaby of the artillery so.

Otto Floto, the Kansas City De Maupassant and Denver Balzac, was filing the happy news, and Joe Jackson, organizer of the Baseball Writers' and O. Henrys' union, looking not a whit like Sam Gompers, was enlightening Detroit.

"What do you think of the Sox?" I asked him, in the pursuit of my assignment.

"Cobb will bat better than ever next season," he answered with feeling.

Felsch Wins Liberty Bond.

When Felsch pasted the pill (sporting page stuff) into the south garden stalls (encore!) he won a $50 Liberty bond which will be presented to him with genuine emotion by Al Jolson. Jolson, in addition to "laying off" his show for the period, bet his bank roll, his left eye, his box of burnt cork, his life membership in the Actors' Equity association, his White Rats button, and a hat on McGraw's minions, and he will undoubtedly be pleased over this adventure on the runway of fate.

Only twice was the proud mien of game suffering upon the countenances of the Follies Followers broken—once when the Giants scored their run and once when the gross receipts of the performance were announced via megaphone.

When Fred Belcher heard the man say that the gate had taken in $73,152.50 observed:

"Very good matinée. Looks like a big week."

POLITICIANS OF WHOLE U. S. HELP FILL SOX STANDS

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

A pair of presidents, a dozen or so governors and senators, congressmen, mayors, and other minor officials could have been nominated without difficulty yesterday. Enough politicians from all over the nation were on hand at Comiskey park to do the job on most anything.

Republicans and Democrats of national standing—the fellows that usually boss the big conventions—were sandwiched into the boxes and sprinkled through the grand stand. They didn't do any real politics at the game, but there was plenty of real dope cooking in the hotels and clubs all night long.

Lowden Only One Not There.

If Comiskey prints a list of the ticket holders as a part of his anti-scalping policy Chicago will learn that nearly 100 per cent of her public officials, judges, and political party managers were on the south side. Gov. Lowden wasn't there, but most of the state officers were, headed by Lieut. Gov. Oglesby.

The Supreme court was ably represented by Justices Carter, Craig, and Duncan. Justice Cooke was in Roger C. Sullivan's box. With Mr. Sullivan was Norman E. Mack of Buffalo, who is Democratic national committeeman from the Giants' home state. Brig. Gen. Kennon, commanding the One Hundred and Seventy-first brigade at Camp Grant; Maj. Carlos Ames, Gen. Kennon's adjutant, George E. Brennan, and Frank S. Ryan were others there.

Tom Taggart Brings 16 Friends.

Tom Taggart was up from Indianapolis with a party of sixteen Democratic leaders from the Hoosier state. They had a box just behind home plate. Mayor Jim Dahlman came in from Omaha with a bunch of a dozen Nebraskans, which did not include William Jennings Bryan.

The St. Louis delegation of sixty conspicuous citizens, who forgot politics for the time being, was in a solid block. In the crowd were Postmaster Colin M. Selph, John S. Leahy, James A. McKeown, Joseph D. Griswold, J. P. Moran, Charles Homer, and James H. McTague, the official chaperone of the St. Louis squad.

Mayor Thompson came early. With him were William J. Cooke, Dr. John Dill Robertson, and Assistant Corporation Counsel Cleveland. Corporation Counsel Ettelson had a box party that included Chicago and New York men, one of them Anton T. Zeman, the city hall's candidate for Superior court judge.

Not a Chicago Alderman Absent.

Col. Frank L. Smith of Dwight was there, with John C. Ames. William H. Stead had a downstate party in his box. An official census showed that seventy out of seventy Chicago aldermen were among those present. No Superior, Circuit, or Municipal court judge could be singled out as missing. The county building was there solidly, and if there were any city hall people among the absentees they were the fire and police operators, and maybe a few janitors.

Battle for Hotel Rooms.

Robert E. Conway, Armour's manager at East St. Louis, headed the delegation from Egypt. Southern Illinois had a half dozen prominent boxes. Mayors and prominent citizens from every Illinois municipality—at least all those who could get tickets—rooted for the White Sox. No national convention times in recent history rival the battle that was made by the politicians for hotel rooms after the game was over.

HERE ARE VIEWS ON MR. CICOTTE

"Wait till he faces us again. He'll be driven off the rubber before four innings have been played. We were surprised to learn that he really didn't have a thing."

"Wait till Eddie faces the Giants the next time. He just began getting good when the game was over. He's got the number of every one of them now."

In the Wake of the News

By RING W. LARDNER

AT THE IRISH FRONT, Oct. 6.—[Special.]—The large majority of correspondents try to get a punch into the opening paragraph of their story, believing that the reader will think "Good Gracious! This goop certainly starts off well. He must be a great writer. I must read the rest of it." As good a system, I opine, is to make the first paragraph as dull and uninteresting as possible, so that he who reads will say to himself, "I must find out why the devil the paper ever hired this bird." That is my system, and I'm sticking to it.

We reached Comiskey park in time for the free lunch in the press room. Rollie Zeider was there.

"Hello, Owl Eyes," said he.

"Hello, Hook Nose," I retorted, and he felt like a rummy.

We had turkey with hops dressing, and then ascended to the press stand. They gave me a seat right next to Jack Lait and I could hear spectators in the vicinity remark:

"Isn't it queer to see the new O. Henry sitting beside the modern Mark Twain!"

Not far distant was Fred Mitchell, manager of the Cubs and at present an expert on a rival newspaper. Mitch was sharpening a pencil, thinking some one might want to borrow it.

* *

A man advanced to the plate and made an unintelligible speech through a megaphone. Failing to get applause with it, he waved an American flag and was cheered to the echo. He ought to have been warmly applauded for talking so that no one could understand what he said.

The umpires then came forth and were photographed for the rogues' gallery, after which the official announcer said Sallee would pitch for New York. Whereat several experts round here remarked, "I thought McGraw would just about pitch Sallee." But the records show that nobody thought it enough last night to predict it.

Sallee's camouflage, consisting of a horizon blue uniform and an absolute lack of displacement, was so effective in the first two innings that only one Sox gunner could locate him. This was John Collins, who opened the Chicago first inning with a single. In the third, however, Slim, pitching to Eddie Cicotte with one out, twisted his head so that his profile was in full view of the batsman. Eddie saw a nose and knew there must be a man connected with it. Noses like Slim's and Mr. Zeider's and mine don't float round unattached.

* *

Thus was New York's pitcher's whereabouts made known and his effectiveness shot to hellangone. Eddie hit a single to center. Jack Collins hit a single to right. Eddie tried to go to third on it. Robertson threw him out, the Great Zim making a perfect play at third base possibly because he didn't realize it was important. Jack Collins raced to second while Eddie was being nailed. McMullin hit a single to center on which Collins should have been held at third, but Benny Kauff got himself confused with Jimmy Sheckard and attempted a shoestring catch. The ball knew very well he wasn't Mr. Sheckard and kept right on going, and before George Burns could chuck it back to the infield J. Collins was across the plate and McMullin had attained second, where they left him. "Hell's Bells!" said Slim Sallee.

In the next, or fourth, inning, Oscar Felsch lifted the ball into the lap of an occupant of the left field seats named Eph Wilson, who paid a dollar and a half to get in and wouldn't take half that sum for the ball. Oscar's blow earned him a fifty dollar Liberty bond, that being the prize offered by Al Jolson to all those who bust homers in the series.

"Hell's Bells!" said Slim Sallee. "Who'd of thought a guy named Felsch would want a Liberty bond!"

Lew McCarty robbed Cicottee of a richly undeserved shutout by hitting a home run to right center in the New York fifth. Lew made three bases on it and got no Liberty bond. He got credit for a tally, however, for Mr. Sallee, who places his dozen base hits per annum where they'll do the most good, came through with a single in the pinch. This is the true and authentic story of how the game's three runs were made.

* *

INTERESTING FACTS AND FIGURES.

If Heine Zimmerman gets four hits out of four times up in tomorrow's game his average for the series will be .500.

It was the first world's series game Sallee ever lost to the White Sox.

When the rival clubs line up for the second contest, Ray Schalk will be behind the bat for the White Sox and Byrd Lynn will be on the bench.

Oh, Slim Sallee, Oh, Slim Sallee,
Why don't you always pitch to me?

OFFICIAL COMMUNIQUES.

White Sox.

The enemy launched a desperate attack on our South Side front this afternoon. He was repulsed with heavy losses. One of our balls sailed over the left field fence. It did not come back.

Our counter attack gained its objective, the first game. Firing was heavy on both sides at frequent intervals during the afternoon, but there was a lull at 4 o'clock.

The enemy is expected to attack again tomorrow afternoon with a fresh battery.

It was noticeable in today's fighting that the heavy artillery was for the most part useless and the best results were obtained by light field guns. The John Collins machine gun was particularly effective.

Giants.

An attack on Comiskey plain was met with a desperate defense and a severe counter attack. The enemy was permitted to take the first game, our armies giving way for strategic reasons.

Aviation.

Our fliers were up in the air through the third and fourth innings.

Pittsburgh.

There is nothing to report.

Washington.

The situation is unchanged.

25,000 CALL UP "TRIB" FOR SCORE

There's one set of people who are happy that world's series occur only once a year. They are the telephone girls at THE TRIBUNE switchboard. All records for phone calls were broken yesterday by the baseball fans, who started calling shortly after 2 o'clock and did not stop until long after 6. After that only a few hundred an hour rang up for the final result.

Altogether about 25,000 calls were turned in, eight girls devoting their entire time to allaying the anxiety of the home fans who were barred from the park. Preparations had been made to take care of the expected rush by assigning three special lines to the service, Central 135, 136, and 137, but they proved insufficient early, and the rest of the switchboard was swung into line. Calls came so fast they were doubled up, many times all the way from four to six people getting the results at the same time.

Another feature was the interest shown by out of town fans, more long distance calls to THE TRIBUNE coming from out of town points.

BONNET OR GAME?

WHY were so few women present at the first world's series game, approximately less than 5 per cent of the total attendance?

That was a question asked by those who scanned closely the 32,000 exuberant rooters as the stands and bleachers rose to their feet when Felsch's homer dropped in the left field bleachers.

Let's accept the answer of a feminine fan in the upper grandstand seats. "My husband had promised, or I would not have been here. Tickets were so scarce that my sister-in-law accepted her husband's offer of a new hat if she would release the seat he secured for her to a friend, who was willing to pay $25 for it. I wouldn't miss this game for any old new hat, but several of my friends were willing to trade off their rights at a single game for several sets of matinée tickets."

This argument and fear of the large crowd no doubt supply the solution.

CROWD HANDLED AT SOX CONTEST LIKE A MACHINE

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Chicago's White Sox fans waited eleven years for the event of yesterday at Comiskey park and then after two weeks of terrific battling to get seats finally sat still and looked on as if it were the most common every day occurrence.

For a world's series opening game, something the fans here have been crying for for so many years, the affair at Comiskey park between the Giants and White Sox was the quietest and most orderly combat of the season. The game itself was intense, but really gave only two thrills to the home fans and if it hadn't been for Hap Felsch's home run into the left field bleachers and Joe Jackson's wonderful diving catch, there would scarcely have been an incident that would have aroused unusual interest.

Crowd Held to 32,000 Fans.

It was a great crowd, though not the biggest crowd that ever saw a game at the south side. Away back in 1911 at a city series game there were 4,500 more than saw the big show this time. Had it been possible to let them all in yesterday Comiskey might have entertained the biggest crowd that ever saw any sporting event in the world instead of only an ordinary 32,000.

But all through the combat one couldn't help but wonder what had become of the south side noise. It was the quietest and most orderly crowd that ever sat in at such a big event. Eleven years ago there were fog horns and organized bands of rooters and brigades of songsters and cheer leaders. Yesterday there wasn't an organized yell and the only real spontaneous yells came when Felsch hit his homer and when Jackson took a headlong dive and caught a low line drive.

Police Keep Order.

But if one asks Chief of Police Schuettler and his commanding officers one will learn there was a terrific crowd there and undoubtedly the reason that those who held seats for the game had so little trouble in getting in was due to the work of the bluecoats. They held the throng back, blocks away, after all the general admissions had been sold.

The real rush was early in the morning, long before the lucky fellow with a box or grand stand seat had thought of starting for the park. There was a line formed at the general admission ticket window the previous night and at day break there were four lines formed. When the people were going to work at 7 o'clock in the morning those lines extended for blocks and blocks. One of them curled around and doubled back and forth through a public playground behind the park.

Patient fans ate their breakfast in line and carried their lunches in their pockets and then thousands who had stood in line from as early as 5 or 6 o'clock in the morning had all their trouble for nothing, because all the tickets were gone before they ever reached the window.

Many Fans Disappointed.

At 10 o'clock in the morning the gates were thrown open. An hour later the gates to the pavilions were closed because all space had been taken and all tickets were gone. In another half hour the last bleacher ticket was sold, and still the lines of hopeful patrons extended to indefinite lengths.

After the 15,000 bleacher and pavilion fans were seated there was no occasion for any others except holders of reserved seats getting within a block of the main entrance, and consequently when the 17,000 seat holders began to appear they had a clear way right to the gate and found no jamming or confusion whatever.

Most of the 32,000, however, were on hand an hour before the game began and down in front of the right pavilion was a band furnishing entertainment. Between pieces a male quartet butted in to boost some new songs and then half an hour before game time in marched 1,500 future army officers from the Fort Sheridan training camp. A section in the middle of the dollar pavilion had been set aside for them.

As soon as the soldiers were placed the band played "The Star-Spangled Banner," with every one standing and all the soldiers saluting.

Sox in New Uniforms.

The first semblance of rooting came shortly before game time when the Sox in their nice new suits and patriotic stockings trotted out for their fielding drill. The first booing of Heine Zim took place when the Giants began their fielding exercises. It started when the manager knocked a grounder to the great Zim and Heine fumbled. Immediately the noise began and all afternoon, whenever Heine came to bat, the good natured booing occurred.

Apparently many of the side features usually attending a world's series opening had been eliminated. Of course, the movie men and the snap shooters were present, and when, about ten minutes before starting time, the managers and umpires gathered about the home plate for the annual pointing, etc., all the camera men were on the job. But in the midst of it Ump. Silk O'Loughlin, the chief of the day, commanded that the battle begin.

Eddie Cicotte went to the slab and George Burns went to bat and the game went on just like any of the other 154 of the regular season.

HISTORY REPEATS

FELSCH'S home run was made off exactly the same kind of a ball that was pitched to Frank Baker when he earned his title of "Home Run" against Christy Mathewson. It was a curve ball that was not intended to break over the plate.

Mathewson, a right hander, was pitching to Baker, a left handed batsman, while Sallee, a southpaw, was pitching to Felsch, who whacks from the north side of the pan. That was all the difference between the two bread winning blows.

In each case the pitcher attempted to fool the batsman into going after a ball outside the plate, and in each case he either put too much on it or did not start it wide enough to keep it away from the slugger.

World Series Figures

Paid attendance	32,000
Gross receipts	$73,152.00
Commission's share	7,315.20
Players' share	39,502.08
Each club's share	13,167.36

Last year the paid attendance was 36,117 and the gross receipts $76,489.50.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Hap Felsch chiseled his name into baseball's hall of fame alongside those of Frank Baker and Harry Hooper yesterday with a home run wallop into the bleachers at Comiskey park, good for the run which gave the White Sox a brilliantly earned victory over New York's Giants in the opening game of the world's greatest world's series. Score, 2 to 1.

Edward Cicotte, Frank McMullin, and Joe Jackson shared with Felsch the honor of subduing the pride of Manhattan and the plaudits of 32,000 bugs who saw the battle and several million who didn't. Nor was it the fault of John Collins that he did not cut a tremendous figure in the result, for he made almost half of Chicago's hits off Slim Sallee, veteran of McGraw's staff, who was expected to give the Rowlands the most trouble.

FOUR SOX HEROES.

But fate decreed that it should fall to the lot of Felsch and McMullin to do the things that counted most in the offense and to Cicotte and Jackson to shine brightest in the defense.

Everybody knew what to expect from Cicotte. Win or lose, he was sure to be there with a brand of hurling that would be almost invincible. He was. And the mere fact it was expected of him should not detract one whit from the greatness of his performance on the slab. One run was made off him, and it was earned. He was hit hard in spots but never in the pinches. But for Slim Sallee's handle hit in the fifth the Giants would not have scored off the American league's premier pitcher.

M'MULLIN SCORES TALLY.

Next to Felsch McMullin was the south side hero at bat, for he came through with a timely drive which sent home the first run of the game after some bad base running had wrecked what looked like a chance to cinch it. His two base hit in the third was something of a scratch two bagger, but it was an honest single and would have scored John Collins from second without the misjudgment by which Kauff converted it into a double.

Jackson, who was expected to be the batting terror of the Giants, did nothing with his stick, but contributed a sensational diving catch which probably saved the game in the seventh by robbing McCarty of what looked like a second safety, and if it had gone safe the whole story might have been different.

JACKSON'S GREAT CATCH.

Those plays by Kauff and Jackson were the breaks of the game. They were identical at the start, but widely different at the finish. Benny tried to make a sensational catch of McMullin's line drive and missed it, losing the game, as events proved. Jackson did make a phenomenal catch of McCarty's drive, but if he had missed it New York instead of Chicago would have been celebrating last night.

It was one of the hardest and most brilliantly fought battles in recent world's series. Both teams hit the pill viciously in spots, but the fielding was so effective that many a well meant blow met unexpected death in the hands of an opponent.

ONE ERROR FOR EACH.

One error marred the defensive work of each team, but only one, and that was offset by the perfect execution of many difficult plays. McCarty hogged all the errors on the Giant side by a wild throw to second trying to stop a base thief in the seventh inning, but it cost nothing. Weaver made a wild throw to first in the eighth, after eating up a hard chance from Kauff, but it only set the stage for Cicotte to pick Benny off first base a moment later. Kauff was the second McGrawite to fall asleep at first, Holke being the other.

McGraw crossed nearly all of the dopesters by starting Sallee instead of Schupp on the slab, but his judgment was justified. By some means or other Slim had acquired all the knowledge he needed concerning the White Sox batsmen. He was in there to stop Eddie Collins and Joe Jackson, and he did it. Neither of them got a solid whack at the ball all day. Jackson came close to poking a Texas league fly over the infield in the first inning, but he did not really get hold of the ball at all. Eddie Collins was even more helpless before Sallee's south handed stuff and struck out the third time he was up.

J. COLLINS GETS FIRST RUN.

But stopping one Collins and Jackson was not enough to beat the Sox, with Cicotte on the slab. There was another Collins, a man named Felsch, and also one Cicotte to be reckoned with at bat, for Cicotte himself led the third inning rally that produced the first run of the game. Also he came close to starting something else in the fifth with a stinger just over third which landed half an inch foul, otherwise it would have been good for a two sacker.

Considering the brilliance of the contest and the closeness of the score, the crowd was remarkably quiet. There was none of the wild rooting that has characterized previous world's series in Chicago when the big combats were an almost annual feature, in 1906, 1907, 1908, and 1910. With New York and Chicago pitted against each other, it was expected the fans would be bitterly partisan and rabidly cheerful at the triumph over their Gotham rivals.

Enthusiasm there was, and rooting a-plenty, but it was distributed as fairly as a home crowd could distribute it, the Giants being applauded as heartily for their scintillating deeds as were the Rowlands.

CROWD RIDES HEINE ZIM.

Only Heine Zimmerman came in for a panning and the crowd rode him pretty hard at times. They had the chance because of his inability to come anywhere near solving Cicotte's delivery. But Heine got square with them by a pair of swell fielding plays, stealing two base hits from home batsmen. Gandil and Schalk were the victims and Schalk's drive would have made Cicotte's task much easier if Zim had missed it, because it would have meant at least one more run in the third round.

McGraw stuck to his long established system of playing for a lot of runs instead of one. He cut out the sacrifice entirely and played the hit and run game when he tried anything of the kind. Twice when Giants were on first base the subsequent swatters were ordered to swat, and the result was nix in the run column. Once a fast double play started by Weaver choked off the the best chance the Giants had to win.

DESPITE POOR BASE WORK.

The Rowlands won the game in spite of some of their famous bad judgment on the bases, which cost them at least one run, while the Giants lost by bad judgment with the stick, as things turned out. Nobody expected the game would be as airtight as it was, or perhaps the Giant pilot would have played for one run at a time from the outset.

Each side had a chance to score in the opener. Burns played his string out so far in New York's half that he got a chance to whale a groover over second for a single. But Herzog and Kauff flied out, so Burns proceeded to steal second just before Zimmerman rainbowed a fly to Felsch. John Collins opened the home first with the first of his three hits. Rowland played for the one run and had McMullin sacrifice Shauno to second, but Eddie Collins rolled out and Jackson's near hit was captured by Herzog in brilliant fashion after a hard run back into short center.

GIANTS THREATEN IN THIRD.

There was a spell of worry for the home fans in the third when Burns cleverly worked Cicotte for his only pass after two were out. Herzog came across with a single to right, but John Collins held Burns on second. Cicotte pitched two bad balls in succession to Kauff and the Giants began to count the money. But Eddie made Benny hit the ball and Gandil caught it close to the Giants' bench when it came down.

The Sox hit Sallee hardest in their half of the third. Schalk led with a stinger which Zimmerman stabbed on the bound with one hand, throwing Ray out at first. Cicotte rapped a single to center. John Collins responded with his second hit, a single to right. Cicotte must have been misinformed about Robinson's arm, for he tried to go to third on the rap and was thrown out easily. John Collins reached second on the peg and McMullin scored him with a liner straight over second base. Kauff came tearing in and tried to make a shoestring catch of it, but missed the ball, and it got through him far enough to let Mac to second, while Shauno romped home with the first tally.

POWER IN FELSCH'S BLOW.

Felsch made his famous blow in the fourth. Jackson was stowed away before Hap came up and waited till he saw one coming across that he fancied. He met it squarely with every ounce of power in his muscles, backed by the full swing of his body. If he had missed it he might have broken his back, but he didn't. The crash was unmistakable, and there was not an instant's doubt about the ultimate destination of that ball.

It started for the bleachers and it landed there. Burns took one look at the flying sphere and instinctively raced along under it for a few steps, then stopped and watched it fall among the faithful two bit fans, some of whom had spent all night in line for the sake of seeing that blow.

M'CARTY POUNDS TRIPLE.

As if angered by that home run the Giants made their most vicious attack on Cicotte in the next inning. It was their only successful one. McCarty led with a terrific drive which cleared right center field by many feet and went to the boundary. McCarty with his game leg could make only three bases on it, although before his accident he would have scored before the ball came back. It did not make any difference. Sallee, after missing two strikes, poked a little fly over Eddie Collins, who was playing close in, and let McCarty meander home.

With nobody out, a man on first, and one more run needed to tie, Burns was allowed to hit and he soaked a swift bounder to Weaver, who smothered it, then started a lightning double play which Eddie Collins completed by winging the ball to first ahead of Burns. Herzog struck out.

CICOTTE THEN SUBDUES FOES.

The Giants never were dangerous again. Two more of them reached first base during the game. Holke singled with one down in the seventh and McCarty delivered his second attempt to win the game. It was a low liner over Weaver's head. Jackson raced in, saw he could not get to the ball on the fly so dove headfirst for it. His hands reached the pill before it hit the grass and somehow he held it, although he turned a complete somersault. Two umpires, Evans and Rigler, ran out to make the decision and simultaneously they raised their arms, signaling the batsman was out. There was no question about the catch.

Not until two were out in the eighth did the Sox falter in their defense. Then Weaver made a wild throw to first that gave Kauff a life with two out. It cost nothing. Cicotte pitched out twice to Zimmerman, looking for a hit and run play, but Kauff did not stir. Then Cicotte shot the ball to Gandil just as Benny started for second. Chick relayed it high to second, but Collins pulled it down and made the out that stopped New York's last chance to score.

$5,000 to $6,000 Sox Win.

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 6.—Five thousand to $6,000 was laid here today that the Sox will win the series.

HERE ARE DETAILS OF OPENING OF WORLD'S SERIES GAME

FIRST INNING.

GIANTS—Cicotte shot the first one over for a strike, but Burns never offered. Then Cicotte threw two balls, another strike, and another ball, and with the call three and two, Burns opened the attack with a stinging single over second base. Instead of trying to sacrifice, Herzog tried to hit, and died on an easy fly to Jackson. Kauff also took a swing and a high fly to Jackson in short left resulted. On the second ball pitched to Zim., Burns stole second, sliding around a rather wide throw by Schalk. Zim then fouled one and ended the round with a fly to Felsch. No runs, one hit, one error.

WHITE SOX—J. Collins fouled one for a strike, took another curve for a second strike, and then lined a beauty single to right. McMullin bunted on the first pitched ball and thought there was a possible play at second. Sallee hurled to first and J. Collins was on the middle bag. E. Collins connected for a sharp grounder to Fletcher and was hurled out at first by a step, J. Collins moving to third. Jackson then boosted a little low fly to short right center that looked like a safe hit, but Herzog, going back at top speed, was just able to nab it.

No runs, one hit, no errors.

SECOND INNING.

GIANTS—Fletcher swung at the second pitched ball and popped up to Gandil. Robertson fouled off one, took another strike and ended with a slow roller toward first base. Cicotte handled the ball and got his man by a hair. Holke followed with a similar blow and Gandil and Cicotte got mixed in covering first base. E. Collins handled the ball, but it went for a hit when no one covered. It was harmless, however, for in a jiffy Cicotte caught Holke off first.

No runs, one hit, no errors.

WHITE SOX—Felsch had two strikes on him when he hit to the sky, and Fletcher made the catch. Gandil caught one on the nose for a vicious liner right at Zimmerman's stomach. Heine knocked it down and recovered in time to get Chick at first. Weaver ended that attack with a tap right to Sallee, who tossed to Holke.

No runs, no hits, no errors.

THIRD INNING.

GIANTS—McCarty drove a long one to left center, but Felsch was there for an easy catch. Sallee's best was an easy pop up to Weaver. Burns worked Cicotte for the call of three and two, then fouled off two, and finally walked. Herzog followed with a pretty single to right, but lively handling by J. Collins stopped Burns at second. Kauff ended the suspense by fouling out on a pop up to Gandil.

No runs, one hit, no errors.

WHITE SOX—Schalk led off with a ripping grounder down the third base line, but Heine Zim gathered it up and pegged Ray out a mile. Cicotte brought cheer though by lining out a beauty single to center. J. Collins followed with a single to right close to the foul line, and Cicotte tried to make third. Robertson's peg to Zim was perfect and Eddie was nailed. J. Collins scooted to second on the throw, and in a moment the first run was over, for McMullin lined a safety to center. Kauff tried a foolish shoe string catch and the ball skipped past him for a two bagger, giving J. Collins lots of time to get home. E. Collins' best was a pop up to Fletcher.

One run, three hits, no errors.

FOURTH INNING.

GIANTS—Heine Zim walked up on the first pitched ball and tried to knock it to the loop. A pop foul to Schalk was the result. Fletcher pulled a hot one down to third base and McMullin dug it up and fired to Gandil in plenty of time. Robertson poled a liner to right center and although Felsch made a great stop and throw the blow was good for two bases for the speedy New Yorker. A moment later Holke died on a grounder to McMullin, ending the round. No runs, one hit, no errors.

WHITE SOX—Jackson hit one high and far to left and Burns was camped under it. Felsch then connected with one squarely on the nose and drove it far and high to left center. Both Burns and Kauff gave chase, but the ball cleared the fence and the first six rows of fans for a home run. Gandil died on a tap to Sallee and Weaver lifted a long fly to Burns, ending it, but the crowd was satisfied.

FIFTH INNING.

GIANTS—McCarthy led off with a tremendous drive to right center for three bases. After two strikes were called on Sallee he poled a line single to right and McCarthy jogged home. The fans felt relief a moment later when Burns hit to Weaver, who tossed to E. Collins, who in turn shot to Gandil for a double play. Herzog then fanned, the first strike out of the series.

One run, two hits, no errors.

WHITE SOX—Schalk was an easy victim on a grounder to Holke. Sallee tossed out Cicotte after the latter had hit a couple of drives foul only by inches. J. Collins wound up that one with a roller to Holke.

No runs, no hits, no errors.

SIXTH INNING.

GIANTS—Kauff fanned on three pitched balls, taking three healthy swings. Heine Zim's best was a high pop fly, which Gandil handled. Fletcher was almost as easy an out when he died on a fly to Jackson.

No runs, no hits, no errors.

WHITE SOX—Herzog knocked down McMullin's bounder and recovered in time to shoot to Holke and get the man on a close decision. E. Collins was fooled by Sallee's curves and fanned. Jackson died on a sharp rap to Holke.

No runs, no hits, no errors.

SEVENTH INNING.

GIANTS—Robertson rolled slowly toward third and was out by a step on McMullin's lively play to Gandil. Holke poled one safely to right for one base. McCarthy lined low and hard to left, and Jackson, tearing in, got the ball by a great diving catch. Sallee ended it with a fly to Felsch.

No runs, one hit, no errors.

WHITE SOX—Felsch bunted foul, then died on a tap to Sallee. Gandil shot a hot one right past Heine Zim's feet for a single. Gandil then stole second and went to third when McCarty's throw went to the outfield. Weaver, however, struck out at the same time and when Schalk died on a grounder to Fletcher, Gandil was left on third.

No runs, one hit, one error.

EIGHTH INNING.

GIANTS—Burns drove to left center, but Felsch made an easy catch. Herzog's best was a high lofter to Jackson. Kauff rolled to Weaver, and was safe at first when Buck's hurried throw pulled Gandil off the bag. It was the first error for Chicago. Cicotte then caught Benny off first as he started to steal and a relay to second nailed him.

No runs, no hits, one error.

WHITE SOX—Fletcher threw out Cicotte. J. Collins pulled a red hot one down just inside third base and by splendid legging made it good for two sacks. McMullin tapped into Sallee's hands and J. Collins was trapped and run down, Sallee to Zim to Herzog. McMullin next tried to steal, but McCarty's peg to Herzog was perfect and Mack was out.

No runs, one hit, no errors.

NINTH INNING.

NEW YORK—Heine Zim tapped to Cicotte and didn't even run to first. Fletcher popped out to Weaver. Robertson boosted to J. Collins.

No runs, no hits, no errors.

COME TO GAMES FROM MANILA

No one who saw the first game of the world's series yesterday at Comiskey park came as far for the big event as Mr. and Mrs. W. R. MacFarlane, who arrived in Chicago soon after noon after a journey all the way from the Philippine islands.

Mr. MacFarlane, back in 1909, was president of the Aberdeen club of the Northwest league, and he hired Clarence Rowland as his manager. Ever since then he has been an admirer of the present leader of the White Sox, and having been located in Manila for the last few years, he and Mrs. MacFarlane started for the world's series in Chicago long before the White Sox were sure of clinching the pennant.

From the Pacific coast they wired Rowland they would be here, and he had tickets for them, but when they failed to arrive as late as 1:15 yesterday Rowland turned the tickets over to others. Fifteen minutes later the couple arrived and in some way the Sox leader managed to get them into the grounds.

ALL THE O. HENRYS IN AMERICA GATHER AT WHITE SOX GAME

Giants, occupied a seat in the press stand. He is probably the O. Henry of the Schooner and Growler Gazette. He was seen taking notes handily, and he was compiling a case score. As a rooter he was no negligible factor, either, and probably did much to encourage McGraw, the great denyer. When Zimmerman came to bat Col. Ruppert arose and cried:

"Uncork one, Heinie!"

Almost the whole battalion of vaudeville booking agents who sign contracts with silver plated jimmies in the Palace Theater building could be counted in the Gotham section of the otherwise cheery auditorium. Vaudeville agents are all enthusiastic baseball supporters in New York, which is natural enough, since they manage all the players in quartets and monologues all winter.

Pleased Nearly to "Death."

When John Collins filliped the globule (shop talk) for the third bingle (trade term), Johnny Weber turned to Fred Block and said:

"He's a riot, that bird. He can do three a day and always a hit."

"Right," said Block. "I'd like to book him for next week—in Australia."

And so they ran on, these strangers whose "thumbs down" or "kick in" controls one night stand destinies and ruins many a promising musical show. They had come a long distance and they were glad, as all good sportsmen are, that the best team won. That is the spirit of Times Square and its environs, as any of the O. Henrys will tell you—New York being famous for its official slogan, "Soak him; he's from Chicago."

World Series Notes

A quartet of song boosters furnished some harmony for the fans before the game and appeared in the Woodland Bards' room after the game.

Cicotte almost made a second hit in the fifth inning. He pulled a hot one along the foul line, and it went just outside before hitting the ground.

In the preliminary practice of the Giants one of the "outside" correspondents in the press stand asked who the kid was out on second for the Giants. A peek that way showed it to be John J. McGraw.

When Heine Zim came to bat the first time there was a great roar from all parts of the grandstand and bleachers, for the south side rooters remembered the fun they had with Heine in other post-season series when he was with the Cubs.

At a meeting of the umpires, managers, and officials before the game it was impressed upon both managers that any nagging or undue yelling from the bench by any individual player would be followed by an order sending the unruly one to the clubhouse.

Almost every member of the Cubs was out at the game helping Clark Griffith pass the hat to collect money to buy baseball stuff for the soldiers in the new national army. Among the outsiders who assisted were Johnny Evers of the Phillies, Duffy Lewis of the Red Sox, and George McBride of the Washingtons.

One bleacher bug who essayed to attend in an overcoat and straw hat was hooted by the bleacherites and good naturedly allowed the "lid" to be battered up.

When the gates were shut on the pavilion and bleacher some time before noon there were fans outside the fence who offered gatemen as much as [illegible] to slip them through when no one was looking.

In the sixth inning Eddie Cicotte had to pitch only nine times to get the side out. Kauff was first up and swung three times without getting a foul. Heine Zim fouled two and popped to Gandil on the third. Fletcher fouled the [illegible] lifted to Jackson on the third.

McMullin, in addition to his timely hit in the third inning, played a stand out fielding game, eating up everything he could reach. He made one bad throw, the first one, but Gandil handled it for an out. Thereafter McMullin pegged accurately.

Before the game started a fan who couldn't find a place to sit in the [illegible] field bleachers attempted to climb the wall to sit there. He got one leg hooked over the top and then petered out and had to fall to the ground. About 10,000 in the grandstand and boxes were applauding his efforts.

A Still Better Value

Before the many increases in the prices of motor cars, the Allen was a big value at $895.

Since other cars have been raised, it is a still greater value at this price.

But the Allen will have to increase its price.

Just when, we don't know but it will be soon.

Buying now means a real saving.

And you get a car that has proven its worth for the past six years.

TURN AWAY BUGS AFTER HOURS AT BLEACHER GATES

At 10 bells sharp the bleacher and pavilion ticket windows went open with a bang and the hundreds who had been standing in line for hours started streaming into the park, singing "The End of a Perfect Night." Four lines led up to the two arteries to the unreserved seats and until noon the long lines that straggled out for blocks surrounding Comiskey park passed through the turnstiles.

The supply of tickets ran out before the end of the lines were near the gates, and late comers who remained at home for breakfast were turned away to hunt electric score boards. When the closed gates cut the long serpents in half the tail wriggled for nearly an hour.

One Line Nine Blocks Long.

The longest line, one of two approaching the bleacher entrance, started at Thirty-fourth street and Fifth avenue, curled through the public playground north of the park to Thirty-third street, then east to Wentworth avenue, south to Thirty-fifth street, back two blocks north again to Thirty-third, then bending directly back and trailing out to the corner of Thirty-sixth and Wentworth, a total distance of over nine blocks.

The other lines snarled up in the playground and twisted all over the neighborhood. Strict police lines kept all but ticketholders off Thirty-fifth street leading to the park.

The real early birds of Friday evening were joined by more than 400 who sat by fires during the long, cold hours of the night. A change in the weather at midnight brought a full moon after showers had driven away many of the first arrivals. Shortly after 3 o'clock the big mob began pouring into line, and in an hour the fans had streamed out a block from the gates into the four lines. Every hour brought hundreds more, and after 8 o'clock this morning only those who cared to take a chance on being turned away joined the columns.

Many Women Waiters.

A surprisingly large number of women, bundled in blankets, punctuated the long rows of fans. At one point an automobile—yes, one of them—took its place in line, and the five occupants slumbered on the cushions until morning, when the chauffeur called for their Pullman. The first woman to pass into the park was Mrs. Gertrude Halen of 8817 Elizabeth street, who took her place ahead of her husband at 3 o'clock at the pavilion runway.

There was not a gloomy countenance in the weary rows, and many of the wildest fans declared they would do the same thing over again tonight and would willingly take their place outside the gates as soon as the last fly has been caught today.

Conservative fans figured on even a larger rush for seats tomorrow, because of more favorable weather conditions, and because many of the do or die type of Sox fans who have been waiting for eleven years for the big blowout could not get away from business on Saturday morning.

Flatten Iron Fence to Ground.

The wise undertaker who brought 500 chairs to rent to the standers was on hand early in the morning, but there were none who dropped by the wayside during the cold vigil. It was an orderly crowd, and only on one occasion, when the police changed the direction of one of the lines, was protection necessary. The iron fence around the playground gave way under the stress.

Mrs. Schalk Scores Game for Box Party of Players' Wives

BY THE SOCIETY EDITOR.

Something weird seemed to have seized every man and boy yesterday. Perfectly unacquainted masculine persons spoke to each other wherever they met, in confidential tones, and replied with deep understanding.

"What is this thing that is the matter with every one?" the club editor said to me as she looked about the office. "If it's a germ, they all have it."

So I crept suspiciously after the seventh man to steal away unnoticed (as he hoped) from the office, to find out about things, as a society editor should. Into a special taxi that stood at the corner I climbed and found the crossest looking lean business man imaginable, who would not be supposed to enjoy games, and two clerks from some mercantile place who spoke of using part of their vacation time for this occasion. On the front seat with the driver was a youngster who grinned and said he had no ticket, but wondered if his luck wouldn't be with him.

Like Prison Walls to Outsider.

We traveled southward, turned west, and rode through black crowds of people for two blocks. Outside the iron bars and high prison walls of this place called Comiskey's ball park stood packs of men crowding close to any space from which they might catch even the tiniest glimpse of those who were perched on a seat within the happy grounds. They didn't seem to ask anything more than just that. Their jowls hung as they gazed. As I went in through the gate with a real ticket there were eyes with pitiful longing in them which followed me.

And then I knew, as I flew to a seat among those myriads of human beings gasping and gazing, that even if I understood nothing of it all, I was in the presence of something almost sacred to those watchers, and I must be reverent.

It grew exciting right away. I could have screamed when Mr. Cicotte, they said his name was, ran like everything and didn't beat the ball to the stone, and he had to go back and sit on the bench. And when Mr. John Collins tore across home base and the man behind me beat me with his walking stick, I scarcely felt it, but banged some one in front of me with my bag.

One little experience made me like those mad men of McGraw. "Ferdy" Schupp's father, a delightful old man from New Albany, Ind., sat near by and talked affectionately of his son, and said he wondered why "Ferdy" had insisted on his coming up to this game—all the time being so proud of his boy that he almost puffed with it.

I inquired around but found no list of patronesses of the affair, which seemed queer for something so important. But the players' wives were in a box together and were most interesting. Mrs. Eddie Collins, who has a bewitching Boston accent, was there in a smart suit of brown broadcloth and a wide velvet hat, and clapped and rooted for each player by name, with no end of excited cries of warning and encouragement as the players came out and stood with their bats. She and Mr. Collins are going back to their home in Lansdowne, Pa., very soon. They love to motor and always take with them their two children.

Miss Rose Cicotte and Baby Sister.

Mrs. "Buck" Weaver is very pretty and wore a sealskin coat and a jolly bright red turban. She said that she and her husband are planning to go west to the mountains and live in a hunter's log cabin as soon as these big games are over. Mrs. Cicotte held her little baby in her arms during the game and little "Miss Rose," as her 10 year old daughter is called, ran around near the players' bench and was given a huge bouquet of American roses by some one.

Mrs. Schalk kept score for the women in the box and announced points. She wore a purple coat with a small black hat. Mrs. Lynn is a quiet, charming little woman with a lovely voice. Her little boy, Vernon, watched things with her, and she said she had a two months' old baby with its nurse at the hotel that she was impatient to get back to.

Mrs. Williams and Mrs. Jackson were there with the most expert terms for every play that was made. The way really to learn the game will be to sit with the players' wives after this. They get every tiny shade of the playing, and fill one with a wonderful enthusiasm for it.

FOUR ALLEGED SCALPERS FREED

Four men, arrested on complaint of Manager John P. Harding of the Hotel Planters, who had alleged they were attempting to conduct a scalpers' business in world's series tickets in the lobby of the hotel, were discharged yesterday morning by Judge Swanson in the Boys' court, where they were arraigned on charges of disorderly conduct. Judge Swanson ruled there was nothing to show their conduct had been disorderly in the hotel.

CARDINALS ADD ONE TO LEAD, SPLITTING GAMES WITH BROWNS

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 6.—[Special.]—The Cardinals increased their lead in the fall series with the Browns for the championship of St. Louis, winning the second game of today's double header, 6 to 1. The Browns' only victory of the series was achieved in the ten inning first game, when the American league entry won, 5 to 4. The Cards now need one victory to clinch the title. A double header is scheduled tomorrow.

REDLEGS UPSET INDIANS IN 13TH

Cincinnati, Oct. 6.—Cincinnati took the second game of the Ohio series from Cleveland, 2 to 1, in a hard fought pitchers' battle betwen Schneider and Coveleskie which went thirteen innings. Cleveland scored in the first inning on a triple by Graney and a single by Speaker. Cincinnati tied it up in the fifth on Griffith's triple and Shean's sacrifice fly. In the thirteenth Griffith singled and scored on a sacrifice by Neale and Shean's single. Score:

Asks Sox and Giants to Invest in Liberty Bonds

The national baseball commission at a meeting yesterday morning decided to request every player, manager, business manager, and owner of the Sox and the Giants to invest at least $100 in Liberty bonds. Those players who do not get a part of the gate because of being left out of the games are not to be requested to purchase the bonds.

Comiskey and Rowland Think "Getting the Jump" Big Factor in Series.

BY CHARLES A. COMISKEY.

[As told to James Crusinberry.]

It was one of the happiest days of my life.

I think there never was a better game of ball played on the opening of a world's series. It was close to an even fight. New York has a great team, and we won. The White Sox played great baseball. Joe Jackson made a spectacular catch which possibly saved us a lot of trouble. I know my heart went right up into my mouth when that ball was hit and I saw Joe going after it. I didn't think he could get it, but he did.

Eddie Cicotte, I think, lived up to all expectations and at the finish he looked better than at the start. That drive of Hap Felsch's into the bleacher was a hit that will be remembered as long as Hap lives.

It was a close fight all the way and yet it was a game with plenty of hitting. There were times when a hit would hav done great damage on either side. And yet in spite of the close fight the White Sox won.

I don't know why I shouldn't be the happiest man in Chicago. We have won the first game in the fight for the world's championship and I know we beat a great ball team, for I am sure that McGraw's team is one of the best the National league ever turned out. Winning the first game is a big advantage in a world's series. We have to win only three now and they have to win four before we win three in order to beat us out. I think the White Sox will be champions of the world.

I realize that the first game was a tight battle that might have turned against us with a bad break of luck, but all through it the boys stood up and were steady. I was proud of them individually and as a team when it was over, and if they only will battle with that same spirit in the remaining games, they will go through to the finish and land the big title.

BY CLARENCE ROWLAND.

[As told to James Crusinberry.]

The boys went through in great shape, and we won a close one. I was glad that Eddie Cicotte did what he was expected to do, and he was stronger against the Giants at the finish than he was at the start. Eddie will beat them the next time easier than he did in the first game.

At all times the Sox were up on their toes and wide awake. Joe Jackson's catch in the seventh inning was one of the greatest he ever made and perhaps it saved the ball game for us. Fred McMullin played a brilliant defensive game at third base and he drove in the first run. John Collins deserves honorable mention for the way he hit the ball and ran the bases. I am well satisfied with the first victory, for we won a tough and brilliant game of ball, and I now feel assured that the world's championship will belong to the White Sox.

ELECTRICS GO 50-50 WITH PENNSY NINE IN AMATEUR FLAG BILL

In the semifinal series for the national amateur baseball championship the Western Electrics, local title holders, split a double bill with the Aluminum Co. of America team from Kensington, Pa. Despite the cold and the world's series nearly 2,500 fans turned out at Garden City park. The visitors were forced to go ten innings to win the opener, 2 to 1, but were easy in the afterpiece, 7 to 2, in seven innings.

The first game was a twirling battle between D. Fullerton of the Aluminums and Dick Cantwell, the visitor having a shade. Fullerton established a pitcher's fielding record by taking care of sixteen assists without an error. All his chances came in the regulation nine innings. McCandless, a former Federal league star, got a double in the tenth that scored the winning run.

Nine Electrics went to bat in the first inning of the followup, and with only one hit, Evans' triple, scored five runs. The series final will be played at 10 o'clock this morning, the winner entering the finals next Saturday and Sunday at Cincinnati against the Norwoods. Score:

1,000 Soldiers Cheer Sox at Houston, Tex., Y. M. C. A.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Houston, Tex., Oct. 6.—About 1,000 soldiers of Camp Logan watched the first game of the world's series at an electric score board at the Y. M. C. A. The crowd went wild after the first run was scored by the Sox. After the ninth inning there was no sign of disorder. Officials of the "Y" state there would be 5,000 at the board tomorrow. Leslie Mann, former Cub outfielder, officiates.

THOUSANDS GET STORY OF CLASH BY WIRE SYSTEM

Overflow crowds showed up at practically every place in the city that catered to the fans barred out by the White Sox accommodations. One of the best instances of the interest shown by Chicago fans in the doings of Comiskey's pets was at the old Inter Ocean building, where returns were received play by play. The hall seats 864 persons, and another 200 can be accommodated by hanging on to the eaves. A charge of $1 a person was made, and several persons paid the full admission fee at the end of the fifth inning, when a few satisfied fans beat a retreat and left a few vacancies.

Dexter Park pavilion and Arcadia hall also were well filled, although miles away from the scene of actual conflict. A scoreboard at the Coliseum also drew well, standing room being at a premium at the big hall.

Capacity crowds have never shown up at outside halls at a world's series since THE TRIBUNE ran its scoreboards at Orchestra hall for the benefit of a local charity at the time of the world's title combat between the Cubs and Athletics in 1910.

PURPLE PILES UP 48 TO 0 VICTORY IN FIRST BATTLE

Parade of Speedy Backs Runs Riot in Game with Lake Forest Team.

BY EVAN STONE.

Northwestern opened the war season of football with a 48 to 0 victory over Lake Forest, the original and only gold coast rival of the Purple. Murphy's men scored on the visitors with ease. That the score was not larger was more the fault of Purple bungling than because of the opposition furnished by Lake Forest. After the Purple regulars had put over two scores in the first quarter Coach Murphy started filling with substitutes. Before the final whistle nearly the entire home squad saw service.

Not Good Test of Strength.

Lake Forest seemed considerably weaker than in former seasons, and for that reason it was difficult to judge the strength of the Purple. On the showing Murphy appears to have a supply of fast, intelligent backs who, though mostly lacking in weight, display agility. Holmes, Crane, Koehler, Ellingwood, Underhill, and Whitacre especially thrilled the spectators. Whitacre, a midget in size, frequently flashed down the field for good gains.

In the line Randolph, Mulder, Lynch, and Townley showed class. Scholz, quarter back, and Capt. McFerron and Peterson starred for the visitors. Several hundred jackies from the Great Lakes naval training station supported the visitors with cheers.

Lake Forest Starts with Fumble.

Ellingwood opened hostilities with a kickoff to Woods of Lake Forest, who returned ten yards. The visitors were forced to kick, but the punter and center missed connections and the ball rolled to the visitors' fifteen yard line, where Lynch, Purple center, made a greased pig recovery. In three downs Koehler went over for a touchdown. Crane kicked goal.

Lake Forest received the kickoff, but soon yielded the ball to the Purple, who started an advance to the goal which was upset by a fumble. Lake Forest punted and Murphy's men made an uninterrupted march to the goal line, Ellingwood making the dash. Crane goal.

In the second quarter, after a few minutes of play in the middle of the field, Ellingwood sprinted a serpentine dash of fifty yards for the third touchdown. Holmes kicked goal. Hamm added another marker a few minutes later. Crane kicked goal. Just before the whistle ended the first half Scholz, the visiting quarter, created a thrill among his cohorts by a dash of forty yards to the Purple thirty yard line.

Rush Ball Up the Field.

Frazer received the ball from Lake Forest to start the third quarter. The visitors forced the Purple to punt twice. Then Murphy's fast backs started a series of gains, Whitacre leading the assault, which put the pigskin on the one yard line. Whitacre went over and Crane kicked goal. Coach Murphy sent in another supply of substitutes, but the Purple ambition to score did not abate. Whitacre added two more scores in the fourth quarter on pretty runs around right end.

The game ended as Lake Forest completed a twenty yard pass to the Purple ten yard line. Lineup:

ILLINOIS BACKS TEAR UP KANSAS IN 22 TO 0 GAME

Urbana, Ill., Oct. 6.6—[Special.]—Bob Zuppke's green Illini had little trouble winning from Kansas by a score of 22 to 0. The Illini set one record for an opening game. They never fumbled once.

While there were only four veterans in the lineup, the Illini worked precisely, due in great measure to the clever quarterback performance of Nichols, who lived up to advance notices. Zuppke's backfield in general showed great promise. Charpier, the ex-lineman, whom Zuppke is developing into a full back, never failed to gain.

Kansas presented an impressive front, outweighing the Illini, but the Jayhawker's backs did not count much. The visitors had no speed and were so slow in getting off their plays that they made practically no gains until the fourth period, when Zuppke filled up his team with reserves.

A few gains by forward passes represented the total achievement of the visitors in ground gaining.

Kansas held the Illini scoreless the first period. In the second quarter Foster's punt was blocked for a safety. Nichols' forward pass to Klein resulted in the first touchdown. In the third quarter Nichols again passed to Bregman, who made a brilliant twenty yard sprint for touchdown. Runs by Nichols and Hals took the ball to the Kansas goal, where Charpier made a brilliant plunge of ten yards across the goal line.

WISCONSIN GRIDDERS DEDICATE NEW FIELD, LACING BELOIT, 34-0

Madison, Wis., Oct. 6.—[Special.]—Wisconsin celebrated the opening of its new football field today by defeating Beloit, 34 to 0. The light Beloit men were clearly outclassed by their heavier rivals and the Badgers gained ground almost at will.

A strong wind gave the home team a big advantage in the first quarter, two touchdowns being scored in rapid succession. Jacobi, Spafford, and Kelley led the Cardinal march with long gains through the line and around the ends. Richards showed nothing but straight football, the Badgers attempting only two forward passes, one of which netted twenty yards.

Kelley, who started at end, was shifted to half early in the game, showing much promise of developing into a valuable open field runner. Beloit failed to make first down throughout the contest, and during the second half was forced to return Simpson's long punts almost immediately. Lineup:

HARVARD OPENS BY BEATING DEAN

Franklin, Mass., Oct. 6.—Harvard's informal football season opened today with a game against Dean academy, Harvard winning, 27 to 0. Capt. Snow at guard was the only veteran in the Crimson lineup, and it was his last game before going into the naval cadet training school next week.

Indiana Team Runs Over Wabash Eleven by 51 to 0

Bloomington, Ind., Oct. 6.—[Special.]—Wabash was no match for Indiana in the second game of the Hoosiers today. The Little Giants were smothered, 51 to 0.

Indiana faltered in only one period, and that was the initial one, when the ball was on the one yard line. A Crimson player fumbled the ball, which was recovered by a member of the upstate team. The visitors made first down only one time, and never seriously threatened the goal line of Stiehm's men. In the third period Indiana played with a team composed almost entirely of substitutes.

Oliphant Stars as Army Beats Carnegie Tech., 28-0

West Point, N. Y., Oct. 6.—Displaying rare form for such early season play, the Army eleven defeated Carnegie Technical institute, 28 to 0. The game disclosed that the redoubtable Oliphant, who is leading the Army this year, has lost none of his skill. He and McQuarrie, who captained the University of Montana's eleven two seasons ago, made all the soldiers' points.

Culver, 37; Elgin Academy, 0.

Culver, Ind., Oct. 6.—[Special.]—Culver Military academy smashed out a one sided victory over Elgin academy today, 67—0. The running of Swift and the offense of the cadet line were features of the game.

HARLEY'S LONG RUNS FEATURE TRIUMPH OF OHIO STATE, 53 TO 0

Columbus, O., Oct. 6.—[Special.]—Ohio State had no trouble defeating Wesleyan today, 53 to 0. Coach Wilce used thirty-two men, a team of second and third string men finishing the game.

Open field play featured the Buckeyes' offensive, several touchdowns resulting from long forward passes. Harley figured largely in the scoring, making three long runs for touchdowns. His one attempt to place kick failed.

Only two touchdowns were scored in the first half, Wesleyan holding State twice within its ten yard line. In the last half Ohio State ran completely away, making thirty-nine points. Lineup:

HAWKEYES DOWN CORNELL, 21 TO 13

Iowa City, Ia., Oct. 6.—[Special.]—Opening its season, Iowa defeated Cornell college, 21 to 13, after a spectacular display by the minor collegians during the second quarter. In that period the visitors made two touchdowns. Etter scored both. He intercepted a forward pass and ran sixty yards for the second score, and he made the first by line smashing.

MICHIGAN TEAM HURRIES 'EM UP; SWATS CASE, 41-0

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 6.—[Special.]—Taking more than its yearly average of points against Case since 1894 by thirteen, Michigan opened its thirty-ninth season of football today with a 41 to 0 victory against Case Scientific school.

Straight football featured by brilliant end runs by Sparks and Wieman gave Michigan the victory, although the Wolverines lost their chances of scoring three times by fumbles. Sparks proved himself to be Michigan's greatest ground gainers. Although playing in only three quarters, he made an aggregate of 201 yards.

Wieman who made his debut for Michigan as full back, after training for two years as tackle, far exceeded the fans' expectations, going over the line for three touchdowns, kicking five goals and missing only one. Sparks made two touchdowns after long end runs. Andrye, substituting for Hanish at right half, made one.

After the first half, when the score stood 27 to 0, Yost sent in substitute after substitute, thus trying out new men, but more touchdowns by these tactics.

Rydzewski Big Factor in Notre Dame's 55-0 Win

Notre Dame, Oct. 6.—[Special.]—Capt. Phelan led the Notre Dame squad to the first victory of the season, defeating Kalamazoo college in a decisive game, 55 to 0. Two minutes after the whistle blew Bahan ran seventy-five yards and a few moments later Capt. Phelan made the first touchdown of the season. Rydzewski, the star center from Chicago, gave a brilliant exhibition of goal kicking, scoring seven points. Rydzewski also distinguished himself in checking the rushes of the opponents.

PURDUE BUMPS FRANKLIN, 54-0

Lafayette, Ind., Oct. 6.—[Special.]—Purdue toyed with Franklin in the opening game of the football season and won, 54 to 0. The visitors made only two first downs and scarcely had possession of the ball at all. Neither Huffine nor Allen was in the Purdue lineup, both being injured.

Coach O'Donnell did not open up any new plays, his team depending on old style football. Few forward passes were attempted. Smith and McIntosh did most of the ground gaining for the Boilermakers.

Hume and Church also did good work in this regard. The Boilermakers' line held well, and the visitors' only substantial gain was on a forward pass.

Both teams fumbled frequently, but Purdue in most instances recovered the ball after losing it. The features were the sweeping end runs by Hart and Smith of Purdue and McIntosh's plunges through the Franklin line.

Nebraska Rolls Up Total of 100 from Wesleyan

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 6.—University of Nebraska football team opened its season with a 100 to 0 victory over Nebraska Wesleyan, showing in its first contest the qualities that will make it a pennant contender in the Missouri Valley conference race this season.

PREP TENNIS STARS BATTLE FOR TITLES IN TOURNEY OCT. 20

Boys' and girls' singles and doubles will be played in the annual tournament for the Chicago Public High School league tennis championships. The schedule was arranged yesterday, with thirteen schools entering players. One entry from each school was booked in both singles and doubles.

The boys from north and south side schools were divided into two divisions, the north siders to play on the Lake Front playground courts at the foot of Chicago avenue and the lake, and the south siders being tentatively scheduled for matches at the University of Chicago courts.

All the girls' matches will be played at the Sears-Roebuck courts, and the whole tourney, from first round to finals, will be finished Friday, the play beginning at 9 o'clock in the morning. The first rounds of the boys' meet will be on Friday and Saturday, and the finals between the two division champions Oct. 20. The schedule follows:

Schupp, 92—12—80. Going over the full route, Dewey Weber won the club championship by defeating D. F. Davis, 3 and 2.

La Grange.

To clinch the Finance Committee trophy at La Grange A. C. Dewey had to go twenty holes with E. T. Franklin. Results of other finals:

Grounds Committee trophy—W. M. Smyth defeated W. F. Sanders, 2 and 1.

Membership Committee trophy—W. E. Holton defeated J. E. Tilton, 2 up.

Windsor.

A. C. McFarland had low net of 77 in the qualifying round for the House Committee trophy at Windsor. Pairings for the first round are: A. C. McFarland, 83—6—77, and E. E. Hardwood, 83—5—78; W. A. Chamberlain, 103—23—80, and C. A. Luse, 92—12—80; C. W. Leigh, 89—11—78, and L. F. Smith, 87—9—78; R. C. Wilson, 84—6—78, and A. C. Symmes, 94—14—80.

North Shore.

E. L. Angle won the championship of the North Shore club, defeating V. B. Scott, 11 and 9, in the thirty-six hole final. Angle had rounds of 38—39—77 and 39—39—78 for a total of 155. His card for the first round was:

Out ....4 4 5 4 5 4 3 4 5—38
In ....5 4 4 5 6 4 2 4 5—39—77

Scores in the qualifying round for the Gallie cup and pairings are: L. A. Bowman, 92—26—66, and J. D. Ross, 89—22—67; E. J. Hicks, 93—24—69, and W. Betheridge, 92—22—70; E. L. Angle, 79—7—72, and W. I. Woodward, 88—15—73; O. T. Reeves, 97—24—73, and J. R. Cochran, 100—27—73.

Flossmoor.

Meeting in the second round for the Illinois Central cup at Flossmoor, W. A. Farlow and W. H. Rockwood had to book twice over the route before reaching a decision, the former taking the match on the thirty-sixth green by superior putting.

The club championship reached the final stage, R. B. Sullivan defeating Charley Grimes, former western junior champion, 1 up, nineteen holes, and Raymond J. Daly defeating C. V. Essroger, 1 up.

Illinois Central cup—W. A. Farlow defeated W. H. Rockwood, 1 up in thirty-six holes; C. V. Essroger defeated J. W. Newlean, 2 and 1; E. B. Tolman defeated R. J. Daly, 2 up; W. M. Wilson defeated J. W. Busch, 1 up.

Match play against bogey, classes A, B, and D—E. B. Tolman, all even. Class C—D. B. Cheever, 2 up.

Edgewater.

After waiting some time for Beaven and Bagley, baseball bugs, who were tucked away in a box at the world's series game, Edgewater members staged their annual age limit handicap, open to players 41 years and older. L. D. Glanz, C. P. Meyers, H. K. Chapin, and T. J. Graydon were the leading prize winners, and among the trophies was a round trip ticket to Ponce de Leon Springs. Other results:

Club championship, first round — E. R. Moore defeated H. T. Dillon, 1 up; A. J. Kasper Jr. defeated H. D. Fargo, 5 and 3. Other matches postponed.

Sweepstakes—Class A, H. A. Lundahl, 84—10—74. Class B, J. R. Murphy, 96—20—76. Class C, L. D. Glanz, 99—28—71.

GOTHAM BETTING NOW FAVORS SOX

New York, Oct. 6.—[Special.]—Betting on the world's series at Jack Doyle's billiard academy veered around in favor of the White Sox after today's game. Betting on tomorrow's game is at even money on the Giants and 4 to 5 on the White Sox. The odds on the series were 3 to 4, with the White Sox favorites.

Percy Guard, the curb broker, announced he had money to place at evens on the series, 6 to 5 on tomorrow's game with the Giants favorites, if Schupp pitches, and even money on tomorrow's game with any other pitcher.

HURLER CICOTTE GETS HIS REWARD

Not long after the game was over at Comiskey park yesterday, fans who still loitered under the grand stand were startled by seeing a woman run forward to meet a sturdily built little man, throw her arms around his neck, and kiss him. One shouldn't be startled by that, however, because the sturdy little man was Eddie Cicotte coming from the Sox dressing room, and the woman was Mrs. Eddie Cicotte.

Spirited Racing Marks Card at West Side Track

Spirited racing made up for the slow time which prevailed in the various events at yesterday's west side trot races. The track was exceptionally slow and fast miles were out of the question. The record meeting which was scheduled for yesterday has been postponed until Oct. 11. Blue Line was back in th 2:15 pace and won over Vernon Boy, which paced a good race. Chicaskia Bill, a newcomer, accounted for the 2:20 trot after dropping the first heat to Esch. Summaries:

Green trot—Brushwood Girl, b. m., by Washington McKinney [O'Brien], won; The Raven, second; Martineise, third. Time—2:46, 2:42, 2:44.

2:30 trot—Emily Axworthy, b. m., by Hamlin Axworthy [Stiernberg], won; Patch Axworthy, second; Jay Custer, third; W. F. G., fourth. Time—2:36¼, 2:33¾.

2:15 pace—Blue Line, b. h., by Pearline [Whitney], won; Vernon Boy, second; Alma Girl, third. Time—2:23½, 2:23¼, 2:27¼.

2:20 trot—Chicaskia Bill, b. g., by Blanchard [Cameron], won; Esch, second; Great Stakes Jr., third; Doctor Brown, fourth. Time—2:26½, 2:24¼, 2:28.

Free for all trot—Garner, b. m., by Echo Bell [Whitney], won. Time—2:34.

2:20 pace [unfinished]—Allerton Earl, b. g., by Star Allerton [Bangert], won; George Gagan, second; Elastic Pointer Jr., third; Amara, fourth. Time—2:26¼, 2:27, 2:29¾.

Beloit Y. M. C. A. Campaign Wins.

Beloit, Wis., Oct. 6.—The week's campaign of Beloit Y. M. C. A. to secure 1,200 members was successful.

Woods and Waters by LARRY ST. JOHN

FINNED FRIGHTFULNESS.

FROM now until the northern lakes are "friz up" muskellunge will be "ripe," and mighty are the preparations of that band of old timers who choose the crisp days of autumn for their attack upon the finned exponents of frightfulness.

Did you ever take a good look at the dental display of any of the members of the pike tribe? Both upper and lower jaws of these fish are armed with long, keen teeth, while the roof of the mouth is provided with a nest of them all pointing backwards—the luckless frog or fish that once gets into the maw of a pike has a plump, not to say buxom, chance! Even the gill rakers of these fish are needle-sharp, as any fisherman who has ever attempted to land one by slipping his hand into its gills will testify.

We once showed a muskie head, mounted open-mouthed, to a lady. She carefully examined its teeth and tested their sharpness with her finger. Then she exclaimed triumphantly, as though she had made a great discovery, "I bet they bite!" Gosh, it must be great to feel like old man Columbus' ambitious son Christopher!

* *

No, this is not a picatorial dental study to be read before the annual banquet of the Society of Tooth Engineers and Groan Makers, but the teeth of fishes are important in classifying them scientifically and are also a guide to the angler as to habits, feeding grounds, food and, of course, natural bait. Even if we had no knowledge of the pike tribe, one look at their teeth would tell almost a complete life history.

The muskellunge is the kaiser of the pike tribe. Submarine ruthlessness is where he shines and he gobbles up his smaller neighbors with great gusto. He is beautifully designed by nature to lead a billy mason-bob lafollette bushwhacking existence, hiding in the short or tall grass and making unexpected forays upon his fellows.

* *

There are two distinct species of muskellunge. The spotted muskie (Esox masquinongy) is found in the great lakes, in the St. Lawrence river, in Canada, and in Wisconsin and Minnesota. The Ohio species is found in Chautauqua lake, New York, in the Ohio river and tributaries, and among the Thousand islands, where it coexists with the spotted.

The unspotted muskellunge (E. immaculatus) of the Wisconsin and Minnesota lakes is apparently a sub-specie, although our leading icthyologists are not very positive about this. This fish is sometimes called the "tiger muskie" or "great northern pike."

Stream muskies are usually better fighters than those from the lakes, not merely because the stream helps them, but they are hardier, stronger fish. The best known muskie streams are the St. Lawrence, the Mahoming and Muskingum in Ohio, the Chippewa and Manitowish in Wisconsin, and the French in Canada. Many big specimens were once taken from the rivers in northern Kentucky by the good folk who originated the multiplying casting reel.

* *

Muskellunge breed in the spring immediately after the wall eyes break up housekeeping. The male is a gallant lover and is usually the smaller, as well as the lesser, half. No nest is made, but the eggs are expelled and fertilized and then left to their fate. A female weighing thirty-five pounds is good for about 265,000 eggs—somehow prominent teeth and belief in big families seem to go together.

Under natural conditions a very small proportion of these eggs hatch. As many as 97 per cent have been hatched artificially, but cannibalism among the fry often offsets these big hatches—the muskie takes to frightfulness at a tender age and keeps at it until old age or a guide's gaff lay him low.

* *

There is a belief quite general in the muskie country of Wisconsin that the muskie cannot live in land locked waters and that these fish are never found in waters that drain north into Lake Superior. How true the latter is we cannot say, but the former seems improbable, since these fish have been kept and have bred in hatchery ponds.

Considering its size and importance very little is known as to where the muskellunge will and will not thrive.

SHARE IN THE GLORY OF WHITE SOX FEAT GOES TO MILWAUKEE

Milwaukee was SOME contributor to the victory of the White Sox. In addition to "Happy" Felsch making a home run, it was learned that a Milwaukeean broke Eddie Cicotte into big league baseball.

Joe S. Smith, former Detroit newspaper man and now an editor of trade publications in Milwaukee, persuaded the Detroit ball club to sign Cicotte.

"Eddie was pitching for the Sault St. Marie, Mich., team when he first attracted attention," said Mr. Smith. "The Detroit Athletic club team had two games scheduled at the 'Soo' and Cicotte was then twirling semi-professional ball. He pitched both games in succession and won both, and it was some task, for the D. A. C. team had such players as old Sam Thompson of National league fame, and others.

Recommends Eddie to Navin.

"Returning to Detroit, I immediately sought out Frank J. Navin, who had asked me to keep tab on promising players as we traveled through the state. Upon my recommendation Cicotte was signed by Detroit and went down to Augusta, Ga., for the spring training trip. Bill Armour was then manager of the Tigers, but he permitted Cicotte to go to the Eastern league, and his progress from that organization is well known to baseball fans.

"'Armour said that I was not ripe for the big league,' said Cicotte, 'but I'll be in full bloom some day.' And I know that the ambition of his life was realized when he won the opening game of the world's series with the Giants.

Business Rating Is $100,000.

"Cicotte conducts a profitable garage business in Ecorse, a short run from Detroit, and from an obscure semi-professional ball pitcher he has grown to having a $100,000 business rating."

Goals—Widner, Beutlichc, Baker, Manchester.

Hyde Park high defeated Crane heavies, 2 to 0, in their soccer league match at Hyde Park.

SOCCER GAMES TODAY.

Matches carded for this afternoon in the fourth round of the Chicago District Soccer league are as follows:

First division—Scottish Americans and Bricklayers at Forty-second and Chicago avenues; Bohemian Americans and Swedish Americans at Forty-sixth street and Kedzie avenue; Joliet at Harvey.

Second division—Lake Forest at St. George's.

Third division—Rangers and Swedish American II. at Thirty-first street and Tripp avenue; Palmer Park and Union at One-Hundred and Eleventh street and Indiana avenue; Hungarians and Atlas at Dauphin Park.

Fourth division—Cechie II. and Fram II. at Twenty-sixth street and Kostner avenue; Hebrews and Hungarians II. at Sixteenth street and Avers avenue; Danish Americans and Roseland at Crawford and Lawrence avenue; Sparta and Victoria at Twenty-eighth street and Kenton avenue.

In the Peel cup series Olympia will play at Calumet park and Columbia and Washington Park at Fifty-second street and Cottage Grove avenue.

Arkansas, 34; Warrensburg N., 9.

Fayette, Ark., Oct. 6.—The University of Arkansas defeated the Warrensburg, Mo., State Normal eleven, 34 to 9, in the opening game of the season.

Chicago Managers Pennant Game.

Monarchs and Divisions will meet in the first game of a series of three for the Chicago Baseball Managers' pennant at Sixtieth and Division streets today.

HOME RUN DIES IN M. DE VRY'S MITT

He saw it coming on the fly. Casting aside his program and pencil, Maurice de Vry, 4647 Drover street, shoved three other pairs of waiting hands to one side, then made a short leap and firmly grasped that home run ball from Happy Felsch's bat. When he looked for his program and pencil they were gone, but what did they amount to when he had the ball which settled the issue in the opening game?

A dispute arose a few seconds later, but not over possession of the ball. According to an announcement the maker of a home run was entitled to a $50 Liberty loan bond. Several near De Vry insisted the catcher of such a ball also should receive a bond. THE TRIBUNE was asked, "What about it?"

THE TRIBUNE doesn't decide bets.

Marquette, 61; St. Norbert, 0.

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 6.—Marquette university tromped all over St. Norbert college, scoring better than a point a minute. The score was 61 to 0, Marquette running a consistent foot race from goal to goal.

FIRST OPENING FOR FOES AWAY

New York, Oct. 6.—For the first time in the Giants' four winnings of the pennant New York fans had to content themselves today with the start of a world's series away from home. On every other occasion the McGrawites have begun the play on their own grounds. Elaborate preparations for bulletin board and ticker service were expected to take care of this aching void in a measure.

Distribution of tickets at the Giants' offices was on in full tilt. A long line of fans stretched out of the offices and into the corridors, while a couple of husky special policemen herded them in order.

There was little betting here, mostly at even money.

Mannasau's Run Beats Kieckhefer.

Al Mannasau [45] defeated Kieckhefer [57], 45 to 50, in their Chicago Billiard league match at Mussey's Madison street room, going out in sixty-five innings. Kieckhefer led, 44 to 27, at the fiftieth inning, but Mannasau started two innings later and ran 5, 2, 2, 1, 1, 4, 1, 1 in succession.

BALK BY CICOTTE IS GIANTS' ALIBI

Although the New York Giants accepted defeat gracefully in the first game of the world's series, nevertheless the New Yorkers were offering one alibi last night around the lobby of the Auditorium, where they are quartered. They accused Eddie Cicotte of being guilty of a balk.

Eddie picked two runners off first base during the game, nabbing Holke in the second inning and Kauff in the eighth, and although none of the New York players claimed a balk at the time, last night the talk was that Eddie wasn't fair.

After watching the things done by National league pitchers, especially left handers, for the last ten years one wonders how any National league player could ever accuse an American league pitcher of making a balk.

Knox and Lombard Victors.

Galesburg, Ill., Oct. 6.—Two football games were played here today, Knox defeating Iowa Wesleyan, 25 to 0, and Lombard defeating Macomb Normal, 72 to 0. Ray Murphy, full back for Macomb, broke an ankle.

MORE COPS TO POLICE PARK

Additional mounted policemen will be assigned to White Sox park today to keep those wishing to buy bleacher seats in line and prevent disorder. Several arguments and fights among those standing in line yesterday caused Capt. Michael Gallery of the Thirty-fifth street station to ask Chief Schuettler for additional men. Yesterday twenty-five mounted police were assigned to the park. They will be increased to seventy-five today.

Because street cars on Thirty-fifth street were stalled by the long line of automobiles waiting to get into parking quarters a conference will be held between the park officials and police today to map out a route to be followed by automobiles.

Shoot Event to L. B. Clark.

L. B. Clarke won the weekly shoot of the Lincoln Park Gun club with a toltal of 47 birds, Dr. W. E. Little, G. A. Smith, and E. E. Hall tying at 46. Mrs. R. C. Millen shot 45. The contest was 50 targets at 16 yards. H. B. Kirkwood dropped 53 and W. Peck and H. W. Cadwalader tied at 45 in the professionals' shoot.

The Most Beautiful Car in America

MONDAY noon we open the Paige closed car salon at our sales rooms, 2215 Michigan Avenue. From now until the end of October we shall have on exhibition a complete line of the new Paige models.

We have given these exquisite cars the most artistic setting that could be devised. Neither pains nor expense have been spared in the preparations. For it is our privilege to exhibit "The Most Beautiful Cars in America" and we intend that the surroundings shall be in keeping with the cars themselves.

In addition to the decorations we have planned many novel features that are quite worth while. The "Indoor Demonstration," for instance, is bound to prove the talk of Chicago. This is one of our surprise features and we must withhold all details until you have seen it personally.

But we can tell you something about the cars. We can prepare you for the most attractive "automobile show" that has ever been held under private auspices.

First of all, then, please understand that each one of these cars is an original creation of the Paige Designing Staff. None of them are commonplace "types." They are cars with that rare quality of Individuality.

Withal, they are cars of excellent taste—expressing the quiet dignity and elegance of a true Patrician.

In coach work, finish and general appointment, we say unhesitatingly that mere money cannot buy anything better. Quite irrespective of cost, the Paige Designers were instructed to produce the last word in ultra luxurious closed vehicles. They have achieved just that result.

In the line there are Limousines, Sedans, Town Cars and Coupes. There are seven and five passenger models. But, while the matter of choice is purely a personal consideration, it is impossible to make a mistake. If it is a Paige—it is correct.

It is hardly necessary at this time to speak in terms of mechanics. You have already heard of the remarkable chassis which is known as the "Paige 55." We are content to say that no more efficient combination of engineering and body building can be found on the American market.

Easy starting features incorporated in the Paige closed car models enable the driver of a Paige car to start his motor as easily in extreme cold weather as in summer. Also, every atom of low grade fuel is vaporized before entering the combustion chamber. If you realize what this means you will not invest in a closed car that might be impractical to operate during the winter months.

Other advance features will also prove of interest.

But come in. Be our guest for an afternoon and, in addition to a pleasant experience, you will receive a liberal education in the art of designing fine motor cars. Above all, make it a point to bring the ladies of your family.

The Sedan "Six-55" 7-passenger, $2850

Essex "Six-55" 7-passenger $1775; Coupe "Six-55" 4 passenger $2850; Town Car "Six-55" 7-passenger $3230; Limousine "Six-55" 7 passenger $3230; Sedan "Six-39" 5-passenger $1925; Brooklands 4-passenger $1795; Linwood "Six-39" 5-passenger $1330; Glendale "Six-39" Chummy Roadster $1330; Dartmoor "Six-39" 2- or 3-passenger $1330.

M. E. CONFERENCE WANTS $50,000 FOR OLD PASTORS

Touching Plea Increases the Estimate by $15,000.

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

Belvidere, Ill., Oct. 6.—[Special.]—A plea which brought tears and an excoriation of the policy of the church which pays all of its ministers except the old preacher brought an increase in the amount of support asked for from $35,000 to $50,000 at this morning's session of the Rock River conference.

The committee had recommended the smaller amount when the Rev. W. B. Leach, Hubbard Woods, a retired minister, at one time one of the best known of Chicago pastors, sprang to his feet and demanded the amount be increased to a sum sufficient to pay the old preachers the amount due them.

Cites Bishop's Pay.

"The bishops get their retiring allowance in full," exclaimed the thoroughly aroused Dr. Leach. "Why should not the old preachers receive their full amount?"

"I talked with an old minister whose tears wet his pillow last night because on the small allowance of $350 he must support his aged mother and a 17 year old invalid daughter.

"I'd be telling a lie if I should say I didn't want my money. I used to have money, but I was euchred out of it by a brother Methodist."

"I am told I have children who can support me. My boy Billy is in the army fighting for Uncle Sam and before I would ask him for a cent I would die. I have a daughter and she lives in a beautiful home, but why should I ask her to give me board and room after I have given years of service to the church?"

Plan Gradual Increase.

The Rev. E. B. Crawford, chairman of the board of stewards having the support of the retired ministers in charge, explained it was the intention of the conference to gradually increase the amount allowed the old ministers until in the course of a few years the full amount due would be reached?

"But I'll be dead by that time," shouted Dr. Leach while the audience applauded.

The motion to adopt the larger amount was made by the Rev. P. H. Swift of River Forest and seconded by the Rev. John Thompson and was carried by a large majority.

National Prohibition.

National prohibition in two years was the prediction of Illinois State Superintendent McBride of the Anti-Saloon league.

Gen. B. F. Sheets of Oregon, whose two sons, the Rev. F. H. Sheets and the Rev. F. D. Sheets, are members of the conference, was 85 years of age today and was introduced to the conference and invited to a seat on the platform beside Bishop Nicholson.

American Soldier Dies During Service in France

Washington, D. C., Oct. 6.—Allan B. Mercer, private of engineers, died of pneumonia on Sept. 30 while on duty with the American expeditionary forces, the war department announced today. His father, A. R. Mercer, lives at Cooston, Ore.

"SHOOT TO KILL" IS CAMP ORDER

Camp Funston, Kas., Oct. 6.—"Shoot to kill" was the new general order issued today to soldiers doing guard duty. Until this time sentinels have been fairly lenient with trespassers at Camp Funston. The order follows the cases of numerous persons strolling through the camp at night who have been unable to give an acount of themselves when hailed by the guard.

Fifteen thousand genuine bugs, intent upon every move in the battle between Comiskey's Sox and McGraw's Giants at Chicago, saw the first of the world's series game flashed, strike and ball, play by play, upon an electric scoreboard and announced through megaphones.

About 4,000 troops arrived today from Missouri, Kansas, and Arizona.

Student Officers at Fort Snelling Robbed

Fort Snelling, Minn., Oct. 6.—Personal effects valued at $1,000 have been stolen from barracks of student officers at Fort Snelling in a series of thefts during the last few weeks, it became known today. Officers are convinced that the thieves are not connected with the post or camp. The students were inoculated against smallpox today.

HOME RULE FOR FINNS IS PLAN

PETROGRAD, Oct. 6.—The Finnish senate has prepared a plan for the formation of a new independent government for Finland, with a president elected by direct vote for a five year term and with a cabinet responsible to the diet, according to a special dispatch from Helsingfors today.

It is proposed to send diplomatic representatives to other nations and also ask representation in the general peace conference.

The expectation is expressed that after the war Russia will withdraw her military forces, vacating the fortresses.

Supply of Furs Cut by Trappers Joining Army

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 6.—Drafting of trappers into the national army has materially cut down the supply of raw furs in the United States, according to Mrs. Valerie Bell of New York, who is here to attend the $3,000,000 fur sale which will open Monday at the International Fur exchange and continue for five days. The value of the offerings at the April sale was $4,000,000.

Ford

COMMERCIAL CARS MEAN ECONOMY

In years past there was an excuse for using something else—but not now. The light operating expense of the Ford chassis with special Commercial body makes the use of the slow moving, heavy eating horse, pure neglect.

The Ford Commercial Car has met with such universal satisfaction that business houses everywhere are using it. By any fair comparison it will be found to do its work, and more of it, at a lower cost per ton mile, than a horse and wagon, or any other truck manufactured, considering first cost, interest, depreciation, maintenance and operating cost.

Mandel Bros., Chicago Merchants, discontinued horse and wagon delivery over three years ago, at which time they purchased several heavy, expensive delivery cars. During the past three years, however, they have taken on eighteen (18) Ford delivery cars and claim them to be giving greater satisfaction at much less expense than other makes.

Marshall Field & Co.
Carson Pirie Scott & Co.
Rothschild & Company.
Chas. A. Stevens & Bros.
Siegel, Cooper & Co.
Boston Store.
The Fair.
Hillman's.
U. S. Postoffice Dept.
U. S. Army, Chicago.
U. S. Navy, Chicago.

Peoples G., L. & C. Co.
Chicago Telephone Co.
Standard Oil Co. of Ind.
Consumers Co.
Schulze Baking Co.
McBride Bros. & Knobbe.
Kendall Ice Cream Co.
W. A. Watson & Sons.

Remember, too, the high standards of Ford Service are behind every purchase.

MOVE TO REPEAL GAS ORDINANCE IS THREATENED

Garner Will Act if the New Plan Fails to Satisfy.

Unless the new gas rate ordinance works out satisfactorily at the end of a year John P. Garner, commissioner of public service, will ask the city council to annul the measure.

There is a clause in the measure which provides that the council may annul it at the expiration of one year after its passage. The ordinance has more than six months to run.

Scores of Complaints.

"We have had scores of complaints from gas consumers," said Mr. Garner. "The gas company has 200 inspectors out readjusting stoves and burners, but from the number of complaints we have had I don't think that is enough."

Some of the complaints alleged that the new gas, even when used with mantles, flickers, and, in some instances, will not ignite at all.

Former Alderman Complains.

Former Ald. James A. Kearns, who was a member of the council committee on gas, oil, and electric light, which recommended the new ordinance, and who was opposed to this action, complained during the day that he had been trying for two days to have the gas company adjust his burners but that he had been unsuccessful.

Tests of the gas in various parts of the city during the day showed that the company, in trying to supply gas of twelve candle power and 565 'heat units, as required by the ordinance, in a few instances fell below this requirement, but Mr. Garner said it would be carefully watched and if there was any effort to keep below the required standard suits would be filed against the company.

FEED HOGS OATS INSTEAD WHEAT, URGED BY U. S.

As a result of reports that farmers are feeding wheat to hogs because corn commands a higher price Harry A. Wheeler, federal food administrator for Illinois, has issued a statement urging farmers to make more use of oats.

"Feding wheat to hogs because it is lower in price than corn is a serious mistake," said the statement. "Even if the hungry human beings of the world were not in want of every grain of wheat not needed for seed, it is a much poorer live stock feed than oats or barley. Oats is the crop we should be feeding to everything from humans to chickens this year.

"There is a monster crop of the finest quality oats in this state, worth only 65 to 70 cents a bushel on the market.

"Wheat is the most wasteful feed that could be put into hogs."

U. S. Warns Shippers of License Procuring Firms

Washington, D. C., Oct. 6.—[Special.]—It has recently come to the notice of the bureau of export licenses that certain firms are making the statement that if applications are filed through their office it will facilitate the securing of licenses. For this so-called facilitation they are requiring fees from shippers. Shippers are informed that if they employ firms which pretend to facilitate the procuring of licenses they are merely throwing their money away, as licenses are granted in the order of their receipt and no facilities are given to the applications of any one firm over another.

FILE PETITION FOR INDEPENDENT JUDICIAL SLATE

Lawyers' Association Has Ticket to Rival Bi-Partisan.

Filing of the petition of candidates of the Lawyers' Association of Illinois for judgeships of the Superior and Circuit courts in the office of the county clerk yesterday starts the fight against the bipartisan judicial slate, agreed upon by the Republicans and Democrats. There are now three sets of candidates in the field, the bipartisan, the Socialist, and the Lawyers'.

Under the law it was necessary to have 2 per cent of registered voters sign the petitions of the independent candidates, or 10,825 names. According to representatives of the Lawyers' association more than 18,000 signatures have been secured.

The New Candidates.

The independent candidates are: Abraham D. Gash, Thos. E. Swanson, George R. Walker, William Reeda, William B. Moak, Dillard B. Baker, John D. Farrell, George McMahon, Mark D. Goodman, Edgar C. Blum.

For the Circuit court to succeed the late Judge John Gibbons, Harry W. Standidge has been nominated, and to succeed the late Judge Lockwood Honore A. J. Bedard.

Harry W. Standidge, president of the lawyers' association, after filing the petition, said the signatures were obtained in a little over two days.

Argues Unconstitutionality.

"The act for nomination by convention passed at the last session of the general assembly seems to be unconstitutional, and the nominations made by convention under the said law are believed to be invalid," he said.

"The chief object of the Lawyers' Association of Illinois and the independent judiciary candidates is that the voters shall be afforded a choice for the candidates at the election and prevent a disfranchisement of voters by the appointment of judges by county committeemen."

7 MEN FIGHT FOR NEGRO; 2 WHITES SLAIN, 1 WOUNDED

Montgomery, Ala., Oct. 6.—In a battle between seven men over a Negro three white men were killed and three wounded at La Pine, Ala., thirty-five miles south of here.

A posse of four men went to Oliver Enzer's home to demand that he give up a Negro wanted for holding up a white man. Their summons was met with a hail of shot from the Negro's house.

Oliver Enzer, W. L. Griffith, and Hub Cannon were killed in the battle that followed. Hugh Enzer was so badly wounded he will die. Prof. L. H. Hudson and Justin Enzer were also wounded, but less seriously. The sheriff and more men immediately hurried to La Pine.

Two of the dead and one of the wounded were members of the posse. The three Enzers were resisting a search of the premises.

John L. Sullivan "Read the Future" Of Men Who Drink

As the result of his extensive personal experience and world-wide observation, the world's ex-champion Prize Fighter said several years ago, "I can count on my fingers all the really 'moderate drinkers' I ever knew."

Today modern medical science in substance says: "As alcohol is a poison, its use results in a—more or less—diseased condition resulting from the poison 'stored up' in the system from either moderate or excessive indulgence."

This diseased condition explains "Reason Why" for the "physical desire" of the moderate drinker—the "physical craving" of the regular drinker—the "physical demand" of the excessive drinker—and THE CAUSE of all continued indulgence, "Hopeless Wrecks" and "Untimely Graves" of formerly high class men.

The Franklin Car

Three Times As Many People Are Now Buying Franklin Cars

"AMERICANS," said a foreign critic, "know the price of everything and the value of nothing."

That was before our entry into the War. Today it is a different story.

The past few months have developed a remarkable understanding of the National duty to curb needless waste and extravagance.

A typical illustration is the change in standards of judging and buying a motor car.

Only a short time back a car had to be everything but practical to attract the average motorist.

He wasn't interested in upkeep because his eye was on ponderous mechanism.

Gasoline didn't worry him because he was comparing wheel-bases.

Tire economy was not in his mind because he was judging freezing mixtures for an unnecessary water-cooling system.

And getting rid of his old car at a fire-sale price for a new model of another make he figured was part of the game.

▼

Today economy—both in gasoline and tires—is being forced on the attention of the motorist. By rising costs, by Government officials, by newspapers and magazines the problem is before the motorist daily.

What is he to do?

He is looking for a way out—some way to cut his cost in half and maintain his mileage.

He must get down to fact and figures. Know what the car he intends buying will actually do on a gallon of gasoline and a set of tires. Take into consideration the depreciation each year. And turn his back on pleasing phrases and tempting "claims."

There's less mystery than one thinks about this economy problem. A car has thrift or it hasn't. Something "in between" is like the proverbial "something just as good."

▼

An unfailing gauge of the worth of any fine car today is the way it is selling today.

Now what are the sales facts about the Franklin?

The present and next building schedule of Franklin Cars will not catch up with orders on hand. Franklin Cars are being built at a rate of three times as many as a year ago and the public demand still continues to exceed production.

The Franklin Car was bound to become more popular each year, even in normal times. The war, forcing utility and economy before everything else, quickened this movement.

Today, as for fifteen years, the Franklin Car stands as the most practical, efficient and economical fine car in America.

▼

Just consider the significance of the National Efficiency Test of 179 Franklin Cars on July 13th, 1917. Over all sorts of roads, in weather partly fair and partly rainy, these cars recorded at 179 different points in the United States the remarkable average of 40.3 miles to the single gallon of gasoline.

This record shows what the Franklin does under standard efficiency test rules. The practical motorist might ask himself what any other make of car can do along the same lines. Such a comparative test offers a standard which owner operation can modify in the same respect against one car and another.

High gasoline mileage means economy all along the line. It takes no expert to know that if a car is overburdened with heavy weight and undergoing constant wear and tear the gasoline tank will tell it by low mileage.

Take tires. For five years Franklin owners have been reporting their individual tire mileage. The average for this five-year period is 10,203 miles.

Now compare the annual depreciation of the average fine car with the Franklin. Look over the daily used-car advertisements and visit the places selling used-cars. It's a rare case when you find the Franklin. If you do—why is it quoted so high?

There is something here for every motorist to think about—and these are days when a motorist has to think if he wants to ride.

Who judges the judge?

"I have heard all about this case from gossipers in the street and I'll give judgment now without examining any of the evidence."

No judge upon any bench would ever dare to deliver himself thus.

And yet—how much real evidence will you sift before you buy a new automobile?

Hearsay doesn't always hear aright—has no standing in any court.

What do you actually know about the new Twin Six?

Have you examined—at first hand—the facts concerning its great and smooth power—and its ability to save gasoline?

Do you know how it differs from other automobiles in its comfort—elegance—and the completeness of appointment?

You may think that you can't afford a Twin Six—but do you really know, until you have all the facts before you.

Your judgment in this vitally important matter will have to stand Time's test of efficiency and economy.

RIFLE SHORTAGE STIRS ANXIETY OF GOVERNMENT

Recruits Forced to Drill with Broomsticks and Wooden Guns.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 6.—[Special.]—With a large proportion of the drafted men in the national army cantonments compelled to drill with broomsticks, the shortage of rifles is causing anxiety almost everywhere save in the war department.

Six months after the declaration of war the manufacture of rifles had begun on a limited scale, and there is no assurance that the output can be increased materially for many months.

Already there is talk of a congressional investigation of the responsibility for the shortage, and Gen. Crozier, chief of ordnance, is busy explaining the causes of the delay.

Survey Proves Failure.

Before the United States jumped into the war the war department made an elaborate survey of the factories of the country at great cost in order to be able to initiate on short notice a vast program of ordnance manufacture. The survey, however, was a total failure so far as it pertained to providing immediate facilities for the rapid manufacture of an adequate supply of rifles.

Secretary of War Baker defends Gen. Crozier from the criticism which has been heaped upon him of late and refuses to be pessimistic.

"As a matter of fact," he said, "the rifle situation is very good. There are now 5,000 Krag-Jorgensen rifles for every training camp for use in drilling the men and for target practice. More will be forthcoming from time to time. No, I do not mean more Krags. I mean more rifles of some kind. The government is not making any more Krags.

Some Broomsticks.

"Some of the men are drilling with broomsticks and wooden guns, and they will probably have to continue to do so for some time, but each man will have a rifle when he goes to France."

In regard to rifles for the army in France, Secretary Baker raised today the ratio previously given of three rifles for each man. He said that there were five rifles per man in France, and that this would continue to be the ratio. The present rate of manufacture was about 1,500 a day, he said, and that rate would soon be increased, while in a relatively short time the rate of production would be fast enough to meet all requirements.

Chronology of Program.

1. When the United States severed relations with Germany, in February, the government's own capacity for making Springfield rifles was not fully employed. However, a general study of preparations was begun by the ordnance department.

2. War was declared April 6. The three private factories manufacturing Enfields for the British government were informed that the government would want the entire output of the factories. Negotiations began at once with Great Britain for taking over these factories. The machines in them were owned by Great Britain. The factories were the Winchester, the Eddystone, and the Remington.

3. In May it was decided to rechamber for American ammunition the Enfield rifles which these three plants were ready to produce. Work began at once on some of the new gauges and machinery that would be necessary because of the change in bore. For others the ordnance department had to make new drawings and specifications.

Specifications for Rifles.

4. On June 2 the ordinance department delivered to the manufacturers the first specifications of the completed rifle the government wanted. These first specifications required the rechambered Enfield rifles from these three private factories to be uniform as to ammunition and in some other respects with the government's own Springfield rifles, but not altogether interchangeable.

5. In August the final specifications, further refining the rifle and bringing it to practical interchangeability in every respect, were completed by the ordnance department and turned over to the three private gun factories. This entailed still other additional machinery and gauges.

6. Two weeks ago the first actual deliveries to the government from the three private factories began.

Arms Companies Busy.

The Winchester Arms company, the Remington Arms company and the Eddystone company, when the United States entered the war, were turning out rifles of the Enfield type for the British at the rate of 6,000 a day. These rifles were accepted by the British board of inspection as interchangeable for all practical purposes. That is, their parts were interchangeable to the extent to which the individual soldier could make changes on the battlefield. What the ordnance board desired was that the rifles produced by all three plants should be universally interchangeable.

Necessity for Speed.

The only private plant now delivering rifles to the government is the Winchester. Its product is forthcoming at this time, however, only because the heads of that institution, appreciating the necessity for speed in actual production, began making Enfields three weeks ago without specific orders from the government. They began on their own responsibility alone.

The Enfield rifles being manufactured by the Winchester plant are rechambered for American ammunition. They are being made from gauges manufactured on orders from the heads of the Winchester plant and before members of the ordnance bureau had reached a final decision as to the exact nature of changes to be made in the weapon.

The Winchester company expects gradually to increase its output of the present partially interchangeable weapon while making changes in machinery that eventually will enable it to turn out the perfected weapon.

Ex-Judge Asks $100,000 on False Arrest Charge

James C. Norman, former judge of Bloomington, yesterday filed a praecipe in a $100,000 damage suit against Charles B. Pride, millionaire paper manufacturer, Arthur A. Brewster, employe of Pride's, and Attorney Charles W. Greenfield. Attorneys Farrell and Thompson said the basis is false arrest.

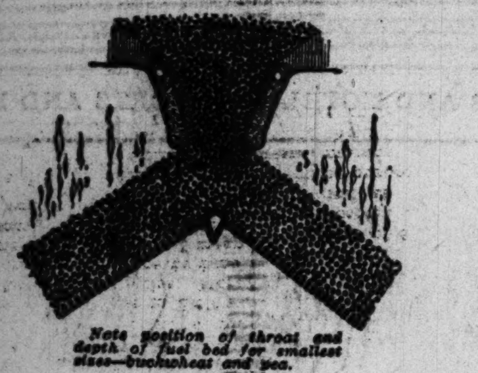
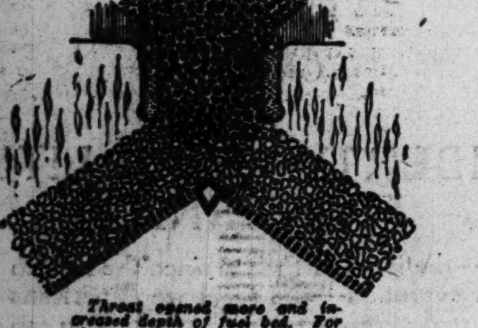
Replace Your Old Heater With the NEWPORT

This Is Why



Note position of throat and depth of fuel bed for smallest sizes—buckwheat and pea.



Throat opened more and increased depth of fuel bed. For chestnut size.

THE ADJUSTABLE WATER-COOLED THROAT, a scientific feature possessed by the NEWPORT ALONE—is the ONLY throat, in ANY self-feed type of boiler which permits the use of any size of coal—and burns less of it. Then, too, this Adjustable Throat automatically regulates the depth of the fuel bed to suit the size of coal. Thus there is always perfect combustion.

Superiority of the Newport Type

There is no doubt about the superiority of the self-feed type of boiler over the old style. But when the smaller sizes of coal are NOT obtainable—as is sometimes the case—fuel of larger size will choke in the throat of the ordinary self-feed boiler and render the boiler practically useless. But the Newport Boiler burns ALL SIZES OF COAL WITH EQUAL efficiency—and less of it. This is the record of hundreds of Newports, in homes both large and small. See how this Adjustable Throat works, giving perfect combustion.

Many Other Newport Advantages

This is only One of some Twenty-three Extra Advantages that make Newport Boilers the Most Efficient, Most Economical and Easiest to take care of. Come and see these features. See the extra large magazine, which holds enough fuel for two or three days in moderate weather and for twenty-four hours in the coldest; the automatic regulation of heat, the ash spray and many other exclusive, scientific features that save time, labor and money, and give complete satisfaction and sure comfort. Then see what other boilers have to offer. It will pay to do a little "shopping"—to be a little curious.

Where You Will Find the Newport

In one magnificent residence in Chicago—equal in heating requirements to a thirty-six flat building—you will find a battery of Newports. In one exclusive residence district alone forty-two Newports are in use, in another district thirty-eight. One neighbor telling another made these sales. This is usual with the Newport. Most likely in your neighborhood some wise and happy family is now enjoying economy and comfort with the Newport.

Be Cautious. Investigate.

With coal so high and scarce, you can't afford to be hypnotized with names or claims. Make others show you—make US show you. After that we're glad to leave it to you, to your heating contractor and architect.

If you act soon you'll have time to REPLACE YOUR OLD BOILER with a Newport before cold weather sets in. The Newport is equally efficient for steam, vapor, vapor-vacuum or hot water systems. Come and see the Newport yourself, hear what owners say, or if you live too far, write us, and we'll tell you where you can see a Newport in some home or building near you. Be sure to call or write today.

A Gift to Every Woman

With Jiffy-Jell Desserts

Here is a one-week offer which costs us thousands of dollars. It can never be made again. We make it to induce all housewives to try Jiffy-Jell desserts and salads. You will never know, until you try them, what delights they offer you. So we want you to try them this week.

Add Flavor This Way

No other quick gelatine dessert has ever offered such delightful fresh-fruit taste. So Jiffy-Jell is distinct and exclusive. We want you to compare it with old-time quick desserts.

That is why we make this offer—six aluminum dessert molds free. Try Jiffy-Jell and get them.

Jiffy-Jell

For Desserts and Salads

Real Fruit Flavors Sealed in Glass

This is our offer: Buy six packages of Jiffy-Jell from your grocer, then mail us the coupon below. Send with it 10 cents to pay postage and packing, and we will mail you six aluminum dessert molds, worth 60c. You may have all one style or assorted.

All Flavors In Bottles

This offer ends Saturday night. It means a clear saving of 50 cents. And it means introduction to quick, fruity desserts which you will be glad to know.

Flavors Made from the Fruit Itself

It is made from rare-grade gelatine—Waukesha gelatine—which costs twice as much as the common.

Its flavors are made from the fresh, ripe fruit. They are highly concentrated. Half a ripe pineapple is used to flavor a single Jiffy-Jell dessert.

The flavors come sealed in glass vials, so they keep their freshness until used. You add the flavor when the jell has partly cooled, so the flavor isn't scalded

10 Flavors in Glass Vials

Mint—for Mint Jell
Lime—for Salad Jells
Raspberry, Cherry, Strawberry, Orange, Loganberry, Pineapple, Lemon — For Desserts
Also Coffee Flavor

Mint

With mint flavor—made from mint leaves—you make a wondrous mint jell, or a mint sauce, for use with roast lamb or cold meats

With lime flavor—made from lime fruit—you make a salad jell, tart, zestful and green. Mix the salad articles into the jell before cooling.

Limes

Buy six packages in assorted flavors. Each package makes six to eight servings. Buy them this week. then send us the coupon with 10 cents for postage and packing. We will then mail the six molds which will last you a lifetime.

Be sure you get Jiffy-Jell—the only quick dessert with these bottled fruit flavors. And mail the coupon before Saturday night.

WARFARE AMID PERPETUAL SNOW—This, the Cina Lana and Pordoi pass, one of the most beautiful spots in the Alps, was recently taken by the Italians in their famous and significant drive against the Austrians. Positions precariously perched upon cliffs and in rocky defiles were taken by the Italians in attacks attended with danger unknown on level fields of combat. The sentinel is standing near a conquered line of trenches, which were long contested. Two crosses show the resting place of soldiers who have fallen in battle on the steep side of a high mountain.

Do You Remember?

DO YOU remember when Huckleberry Finn and Tom Sawyer set out on their great adventure, looking for treasure in the grim cave across the Mississippi?

Do you remember how Tom and little Becky Thatcher were lost in the cave for days, while the whole countryside searched wildly? And how, one day, peeping around a dark corner of the cave, they suddenly saw Indian Joe? And when, months later, after the children had escaped from the cave, it was opened, do you remember what they found just inside?

Do you remember, in short, the greatest joys of your boyhood—the things you did yourself, and the things you wanted to do and could not and that Tom Sawyer did for you?

MARK TWAIN

25 VOLUMES

"He traveled always such a broad and brilliant highway with plumes flying and crowds following after"—and his death left nations weeping. But in a larger sense he is not dead. He lives forever in work more truly American than that of any other man.

RUDYARD KIPLING, writing to the most important officials in India, said: "I have seen Mark Twain this golden morning, have shaken his hand, and smoked a cigar—no, two cigars—with him, and talked with him for more than two hours! Understand clearly that I do not despise you; indeed I don't. I am only very sorry for you, from the Viceroy downward."

Perhaps you think you have read a good deal of Mark Twain. Are you sure? Have you read all the novels? All the short stories? All the brilliant fighting essays—all the history?

Mark Twain has been translated into more foreign languages than any other American writer.

BOYS' STORIES

Remember that Tom Sawyer is only one of the books in which Mark Twain shows his wonderful understanding of boys. No one has ever written of boys as did Mark Twain.

HISTORY

Read "Joan of Arc" if you would know Mark Twain in all his greatness—the most amazing story in the world—accurate as history, spiritual in idea, beautiful in execution.

ROMANCE

Everything he wrote was touched with the golden freshness of youth and romance, whether in such books as "The Prince and the Pauper," "A Connecticut Yankee" or "Roughing It."

SHORT STORIES

They are so many and so good.

ESSAYS

He could not see injustice without fighting it. The flame of his anger seared and burst forth in essays that will live forever.

TRAVEL

You have not seen the world until you see it through Mark Twain's wise and humorous eyes. His books of wanderings will be revelations to you now who read them only in your youth.

WHY THE PRICE MUST BE RAISED

To Mark Twain two things were precious above all others—one was a love for his wife, the other was a love of the people. At every side he was surrounded by tributes of honor, by joyous affection. In every corner of the world he was known and loved. And because of this it was his desire that his books be so made and sold at such a low price that every family could own a set. So this set of Mark Twain has been sold at a much lower price than would ordinarily be the case for a set of books of this character. But Mark Twain could not foresee that the price of ink, paper, binding—that everything that goes into the making of a set of books—was to go to heights undreamed of even two years ago. It is impossible to continue the sale of this set of books at that low price. For a few weeks longer—until the present edition is taken up—this low price will be in force, but on the next edition—the price must be higher.

If you send the coupon at once you can have your set at the low price—but send the coupon at once.

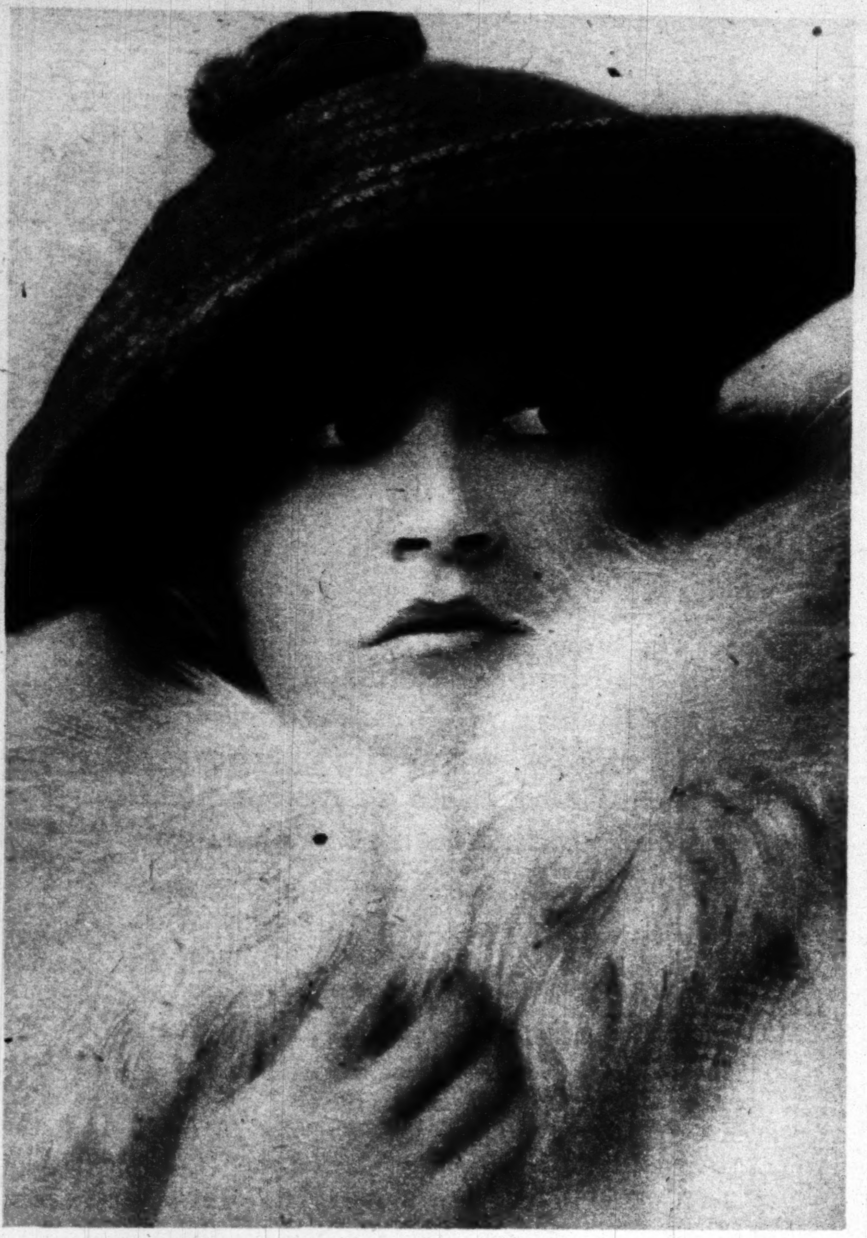
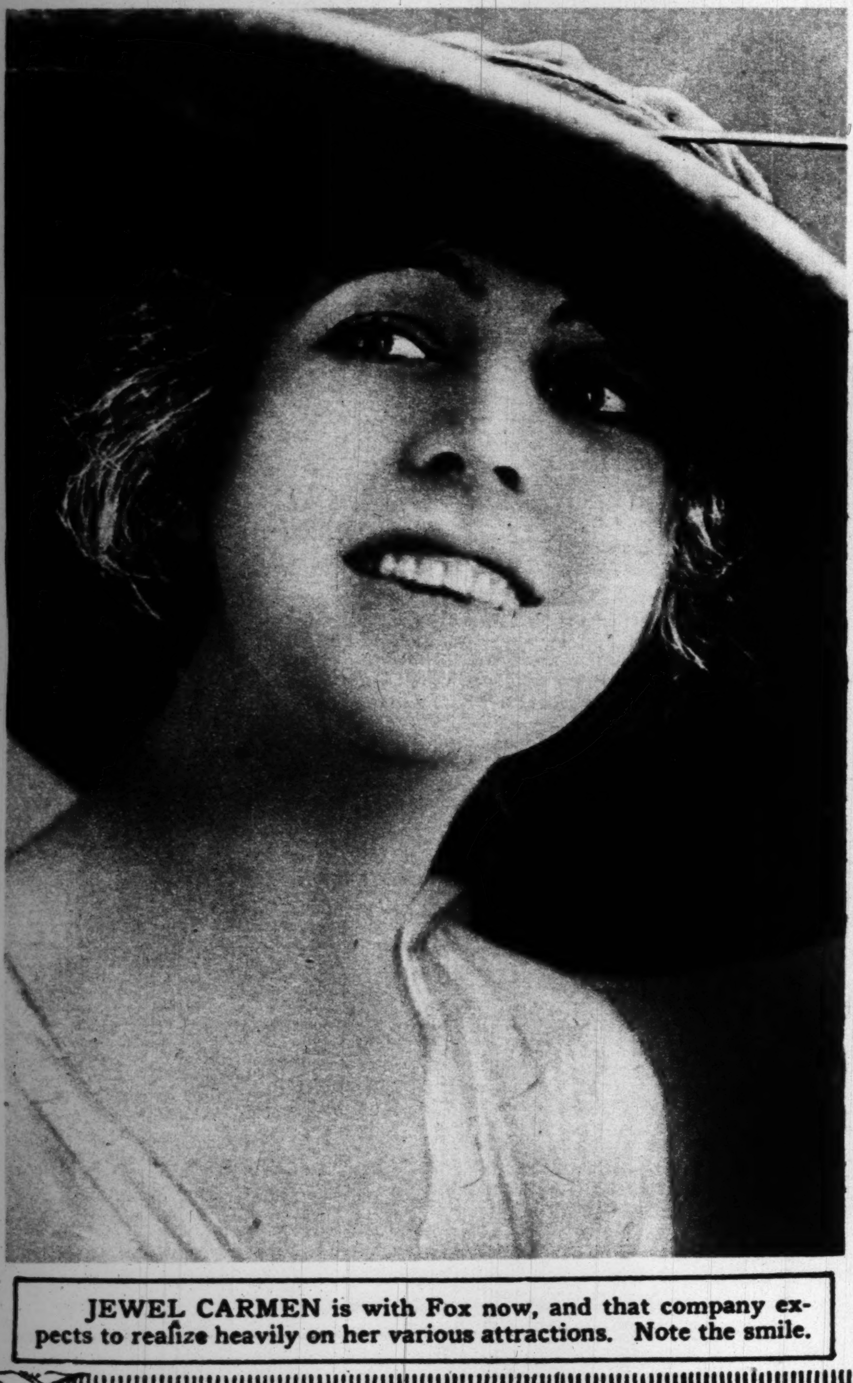
DAVID POWELL has at last decided to let his photograph be taken. A most modest gentleman, it was only after months of persuasion that he finally went and "sat." He is with the Empire All Star corporation, which purports to picture the Charles Frohman successes.



MAE MURRAY, now with Bluebird, conceived the brilliant idea—through her p. a. we suspect—of getting up a "Letter of Cheer" to Maj. Gen. Pershing and the "Sammies" across the water. Prominent people are being asked to sign the document.



JEWEL CARMEN is with Fox now, and that company expects to realize heavily on her various attractions. Note the smile.

JORDAN
ENCLOSED CARS

Ultra-Modern Representatives of the Class of Motor Cars Demanded by Those Who Possess That Rare Good Taste so Noticeable in Their Individualized Possessions.

Exclusive custom design bodies of aluminum, strikingly beautified by individually-selected colorings and unusual appointments.

JORDAN Enclosed Cars reflect an atmosphere of exclusiveness never before known in motordom. The Jordan chassis has within itself all the virility, strength and dominant power so essential to a car of the finest type. It presents a remarkable mechanical efficiency which lends an assurance of continuous success in performance and service.

Granting its mechanical perfection and dignity of design there is in each of the four enclosed cars offered—the Jordan Sport Limousine, the Jordan Brougham, the Jordan Sedan, the Jordan Town Car—the reflection of studious concern about detail, appointment, personality.

For instance:

Jordan Enclosed Cars Offer a Wide Range of Colors

The importance of this idea is even more apparent when you consider that there are varied interior appointments to match the exterior colors. Individuality is the advance keynote of foremost motor cars, and so that you may exercise the right of individual taste the bodies are finished in striking shades.

Appointments Unexcelled

All that you may anticipate in a car of refinement is found in the Jordan—toilet cases for men and women, motor dictograph, dome lights, combination hat rack and parcel carrier, silk roller curtains, Waltham clock, two coat hooks, hassocks, Yale door locks, Marshall cushion springs, individual reading lamps and other important appointments.

Specifications: The distinctive Jordan features include Continental Motor, cast en bloc; Bosch ignition; Boyce Motometer; Bijur starting and lighting system; Stromberg carburetor; Vanadium steel springs; Timken axles and bearings; Fedders raditor; Gemmer steering gear; Willard storage batteries; wheel base of 127 inches and the most complete complementary equipment.

SAVE the SEVENTH BABY!

ONE out of every seven babies born in this country dies before it is a year old.

The Seventh Baby dies whether it be the child of rich or poor. It is not necessarily the slum baby, but the cuddlesome healthy babies aired in the park by white capped nurses; lively dancing babies tumbling on the small town lawn; country babies under the widest and freshest of country skies. One out of every seven is doomed to die this year.

Fifty per cent of these deaths are from preventable causes. More than one hundred thousand babies are wantonly sacrificed each year.

Face these appalling facts: One hundred and forty babies out of every thousand born in America do not live to see their first birthday. Seventy of these babies would be alive it it were not for—what?

Who or what killed them? If their deaths were preventable, who was criminally negligent? What could be done about it?

The more The Delineator asked itself these questions and realized what this awful human waste means to America, the greater grew its conviction that it was somebody's business to do something. We have made it our business. The Delineator has arrayed itself to fight ignorance in relation to babyhood all over the United States, and the battle is on for the life of the Seventh Baby. Never has the need of victory been so great. Peace is hard on little babies. War is many times harder.

Forty per cent of our American babies are born under the care of midwives—most of them filthy in their habits and ignorant and superstitious in their practices. Through ignorant midwifery 15,000 of our mothers die each year from avoidable accidents of childbirth. Who is she—this midwife? What does she do to the Seventh Baby? How many births does she attend in your community? The Delineator knows these things and is going to publish them.

We know that pneumonia and other preventable diseases kill thousands of babies every year. We know that heat and flies and dirt and ignorance are responsible for much of the ghastly wreckage of babyhood.

The Delineator is determining what communities in this country give babies a fair chance. If your community does not, we are going to fight with your help to make it wholesome.

No one realizes better than The Delineator that this Seventh Baby Campaign, in its magnitude as to territory covered, as to lives touched, as to vital influences exerted, will be greater than any like work ever attempted in relation to babyhood. It will be greater even than The Delineator's campaign of a few years ago which caused the adoption of thousands of orphans into loving but childless homes.

In direct charge of the Seventh Baby Campaign is Dr. Charles E. Terry, the sanitarian who became a national figure by his work as health officer in cleaning up Jacksonville, Florida. Back of Dr. Terry stands an advisory committee composed of Dr. Rupert Blue, Surgeon-General of the United States Public Health Service; Mr. Franz Schneider, Jr., Sanitarian of the Russell Sage Foundation; Professor Selskar M. Gunn, Secretary of the American Public Health Association; Miss Ella Phillips Crandall, Executive Secretary of the National Organization for Public Health Nursing.

We are receiving active co-operation from the foremost experts in the country and from local and national health organizations. Tens of thousands of dollaras will be spent in working with men and women throughout the nation to make their communities safe for the babies.

How great our success in fighting for the life of the Seventh Baby depends on you individually—you and your community. We want your interest—your active interest and co-operation. We want you to follow this campaign, to which pages are devoted in each issue of The Delineator. We want you to become a part of this movement. You owe it to your children, your community and your country.

Never before has America needed that Seventh Baby so much as now. Have we your support?

Join Our "Christmas Victrola Club"

You choose your Victrola now and you make a payment on it every week for the next ten weeks. Your payment is one one-hundredth of the price of your Victrola. In other words, if you buy a $50 Victrola, you pay 50c a week for ten weeks. On a $100 Victrola, you pay $1 a week. At Christmas time the Victrola is sent to your home and a good selection of records is sent with it without any extra payment. (If you want your Victrola before Christmas you can have it upon the regular easy terms).

This plan has two advantages. First, you are sure of getting the Victrola you want this year, when Victrolas are especially short. Second, you won't have any deposit to make at Christmas time when you need your money so much to pay for other things.

Only 100 in This Club

We will only allow one hundred members to join this first club, as we must be sure of our Victrolas before we guarantee to deliver them. There are six hundred thousand of you reading this paper today. So if you want to be one of the 100 members you had better sign this application and send it quickly.

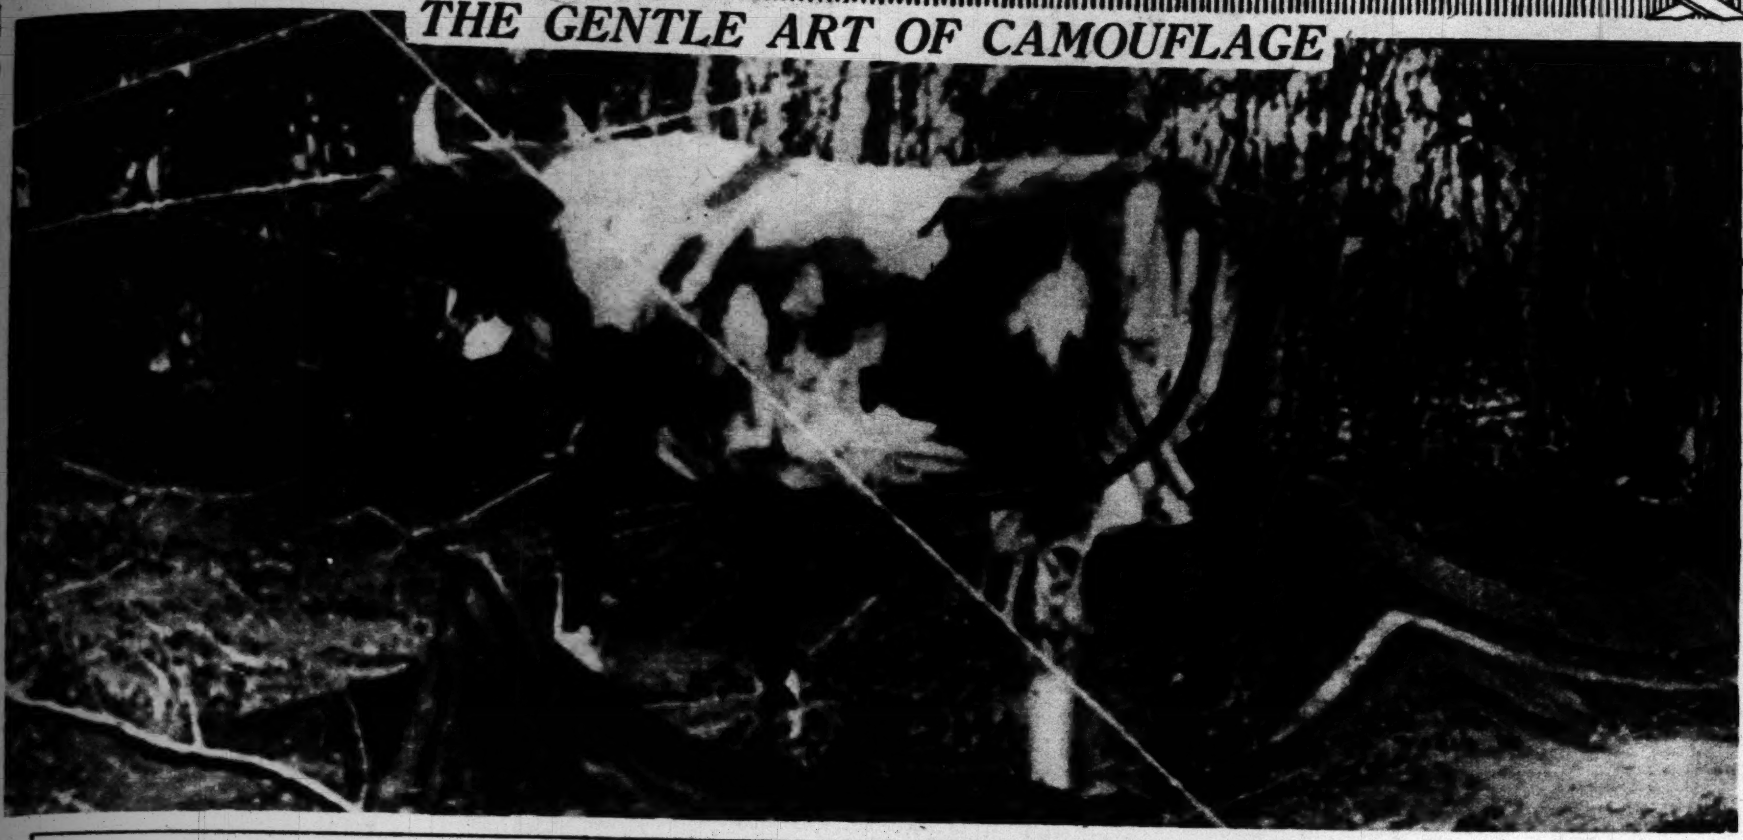
THE GENTLE ART OF CAMOUFLAGE



A FABRICATED COW—The camouflage artist has, in this instance, done his work so well that even this close-up picture at a first glance is deceptive. The "cow," made of wood and painted cloth, appears to be grazing peacefully when, in reality, it conceals from view a roofed battery of heavy artillery.

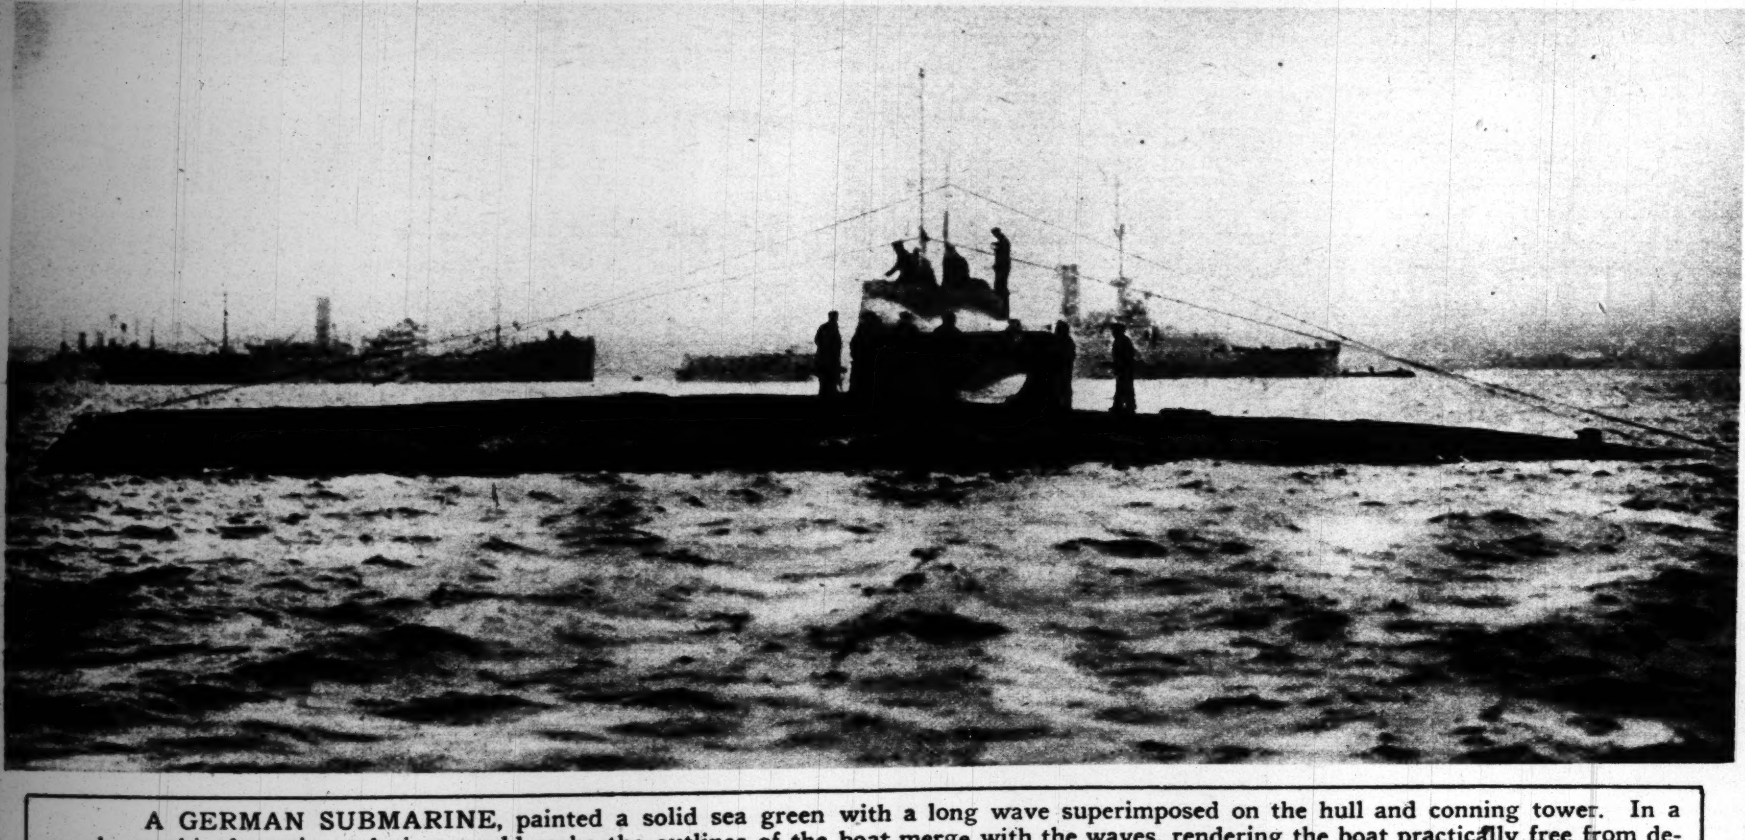
FRENCH HEAVY MOBILE ARTILLERY AND A REAPER, working side by side. The gun and railway truck on which it is mounted, as well as the reaper and the freight cars, are painted to blend with the natural surroundings.

[Photograph copyright by Underwood & Underwood.]



A GERMAN SUBMARINE, painted a solid sea green with a long wave superimposed on the hull and conning tower. In a rough sea this deceptive coloring would make the outlines of the boat merge with the waves, rendering the boat practically free from detection at a distance.

Why do we prefer one food to another?

Why did the Roman Emperors send slaves for miles and miles to find a special kind of luscious melon or wild grape or "Cythnian Cheese?"

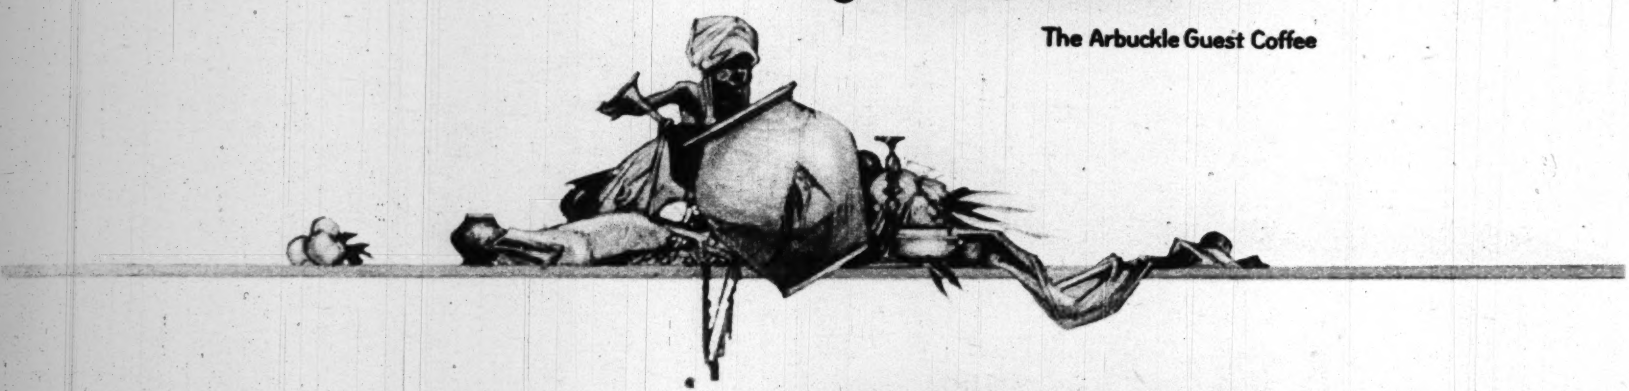
Why do we search the menu card for our favorite Pompano or Sweetbread or Duckling?

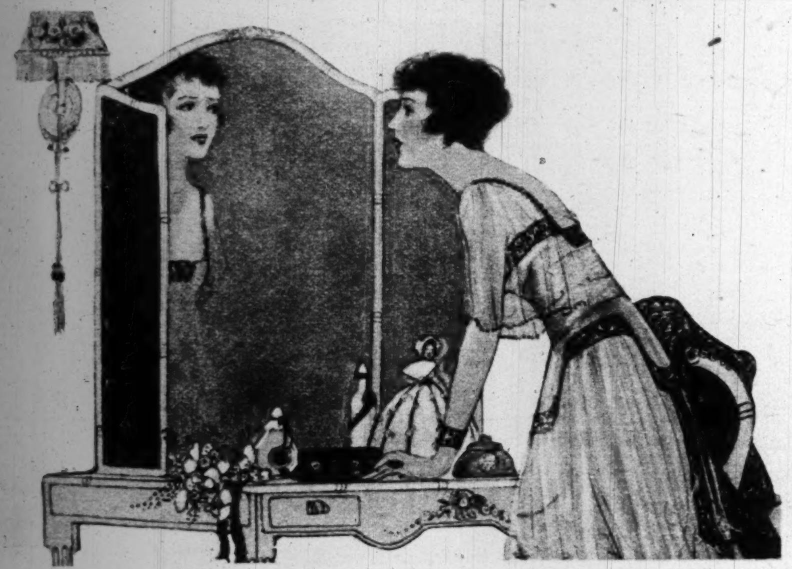
It is the flavor of foods that makes them desirable. It is the flavor that makes them palatable. Without flavor all food would become merely medicine.

It is the flavor of Yuban that has distinguished it from all other coffees. Without this distinctive flavor Yuban would be merely another coffee. You will enjoy its flavor as you never enjoyed coffee before. Try it today.

YUBAN

The Arbuckle Guest Coffee





So tanned, so colorless—what shall I do?

However badly you have treated your skin this summer, you can restore its loveliness and give it the charm you have always longed for.

Your skin, just like the rest of your body, changes every day. As the old skin dies, new forms.

Your complexion depends on how you take care of this new skin. By the proper external treatment you can make it just what you would love to have it.

Summer brings to many women a browned complexion, which, though attractive in summer, becomes so mortifying and annoying when the time comes for cool weather and evening gowns. This summer coat of tan lasts well into the colder months and often threatens to become permanent.

If this is your worry, try this simple treatment

Cleanse the skin thoroughly by washing with Woodbury's Facial Soap and lukewarm water. Now work up a heavy lather of Woodbury's in your hands. Apply it to your face and rub it into the pores thoroughly with an upward and outward motion of the finger tips.

Rinse very thoroughly—first in tepid water, then in cold. If possible, rub the face briskly for a few moments with a piece of ice. Always be sure to rinse the skin carefully and dry it thoroughly.

This treatment is just what your skin needs to whiten it and to bring to it the delicate color of a pink and white complexion. In a week or ten days your skin should show a marked improvement. Get a cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap today. A 25c cake is sufficient for a month or six weeks.

Write today for a week's-size cake

For 4c we will send you a sample cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap large enough to last for a week of any Woodbury treatment, together with the booklet, "A skin you love to touch," which gives a list of skin troubles and the treatment suited to each. Send today to The Andrew Jergens Co., 5017 Spring Grove Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio.

From City Man to Soldier

Why it takes six months or more of hard training

Most city men are not in fighting trim. Their muscles are flabby; they are short-winded; they have flat-feet; they soon tire; in short, they lack physical energy.

That is why it takes six months to a year of hard training to make them into soldiers able to do the work and withstand the hardships at the front.

How city men waste energy

The reason city men haven't physical energy is this: They waste it.

They waste it in many ways—and small wastes added together make a tremendous total. One flagrant example of energy-waste is seen in the use of hard leather heels.

As everyone now knows, leather heels are not suited to hard pavements. They are out of date. They were made for dirt roads and fields.

But some city men still wear leather heels. As a result, they jar energy from their systems some 8,000 times a day. For the average city man takes 8,000 daily steps—and every step taken with leather heels on hard pavements jolts your system.

The heels best suited to hard pavements are O'Sullivan's Heels. They absorb all shocks and save your energy.

City men who wear O'Sullivan's Heels are in better physical shape than those who still stick to the old-fashioned leather heels. They don't pound away their energy on the pavements.

It is the duty of every man—especially in these times—to conserve his energy in every possible way. Here is an easy, practical way for you to save energy. Put O'Sullivan's Heels on your shoes.

They are guaranteed to outlast any other heels. They will last three times as long as leather heels and will give uniformly satisfactory service to the very last. Because of our special process, O'Sullivan's Heels combine the greatest durability with the greatest resiliency. They are made of perfect heel material.

Buy your new shoes O'Sullivanized. Good dealers sell the latest style shoes with these heels already attached.

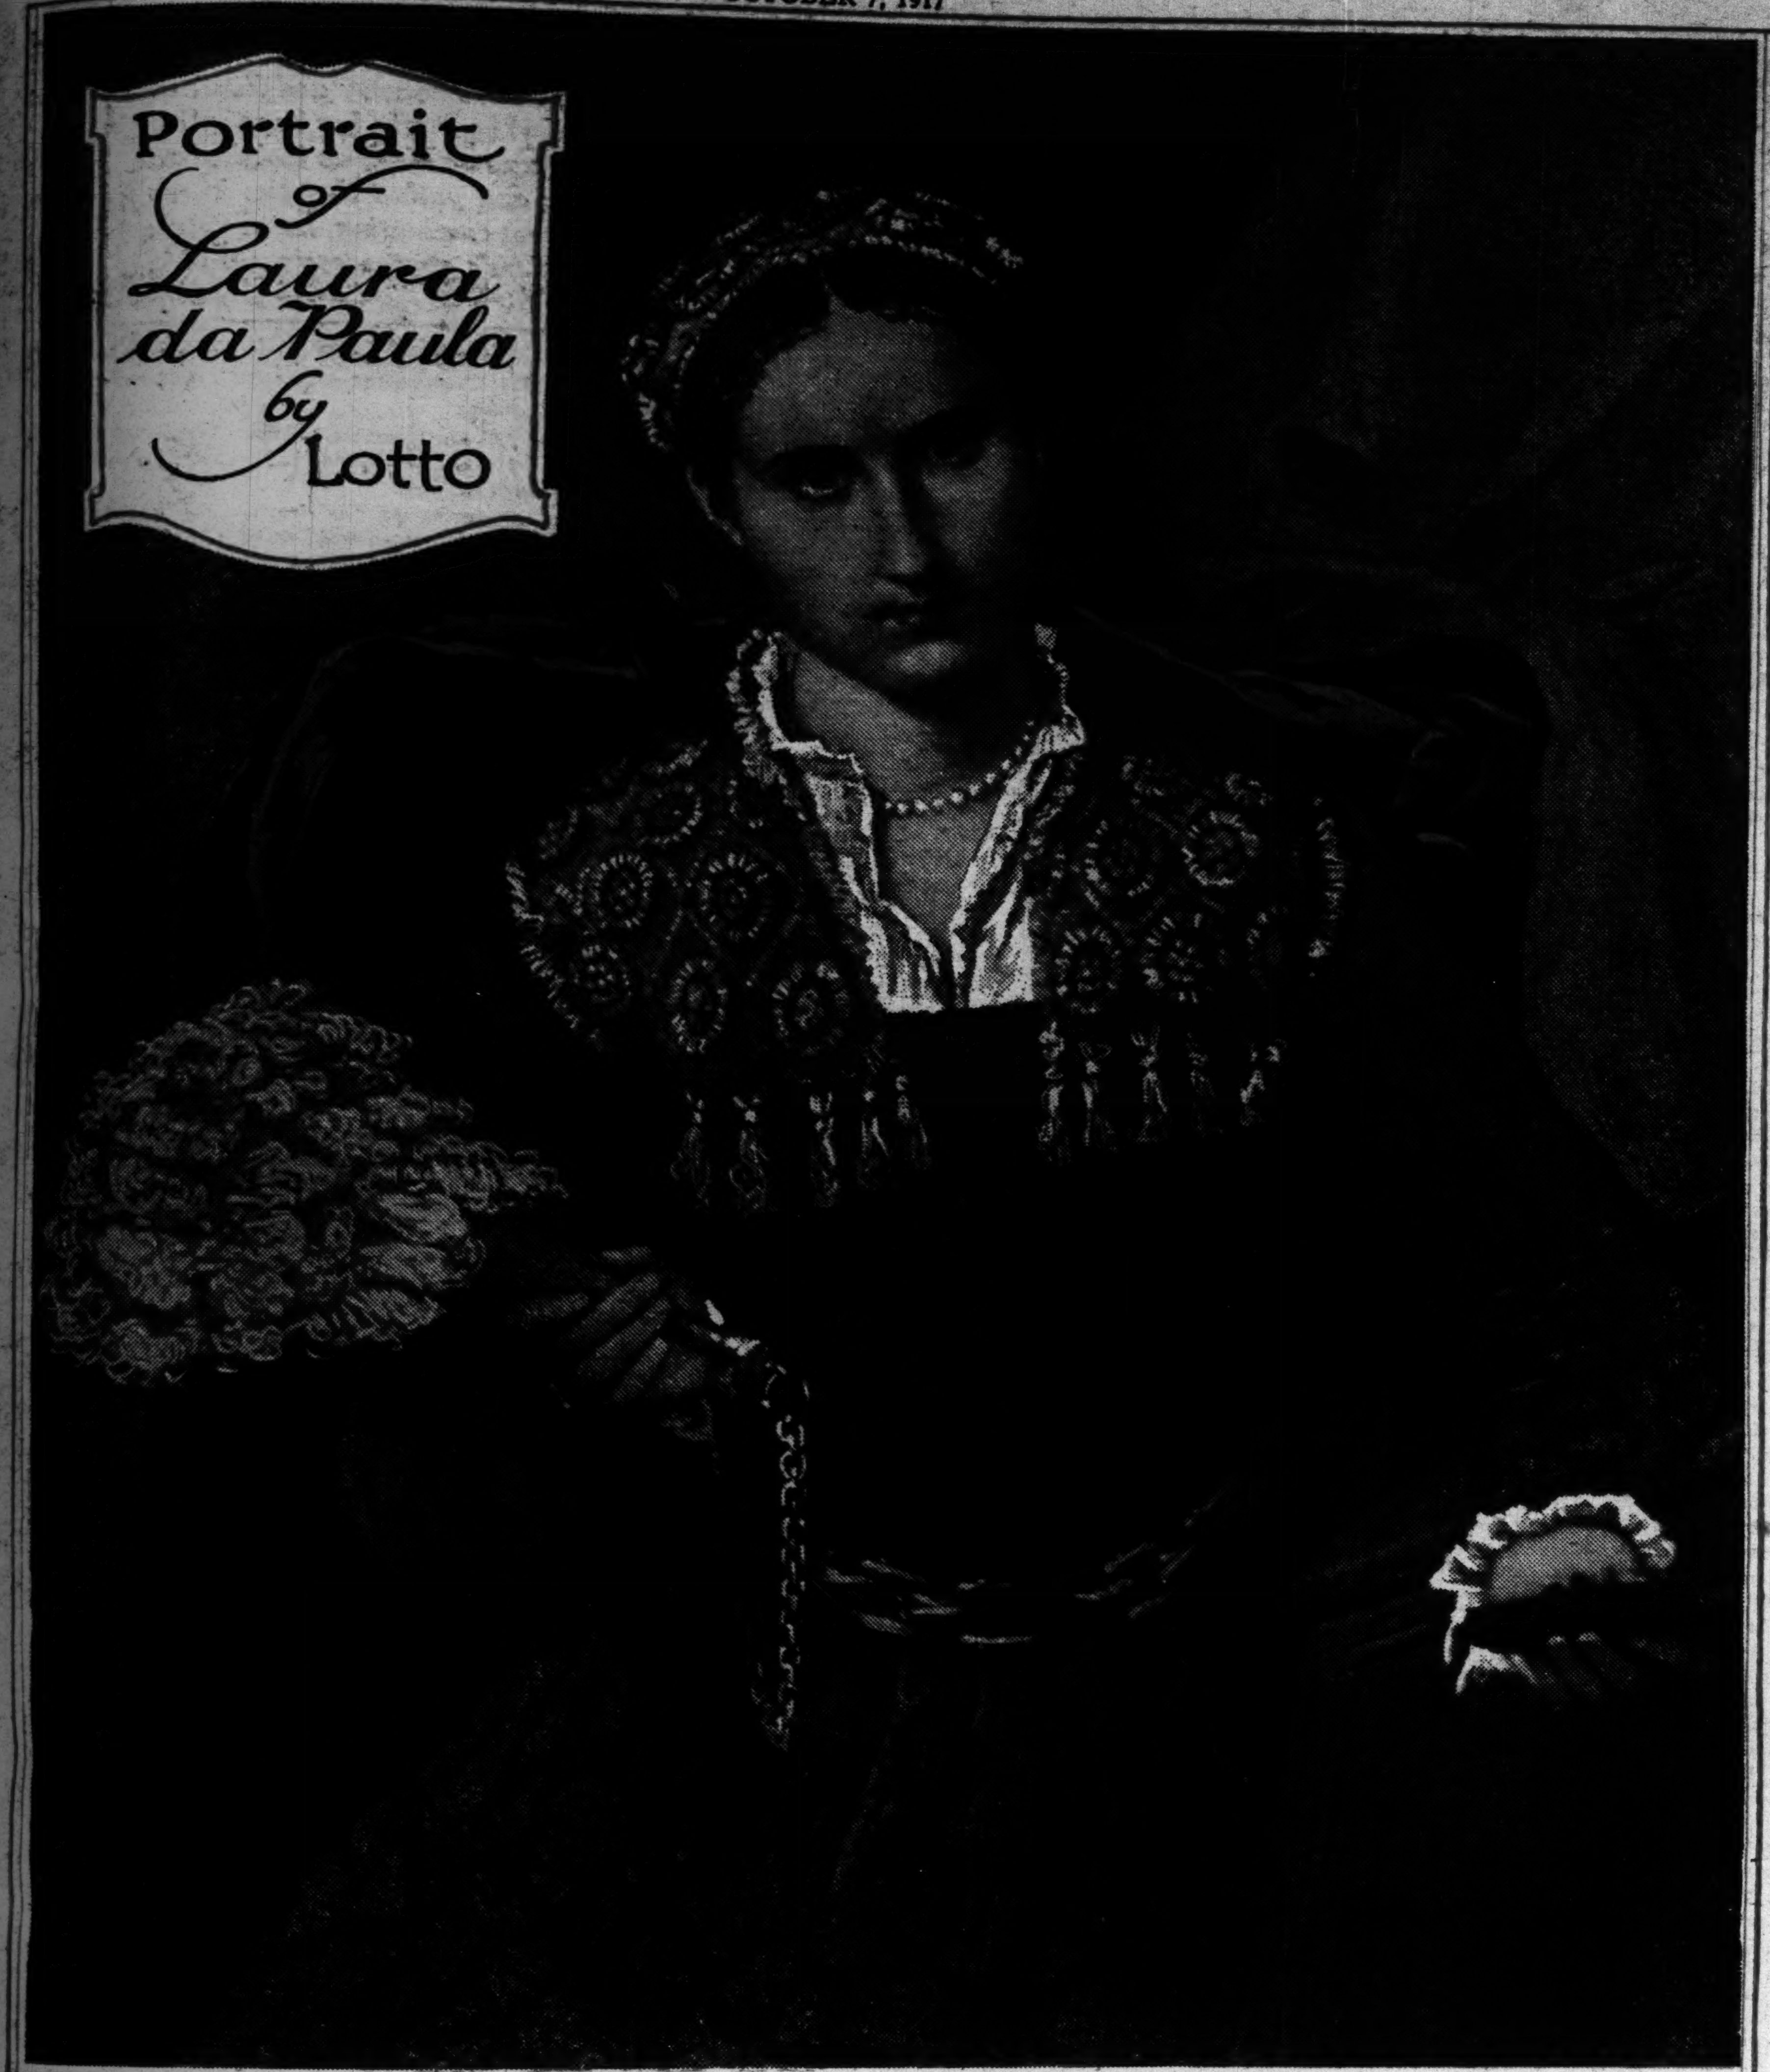
Portrait of Laura da Paula by Lotto



BY LOUISE JAMES BARGELT.

Laura da Paula, Lorenzo Lotto. (Venetian.) (1480-1555) Milan Gallery

WRITERS and artists alike have given us lurid pictures of the Italy of the Sixteenth century. But Lotto, sick of heart perhaps at much that was about him, turned his face resolutely to the saner, truer things. The burden of the cry his paintings still echo is that all Italy was not corrupt, all men and women not tainted dark by its vices. And to Lotto's charity indeed we are able to see far more clearly into an Italy which without him would seem an actual pandemonium of sins and wickednesses.

A kindly, sensitive, ever excitable artist, Lotto saw actions and men in an imaginative light. His portraits have all of the fascination of a personal confession, and if he knew people well he loved them no less. A remarkable psychologist, too, for his time and age, he could define ideals and emotions with great clarity. His soul was not merely a troubled highway for sensations and feelings. He understood them and could analyze them keenly.

As for his religious pictures—his altar pieces in Bergamo at San Bartalomeo, at Santa Spirito, and at San Bernardino—they are lyrical, poetical canvases, radiating a beautiful joyousness and much of the Renaissance intoxication. On entering a cathedral where his works are, you can distinguish him from other Venetians by his unusual tints and colors. His paintings call you, as if by the sound of "clarion march music," luring you to them with their ringing sapphire blues, their greens of gemlike depths, their marvelous lacquer scarlets, and their tense dramatic reds.

All that is known of his life shows an unworldly nature, never suing for the favor of the mighty. Sometimes he lodges with friends, sometimes with monks, but in all his lonely life as a wanderer he laid up no store for the years of his maturity. Shortly before he died, "being tired of wandering and wishing to end his days in holy peace," he made himself and all his belongings to the holy house of Loreto. While there he did some work for the Palazzo Apostolico and some pictures for the chapel in the basilica of the town.

In this picture the lady of the painting looks out from her dark frame as if mutely asking sympathy and understanding from all who see her. In all of his portrait work he brings out the innate refinement and sweetness of the character, dwelling on those qualities above everything else, and in this way bringing his audiences close to the people he would have them know. Clad in a gown of dark silk with a gold chain about the waist, Laura da Paula wears a richly embroidered headdress and around her throat a necklace of pearls. The portrait is done in simple gradations of light and shade and with subtle atmospheric effect.

Another famous painting will be reproduced next Sunday.

Bungalow Isle

Jack Lait, the American Balzac of the Big City, has joined the staff of The Chicago Tribune. His has been the most remarkable rise in the literary world in the last decade. Beginning with his play, "Help Wanted," which had long runs in all the metropolises of the country and is still on the road, he next set the critical world of this country and England to talking over his collection of short stories, "Beef, Iron, and Wine." He has been called the one and only successor to O. Henry, the Human X-Ray, because of his deep insight into metropolitan life. His stories will depict the humor, romance, and pathos that lies in the nooks and corners of our big cities and they will be written in that fascinating, human style which characterizes all of the author's work. Look for Jack Lait's stories every week in The Chicago Sunday Tribune.

"CHUBBINS," called Harry Griswold, as he looked up from his mail at the breakfast table in his rooms at the club, addressing his man, "want an island?"

"An island, sir? I—why, I—an island, sir?"

"A whole island, entirely surrounded by water full of weeds and weeds full of water, situated in the neck between two tepid inland lakes up near the Canadian border. It ought to be called 'Adam's Apple,' I suppose, but it isn't. It's called Bungalow isle."

"Thank you, sir," said Chubbins. "I know the island."

"Then you accept?"

"You must be jesting, Mr. Harry. The island is very valuable. It is three-quarters of a mile long and almost half as wide. I visited it several times while in the service of your esteemed late father when he spent week ends there with your lamented late uncle, Mr. Wilbur Griswold."

"You're right," said the surviving Griswold. "Uncle Will willed me the thing. Now, what am I to do with an island? I wouldn't sell it—uncle put such tender store by it; spent his honeymoon there and rusticated aboard the patch every summer with auntie, dear old lady, as long as she lived; of late years he marooned himself there through all sorts of seasons, iced in all winter, cut off from the mainland entirely for weeks during stretches when the ice wasn't hard enough for traverse and the water wasn't soft enough for navigation. He urged me to come up there to loaf, but I was afraid I might take a cocktail too many and step off the estate—never went in much for islands or anything else where the all around outlook was nothing but water, you know. Now the lawyer chap writes me here that I'm the king of Bungalow isle, possessor in fee simple of its ground, its foliage, its vegetation, its animals, its buildings, its boat, its miscellaneous props, and three persons: a fellow named Calkins, uncle's superintendent; an old woman, the housekeeper, and—this is amusing—her orphaned granddaughter, aged 17. They are all my wards, so to speak. At least, they await my pleasure for their disposal."

"I know them, sir, the three. And, if I may be so bold, sir, never fancied this Calkins—a sour sort, sir—a man of temper and rude words. And the way he shouted at Mrs. Allen, the old housekeeper, and at the young one, Miss Jean, it was atrocious, sir—scandalous, if I may be so bold as to say it, sir."

"Chubbins, you astonish me! Harsh language to the ladies, on my island? I shan't have it," and Griswold stuffed his napkin in his mouth to muffle the laugh at his servant's head-shaking solemnity. "Tell you what. Here it is, spring. An island ought to be palatable in spring if ever. So you pack up a few traps, telephone for tickets to the nearest port, and we'll look in on Bungalow isle."

Next morning two travelers alighted at Northmore. One carried a bag or two, the other a stick and a cigaret.

Griswold wasn't an unpleasant sight in the sunlight. Athletic, aristocratic, a little beyond 30, attired in the easy nonchalance of a man who dresses for comfort yet comes forth a lesson in fashion, he seemed enormously at ease in any pose. And so he was.

Not blasé was Griswold, only annoyed. He had always been rich. And, because he was rich, he had been enabled to try most everything; and because he was curious, he had tried most everything. And most of it had bored him. Travel had worn out its thrills. Gambling had never been his passion, and its fruits lacked diversion. Plays mildly amused him and drew him only because they were current events not to be ignored. He read a bit, but he couldn't get into the worm eaten old authors and the contemporary ones offered bait with their new, shiny hooks exposed. He hunted with transitory zest, he fished with short lived enthusiasm, he golfed an hour at a time, he cantered occasionally through the public park, he motored well but not gayly, he detested billiards; he was thinking of trying aviation, but hadn't gotten around to it; he danced devilishly well, but deucedly seldom; classical music gave him a drowsy feeling, and fashionable resorts gave him insomnia.

Griswold lived at his favorite club in the city, but he was not what the young reporter likes to call a "clubman." He lived there because one must reside somewhere and there was no more logical place. The old Griswold home on the drive had been closed for two years, since the death of his mother, a woman of preponderant personality and militant charms, socially predominant. His father had been a merchant, and had left his business and his affairs so thoroughly and efficiently trusteed that they ran on and paid fat profits without a cry for help.

Perhaps the big factor in the listless, uninspired life of Harry Griswold—a negative one—was his candid disinterest in women. Never a mysogynist, not by any chance disappointed in love, he had not swelled to the vibrations of a sigh such as men pant under the big emotion. He had known girls, he had kissed them, he had experimented with flirtation and with courtship, but his heart had never enlisted in the pastime. Chorus women he abjured, and demi-mondes had never excited him. To the girls of his set he was scrupulously courteous, never gallant. He had not met a female who inspired in him the well known impulse of possession. He had no more written a love letter than he had forged a check. Having never loved a woman nor hated one, he found it easy to be honorable toward them all.

He loved his sister; but his sister was in France. He sent bonbons to some bachelor girls he knew; but he sent bonbons to the telephone operator at the club, who never rang his bell before 9, also. He visited with his married friends and neither pitied nor envied them—a pronounced symptom of an acheless heart. He understood violent love as he saw it on the stage, as he read it, as he discerned it now and then in action. But its messenger had never found his ear and he had never throbbed to an impulse that bade him seek it. Some men defy love; Griswold didn't. Some men invite love; Griswold couldn't. Some men seize an almost as good substitute for love; Griswold wouldn't.

"Didn't you telegraph for a conveyance—a Ford, or something?" asked Griswold.

"This is only a flag station, sir," said Chubbins. "I shouldn't have known whom to address the dispatch to. But if you will be good enough to wait I'll fetch some one."

And he was off down the road, toward a farmer's hut. Ten minutes later he returned with a yokel driving a light wagon, and Griswold shared the seat as his valet took to the box with the baggage.

"I guess you'll find a boat at the landin'," volunteered the guide. "Calkins gen'rally leaves one about, though he's a queer one, an' I've heern it said he don't want no comp'ny much on the island."

There was no boat at the little dock. The native scurried down a mile or so and brought back a canoe and some paddles, borrowed from a neighbor down the bend. He wanted a guarantee of its safe return until Griswold handed him a card. At the name the simpleton, impressed and satisfied, took off his hat, accepted his goodly fee with mumbled thanks, and drove off. Griswold motioned Chubbins into the airy boat, took up a paddle, and struck out for the island.

A pretty sight was Bungalow isle, in the strait of the lakes, a mile beyond. Rising from the gray water, it was bare over a belt of several feet, above which it was thickly overgrown with young trees, alive with the baby spring breezes. Chubbins pointed the way to the protruding pier.

Griswold landed the canoe and helped the old boy up with the impediments. They struck up the trail toward the bungalow, hidden on the far side of the island. Griswold was silent, but his spirits were bright. The paddling had given him a breakfast appetite. The pine trees smelled good. The air was gently moderate. There wasn't a sound anywhere above the footfalls of the island's master and his servant as they strode on.

Suddenly they heard a cry.

It sounded like a woman's voice—a girl's, likely. There was terror in it. It stopped abruptly, as though choked off or cut short.

Griswold dropped the bag that he was democratically carrying, and dived in between the trees, toward where the voice had seemed to spring. He parted the bushes. There was a girl struggling in the arms of a man. Her head was against the man's chest and he was holding her face there to still her screams. She was struggling, but the man was strong.

In a step Griswold came upon them. The fellow's back was turned and he was preoccupied with his attempt to overpower the girl. Griswold swung from the hip, a snappy and scientific hook to the jaw. The burly released his grip, staggered a step or two, shook himself, recovered, and blindly rushed at the young assailant. Griswold sidestepped and clipped his man, sending him down in a heap.

The girl, her hands over her face, her disarranged hair in confusion over her shoulders, had backed against a friendly tree and stood there in amazement, looking on, bewildered, all a-tremor.

"What's the meaning of this?" he demanded.

"Who the devil are you?" growled he. "I'll show you where you'll finish, trespassing on private property and attacking decent citizens."

"This is my property," said Griswold. "Who are you?"

"That's Calkins, sir—the superintendent," offered the valet.

Calkins stumbled to his feet in an ungainly hurry. An expression of embarrassed surprise and sycophantic eagerness possessed his ugly features.

"Can this be Mr. Griswold?" he asked, as soothingly as he could.

"It can," said the new owner. "What were you doing to—with that girl?"

Calkins turned a threatening, warning, and backmailing look at the now doubly fearsome child.

"I—we—that is, sir, Jean here and me, we were just fooling. Weren't we, Jean?"

"That's a lie," said Griswold. "Come here, child. What is the truth in this matter."

He saw her glance frightenedly at Calkins, then drop her eyes as they met his own.

"Don't be afraid—of him or of me."

"He—O, sir, I can't, I can't."

"It is not my purpose to press you nor to worry you. But in justice—well, to Calkins, if no one else—I'm afraid I shall have to insist."

"He—he kissed me," stammered the girl.

"'Tain't so," blurted Calkins, starting toward the girl.

Griswold, scarcely leaving his tracks, slapped the men with his bare hand. Calkins stopped and looked dazed, beaten, and too thoroughly beset to even launch at the girl the scowl of vengeful venom that he could not withhold.

"You may go to the house," said Griswold to Jean, who ran off, weeping and quivering.

"Calkins," said Griswold, "I ought to thrash you. I have half a notion to bang your head against that tree. You will remain here until my attorney arrives—I shall telegraph him—and we will compare inventories. Then you may go."

"If you'll let me explain," began Calkins. "I can——"

"You'd better not try. And if you so much as look at that little girl as long as you remain on this island I'll break your head."

Calkins started off, slowly, toward the bungalow.

"Come on, Chubbins," chirped Griswold. "This isn't half bad. I think I'm going to like the weird old island. I've had more fun here in five minutes than I do in town in a year."

"You may call it fun, sir," said the valet, "but, if I may say so, it was far from light entertainment to me, sir. I've known that girl since she was a baby. And a sweeter little one never lived—a wildflower, sir, reared here, away from the world, innocent and natural-like, sir, if it weren't for that Calkins."

"Never fear," Griswold assured him. "She need not put up with any more of his—his fooling. I'll guard her. Damn it all, Chubbins—you know, I never thought of it while there was work to do, but she's a pretty thing."

"Beautiful I should call her, sir."

"Children are pretty, not beautiful."

"A girl of 17 is no child, sir, if I may be so bold."

"I'm going to see whether she's a child or—or—a girl—if I may be so bold," said Griswold, and the pace that he set for the island bungalow left Chubbins far behind.

Griswold had never eaten such flapjacks as Jean's grandmother set before him—there weren't any such anywhere else, probably.

The meal over, he stepped out and looked about.

"She's beyond, in the barnyard, feeding the chickens," volunteered Chubbins.

"Who the devil told you I was looking for any one?" barked Griswold. "Which way is the barnyard? And you'd better come along—I wouldn't have her misunderstand, you know."

They found Jean surrounded by her poultry.

"Let's get into the shade, youngster," said Griswold. "I want to ask you some questions."

"A little sun won't hurt you," she suggested, rather naively than tartly.

The owner of all he could see—except the girl—smiled.

"You're right. If I'm going to run an island I suppose I had better become accustomed to its bright lights now."

" [illegible] with a little start, "are you going to remain here with us?"

"Yes. Both of us will remain here."

"Both you and Mr. Chubbins?"

"Of course—Chubbins will remain, too; wouldn't know what to do without the dear old nuisance. But that isn't what I meant. I intended to convey—if it meets with your approval—that both you and I will remain here."

by Jack Lait

"Thank you, sir. Grandmother was somewhat afraid—afraid the new proprietor mightn't want us—her—us——"

"Don't be alarmed. Grandmother shall remain, too. She will be flapjacker extraordinary to Chubbins and to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Griswold."

The girl's eyes flashed up.

"O," she breathed. "Then there is a Mrs. Griswold?"

"There will be."

He stepped nearer. He turned to Chubbins.

"Will you just—just move out of hearing for a moment? There, thank you."

Another step nearer to the puzzled child he moved. Then again he turned, and, making a megaphone of his hands, shouted:

"And turn your back!"

He came to her, where she stood, rigid.

"Jean," he whispered, "you will be Mrs. Griswold. I love you and I want you to marry me."

She started back and almost fell.

She turned and began to cry, little jerky sobs that she sought to muffle.

He followed. From behind he reached about and took both her hands. It was not a caress, only an attempt at comfort.

"Come with me," he said. "You may trust me. Chubbins makes me nervous. I have a great deal to ask you and to tell you and to promise you. Let's go out in that canoe—out on the water."

"I—I'm afraid grandmother wouldn't approve," she blubbered.

"Of course she wouldn't. But what do grandmothers know? Come—isn't it proper enough to go canoeing with one's fiancé?"

"But, sir——"

"Not 'sir.' You must call me 'Harry, Jean—'Harry' will do for the present. When you are ready you may find a pet nickname all of your own choosing. Shall we start?"

Bewildered, the girl permitted him to lead her. He dismissed the valet and drew her by the hand past the house, over the trail. Near the spot where he had rescued her from Calkins he stopped a moment.

"I'm going to build a monument right there," said he, pointing to the patch where the grass was torn by her struggling. "It will commemorate the place where I first saw you, where I first knew what it was to love."

She turned to him a wistful, almost pained smile.

"It is true," said he. "I have never loved another girl. I have never even fancied that I loved another girl. You will believe me when I say I never told another woman that I loved her. I am more palpably a child at this game than you are. You probably have dreamt of a fairy prince. I have not even dreamt love. I never even missed it. I just managed to live along without it. That was why I spoke so quickly—so brutally precipitate. I knew it the moment it came to me—it was so different."

Not a word had she spoken during the walk. They were out upon the lake before she ventured speech.

But when she spoke!

She was sitting far up in the nose of the light, long craft. She raised her eyes from its ribbed floor to the level of his eyes, which were intent upon her face. There was no flash of embarrassment in her look, nor did her lips tremble as she said:

"I love you."

Griswold brought in the paddle with a sweep and a clatter. He was across the canoe and at her feet in a spring, almost sinking the boat.

He seized her hands. He knelt.

"Jean, dear," he said, shaking and unready of speech, "I—I don't know what to say or what to do."

"I know just what to do," said she.

And she did it.

His head found itself upon her shoulder and Harry Griswold, to whom any matron in "society" would have been a mother-in-law if she had had to pawn her jewels for the engraved invitations, was being kissed and kissed and kissed by the little orphan of a waylaid island.

"Harry, dearest," she sighed when she had caught her breath, "I did dream of a fairy prince. And he looked just like you—O, so much like you that I knew you were he when I saw you. There is a picture of my fairy prince in the sitting room at home. Your uncle showed it to me many times. He told me of you. What you did was sudden, dear. But what I did wasn't. I had done it so many times with my eyes closed that I knew just how."

"Well! Did uncle really show you that foolish picture of me?"

"Foolish? Harry! How can you call it that? Why—I kissed it every night before I went to bed; I kissed it every morning as soon as I had dressed. I—Harry, dear, let me tell you a little secret. You came just in time. It—the picture—my fairy prince—was—was wearing out."

He smothered her in his arms.

Grandmother learned the secret as the answer to her excited queries when Griswold and Jean landed back on the pier hours after the supercarefully prepared luncheon had been ready and had spoiled for want of the star luncher.

The good old woman looked wildly at Jean, then dizzily at Griswold, who had his arm about her, then she ran into the house, fluttering and flabbergasted.

"You see?" said Griswold. "She gives her consent."

"O, she did that long ago," chirped the girl.

He looked at her as though to settle in his mind whether he was being joshed or whether the girl had been mentally upset by the canister of her adventures. She answered the glance straightforwardly.

"Grandmother consented only after I cried and begged very hard. You see, she surprised me one morning meeting you clandestinely—the picture, of course. I was dreadfully embarrassed because I—I—that morning I wasn't dressed for breakfast yet. Grandmother demanded to know, and then I—well, I confessed everything."

"And did grandmother weaken then?"

"With her blessings. When I told her we were married——"

"You told her what?"

"Why, that we were married. We were, you know—we were married after a very sudden proposal. You asked me so beautifully—and I was so willing—that we were married that very same day—at twilight—by the old minister from over there around the bend."

The girl looked up to him, exalted with the fervor of happiness; then she abruptly blushed and dropped her head, for she saw that Griswold, in spite of his adoration, was smiling at the earnestness with which her childish hallucinations had possessed her.

He drew up her chin, and, looking down into her eyes without a ghost of that smile, he said tenderly:

"It shall be just that way, dear."

Chubbins was sent across to fetch the parson. At sundown Griswold and Jean were married in the sitting room of the bungalow.

Grandmother had her crying to do, so she obligingly left them alone; Chubbins was a perfect valet, who never before had been out of call, but who now couldn't be found. Calkins was sulking in his own quarters, packing for departure.

Griswold sat in the big easy chair and drew his little bride onto his knee.

"Well, Mrs. Griswold, is this as you dreamed it?"

"Yes, dear. It couldn't be otherwise; I knew it couldn't."

"I want always to make your life the life that you dreamed for yourself when you had nothing to curb your longings and desires except the boundaries of your own hope and imagination. Let me live that prince of your pretty vision. Teach me to be the lover born of your fairy fancies. Tell me all that he did, and all that he was, and all that he was to do."

"O, there isn't so much to tell. He rescued me from a terrible dragon—like you did this morning—and then he told me that he loved me, and I told him that I loved him, and I kissed him, and he kissed me, and then we were married, and we sat here in this big chair, and he asked me what I wanted, and I said I always wanted to live on Bungalow isle, except that first I wanted to take a long, long honeymoon trip everywhere—in a lot of foreign lands—and have beautiful dresses, and see lots of wonderful, wonderful things, and then come back here, and live happily ever after, and have seven children, four boys and——"

"Dinner, sir, if I may be so bold," called Chubbins, the perfect valet.

At Nine O'Clock in the Morning

A Timberjack with a Doubting Sweetheart and a Most Unprincipled Rival.

HAD you gone to the logging camps along Little Pigeon river and asked for Robert Guthrie, at least half of the timber jacks there would have shaken their heads and declared that they had never heard of him. Which would have been correct, so far as they knew. Even the logging camp superintendents were accustomed to calling Robert Guthrie "Battery B." They even wrote "Battery B" on Guthrie's monthly pay envelopes.

He had begun life as a mountaineer. But the wide world that lay beyond the dim ranges had beckoned to him insistently from his early youth, and at 18 he had left his native hills to spend two terms of enlistment in the coast artillery, in a certain Battery B. Then his native hills had called to him just as insistently as the wide world had called, and he had returned to his home country to find it dotted with logging outfits that paid more than the army paid and gave more liberties in the bargain.

His strong inclination to recite reminiscences of his years in the military service was responsible for his nickname. At the first he had resented it so much that he had fought over it; and that, of course, had sunk the nickname in like the brand in a steer's hide. But the pseudonym did not seem so inappropriate after six months. For Guthrie, seeing that he could not rid himself of it, had determined that he would live strictly up to it, and as a result he had made himself quite the finest and the fairest of all the timberjack fighters on the Little Pigeon.

Save for one Martin Curcy, a huge logger who had been an unmerciful and unscrupulous bully prior to Battery B's whipping him in the championship battle, everybody liked Battery B for the ways he had about him. Even the stern father of the Little Pigeon river country's belle, Old Buck Miller, who held that the average human being was a pretty rotten proposition and therefore associated with but few human beings, liked Battery B Guthrie.

Old Buck was barely able to read and write, but he was possessed of some real business acumen. He bought and sold timber lands now and then, raised live stock, and operated a mica mine. He knew the value of education, having himself missed it; so he educated his daughter. Her name was Faith, and she was the second daughter the Millers had had of that name. The first had died. The hill folk had told the Millers that it was ill luck to name a child for its dead sister, whereupon Old Buck had raised his viking's head proudly and told them that he knew far more than they knew concerning the goodness of God. And the second Faith had developed so beautifully that her father believed firmly that she was the Almighty's reward to him for his unwavering trust in the divine goodness.

Faith Miller was going home from her finishing school when Robert Guthrie was going home from the army, and the two met on the cars. She was old fashioned enough, patriotic enough, and feminine enough to admire him and his neat, red trimmed blue uniform; and he was man enough to fall in love with her promptly at sight of her.

And now, a year and a month from their first meeting, Battery B Guthrie was on his way to Old Buck Miller's big white house in the hills to receive the answer that Faith had promised him. He had dressed himself painstakingly for the occasion. Which is to say that he wore corduroys, laced boots, a blue shirt, a slim black tie, and a broad brimmed black hat, none of which had ever been worn before.

When he arrived at the gate he saw that she was waiting for him, expecting him. She sat on the vine shaded front porch, and there was no blossom in that blossom filled yard that was prettier than she. As he went up the old brick walk she rose, took a few paces forward, and smiled upon him in that way that women have of smiling upon the men they love.

He dropped to the steps, noting as he did so that Old Buck was dozing the lazy Sunday afternoon away in his chair just beyond the ledge of one of the sitting room windows. The girl, too, sat down on the steps. Battery B slyly took one of her hands in his.

"What's the verdict?" he asked eagerly.

But Faith Miller was looking intently toward his broad brimmed headgear, which he had tossed carelessly to the grass.

"That's a bullet hole in your hat isn't it, Battery?"

She like the nickname. It sounded very mannish to her.

"It sure is," smiled the big timberjack. "I'm fairly certain that Mart Curcy did it. I've been expecting he'd try something like this, and I went to the trouble of stealing out his gun and queering the sights on it. The shot came from the laurels, less than an hour ago. Faith, I want to start for home in a few minutes. And I'd sure like to have your answer, Faith, before I go."

"So it was Martin Curcy," frowned the girl. "He's a bad one, Battery. He was here this morning, asking to see me, and my dad ran him off. As to my answer to you—I don't know. I love you, Battery; of that there is no doubt—but——"

She broke off painedly. He looked hard toward her. She went on, in a voice that had a strange note in it:

"Battery B Guthrie, I feel that you will tell me the truth. Where were you on last Sunday afternoon?"

"Home," readily. "I didn't get to stay but a few minutes, because it's four miles there and the same distance back. They're in trouble over home. You heard about Jimmy Ensley, Faith—my sister Adeline's husband? He was killed by that new railroad that's being built through Guthrie's laurel, you know. It wasn't his carelessness that did it; the foreman had told Jimmy that all the blasts had gone off. I've been having to watch Adeline to keep her from accepting a pitiful handful of silver for her man's life—the railroad's lawyers are smart! I've been forcing her to hold out for five thousand. She's got to have it. Who was it that told you to put that question to me, Faith—Mart Curcy?"

Although she didn't answer, he was sure that he had guessed well. He continued rather pointedly: "Just where did Curcy say I spent last Sunday afternoon?"

"He didn't say. But he hinted, Battery."

"Wildcat's Glory?" muttered Gutherie.

That was the name the timberjacks had given the isolated cabin home of a lone and conscienceless old moonshiner who called himself Bildad Torrey. The worst men of all the logging camps for miles around went to Wildcat's Glory on Sundays and on sundry nights to drink clear new whisky and play cards for money, which, to mountaineer girls of Faith Miller's stamp, was black crime itself. Though a man or two had gone to this resort and never come back, the law had never learned of its existence. Mountain folk are quick to mind their own affairs; besides, the law is to them a foreign thing.

"Where were you, and what were you doing," she demanded before Guthrie could say anything else, "on last Friday at 9 o'clock in the morning?"

The big timberjack went pale with anger. "Curcy told you to ask me that, too," he said. "Did he give you a hint as to what he meant?"

Faith shook her head.

"I was blazing boundary lines," said Guthrie. He went on, a little hotly: "If Curcy keeps this sort of thing up, I'm going to have to tan his hide for him. I'm——"

The sudden creaking of the weatherbeaten gate interrupted. The two who sat on the steps turned their gaze down the worn brick walk and saw a youngish but sober faced blue clad man who was not of the hills.

"Is this Robert Guthrie?" asked the stranger, halting.

Battery B caught up his hat, put it on, and went to his feet. "Yes," he answered, "this is Robert Guthrie. What do you want with him?"

"My name is Erlanger," said the newcomer. "Will you permit me to ask you a few questions in private?"

"All right," evenly.

Battery B told his sweetheart good-by and went with Erlanger down the path that led, through laurel thickets for most of the way, to the logging camp that employed him. When they were out of both sight and hearing of the Miller home, Louis Erlanger put a not altogether unfriendly hand on his companion's nearest arm and asked in a low, smooth voice:

"Where were you on last Friday at 9 o'clock in the morning?"

Guthrie halted quickly and faced his questioner. Erlanger watched the timberjack's countenance keenly.

"Running boundaries," said Battery B. "Why?"

"Anybody with you?"

"Nobody. Why?"

"Then an alibi is not possible for you," declared Erlanger. "I guess you did it, all right, and I can't find it in me to blame you very heavily; I might have done the same thing myself, under the circumstances. But all that doesn't relieve me of my duty. I'm one of the high sheriff's chief deputies, Guthrie, and I'm going to have to arrest you."

"Arrest me!" snapped Battery. "For what?"

"Holding up the new railroad's pay car last Friday at 9 o'clock in the Blue Polecat cut to the tune of five thousand bones. You gave the money to your sister—to Mrs. Ensley, of course?"

Bitter words sprang to the tip of Battery B's tongue. Then he took a grip on himself. It was no time, he realized, to lose his head.

"Am I," he asked, "the only man who could ha' done it?"

Erlanger smiled just a little. "No. But you are the man with the motive, and you fit in nicely with the paymaster's description of the masked robber. You'd been having your sister demand damages to the amount of five thousand dollars, and this was exactly the amount the robber demanded of the paymaster—and got. If you are innocent, the court will release you. Come; let's go."

But Guthrie didn't move. He was not at all sure that the court would release him. His years in the great outside world had taken none of the mountaineer's inborn fear of the law out of him.

"Listen, Erlanger," he said. "Life is as bright as new gold money to me. I don't want to risk my liberty as long as there's any decent way out of it; the court might make a mistake, for the evidence against me is pretty thick. Do any of the men at the camp know you for what you are?"

"Not a man of them," the officer answered.

"Then I've got a plan," Battery B continued hopefully. "I'll get you a job timberjacking, and together we'll find out—we'll get the goods on the real robber. For I happen to be almost sure of his identity. What do you say to that, Erlanger?"

"How am I to know that you wouldn't give me the slip?" frowned Erlanger.

Had his position not been so serious Guthrie would have laughed outright. As it was he smiled broadly.

"Man," he said, "you couldn't arrest me, if I didn't want you to do it. You're not big enough to iron me, and you're not low-down mean enough to shoot me; don't you see? I give you my word, a Guthrie's word, that I'll go with you peaceably to jail at the end of a week—if we haven't found out something interesting about the other fellow."

Then he told Erlanger of Martin Curcy, his enemy; of his winning the championship battle cleanly and fairly with Curcy as his opponent; of his and Curcy's being both in love with the same girl, and of Curcy's recent cowardly and underhand work. To further his argument he mentioned the fact that Martin Curcy and he were men of almost the same weight and stature; his own father, he declared, couldn't tell them apart if they had blue bandanas over their faces.

Erlanger found himself believing in the innocence of Battery B Guthrie, and he knew that the evidence against Guthrie was, as the timberjack had already said, pretty thick.

Half an hour afterward the camp's superintendent had agreed to take Louis Erlanger on as a cutter.

Monday and Tuesday passed, and the two who had been watching Martin Curcy day and night had been unable to find the slightest trace of his guilt.

Came Wednesday of that week, and Guthrie put into effect a thing that he had decided upon the night before; he asked for and was given the day off, left the deputy to keep watch over the actions of Curcy, and went toward the Blue Polecat cut to look for the missing money. If Curcy had taken it, Curcy had hidden it, of that there was scarcely a doubt, and it was quite reasonable to believe that he wouldn't carry it far from the scene of the robbery to hide it.

It was a fine summer day. Birds sang in the thickets, and gray squirrels chattered at Guthrie from the trees as he strode through the laurels. Guthrie's black and yellow hound—for Battery B did not let his occupation prevent him from keeping a dog—ran on ahead and frolicked and wished with its whole heart that those saucy squirrels would come down to the ground just once!

The middle of the morning found Battery B exploring likely looking places and delving into rock ledges, always with his keen, woodsman's eyes searching for signs of recent disturbances of the dead leaves. Hours passed, but he had seen nothing of that which he so much wished to see.

At 3 in the afternoon the hound began to bay joyously. Guthrie, now weary of his work, gave it up in a sort of disgust and ran to a rise from which he hoped to witness a little of a dog and fox or dog and rabbit chase. It was a long eared woods rabbit, and the race was close. And then the hound disappeared in a thicket and began to give treeing yelps.

Guthrie, smiling in almost boyish glee, ran to the dog, which stood clawing furiously at a small hole in the slaty mountain side. A moment, and he saw the rapidly working front paws begin to send bank note after bank note flying into the air—the hound had found the stolen $5,000 for him!

With a smothered exclamation he knelt and pushed the enthusiastic animal to one side and gathered the money up in his hat; it had been wrapped in a small square of flowered oilcloth, but this the dog had torn almost to shreds. At the first Guthrie was almost overcome with joy. But a few minutes later he realized the hazard of his predicament. It was this——

His taking the money to Erlanger would not be proof of his innocence; rather, it would seem proof of his guilt! He did not dare to even tell Erlanger that he had found it.

Battery B took the money a mile through the woods, crept into a dense thicket, sat down, and dug a hole under a ledge. Then he wrapped the sheaf of bank notes in his blue bandana, thrust the package into the hole, and covered it with loose stones and leaves. He meant to let it stay there until he had decided upon the wisest course for him to pursue. In the event he was taken to trial, and they offered him his liberty in return for the money—a thing he understood was sometimes done in such cases—he might get some justice for himself by means of it.

But there would be the disgrace. For there was one of the hill folk who would not easily forgive him, and that one was his sweetheart; her code was no more the code of her fathers; education had changed her. He could not ask even her to believe the actual truth of his story; the evidence against him was too strong. Battery B was not disposed toward being optimistic now.

It was a much worried Robert Guthrie that lay himself down in his bunk in the unpartitioned upstairs of the boarding house that night. The black hours came and went, and still the anxious timberjack hadn't found a way out of his dilemma.

Thursday dawned and waned. Erlanger was in no manner convinced of the guilt of Martin Curcy. He was beginning to watch, instead of Curcy, the man whom he had wanted to arrest at the first. And Battery B was shrewd enough and observing enough to notice it.

Battery B became desperate about it. A little after the gathering of dusk on Thursday evening he approached the deputy with this:

"Where's Curcy?" in a whisper.

Erlanger shook his head slowly and began to eye the woodsman from under frowning brows.

"I'm going to hold you to your promise of a week," growled Guthrie.

Erlanger nodded. "I'm as good as my word."

The timberjack turned away, went out, and was quickly swallowed up in the soft summer night's darkness. An hour later, and he had stolen up to a window in the end of the old cabin that the logging men knew as Wildcat's Glory, and was peering cautiously in. This, in the yellowish light of a big, swinging oil lamp, is what he saw:

He saw two sets of four men sitting around a pair of small and rough home made tables, playing cards; and on each table were little piles of silver money and partially rusted tin cups of clear new whisky. The air was vitiated and full of thin layers of pale blue tobacco smoke. Now and then an oath or a peal of coarse laughter came to his ears.

Then he noted that Martin Curcy stood alone at the other end of the room. Curcy's heavy countenance plainly showed defeat. Gray bearded old Bildad Torrey walked up to him, poked him in the side with a crooked forefinger, and said in a voice that carried easily to Battery B Guthrie:

"How much'd ye lose, Mart?"

"Four dollars," snarled Curcy; "but what's it to you?"

He showed his teeth like an enraged panther, caught the old man by the coat collar, and shook him roughly. Guthrie's jaws clicked at the sight. He made for the door, rushed in, and stopped squarely facing his enemy.

"Quit that!" he clipped.

Curcy let fall his hand and grinned sheepishly. He was afraid of that big iron king of a man who, though he rarely fought save for the pure sport of fighting, could fight any kind of a battle well.

"Let me see you on the outside, Mart," muttered Battery B. "And suppose you go first."

For Curcy was not one whom a wise man would trust at his back.

Together they went down the winding, scrub bordered trail that led from Wildcat's Glory to Long Creek. When they had reached a little open space where there were no treetops to shut out the light of the stars Guthrie put a heavy hand on his companion's shoulder and they halted.

"Mart," began Battery B, following the line of a plan that he had laid, "I've got the money you took from the pay car."

"You—you've got——" stammered Curcy, when Guthrie broke in:

"Yes, I've got it. I found it in a hole half a mile this side of the cut, in a thicket, under a big oak that has been struck by lightning. I came here to tell you, Mart, that you'd better leave while there's time to leave. That fellow Erlanger is an officer, Mart, and he's been watching you. You'd sure better go right now."

For if Curcy disappeared, would not that lend to his story of finding the money sufficient color to make it believable? He figured that it would.

Even in the darkness he could see Curcy shrink. There was no doubt in Curcy's mind that Battery B had spoken truthfully; otherwise how would Battery B know where he had hidden the proceeds of his holdup? Though Guthrie's was the finer intelligence, there entered Curcy's mind a thing that the other had not thought of—if the two of them were brought to trial would not the paymaster and his assistant recognize the voice of the real robber?

The real robber saw that he was beaten. He hated Battery B Guthrie with an old hatred and a terrible hatred. His cowardly soul demanded a red vengeance. If he had to run away he would run away for something bigger than holding up a pay car.

"Does Erlanger know—have you told him yet?" he asked.

"I haven't told him yet," answered Battery B.

Curcy knew it was the truth; the Guthries always told the truth; it was half of their code of honor.

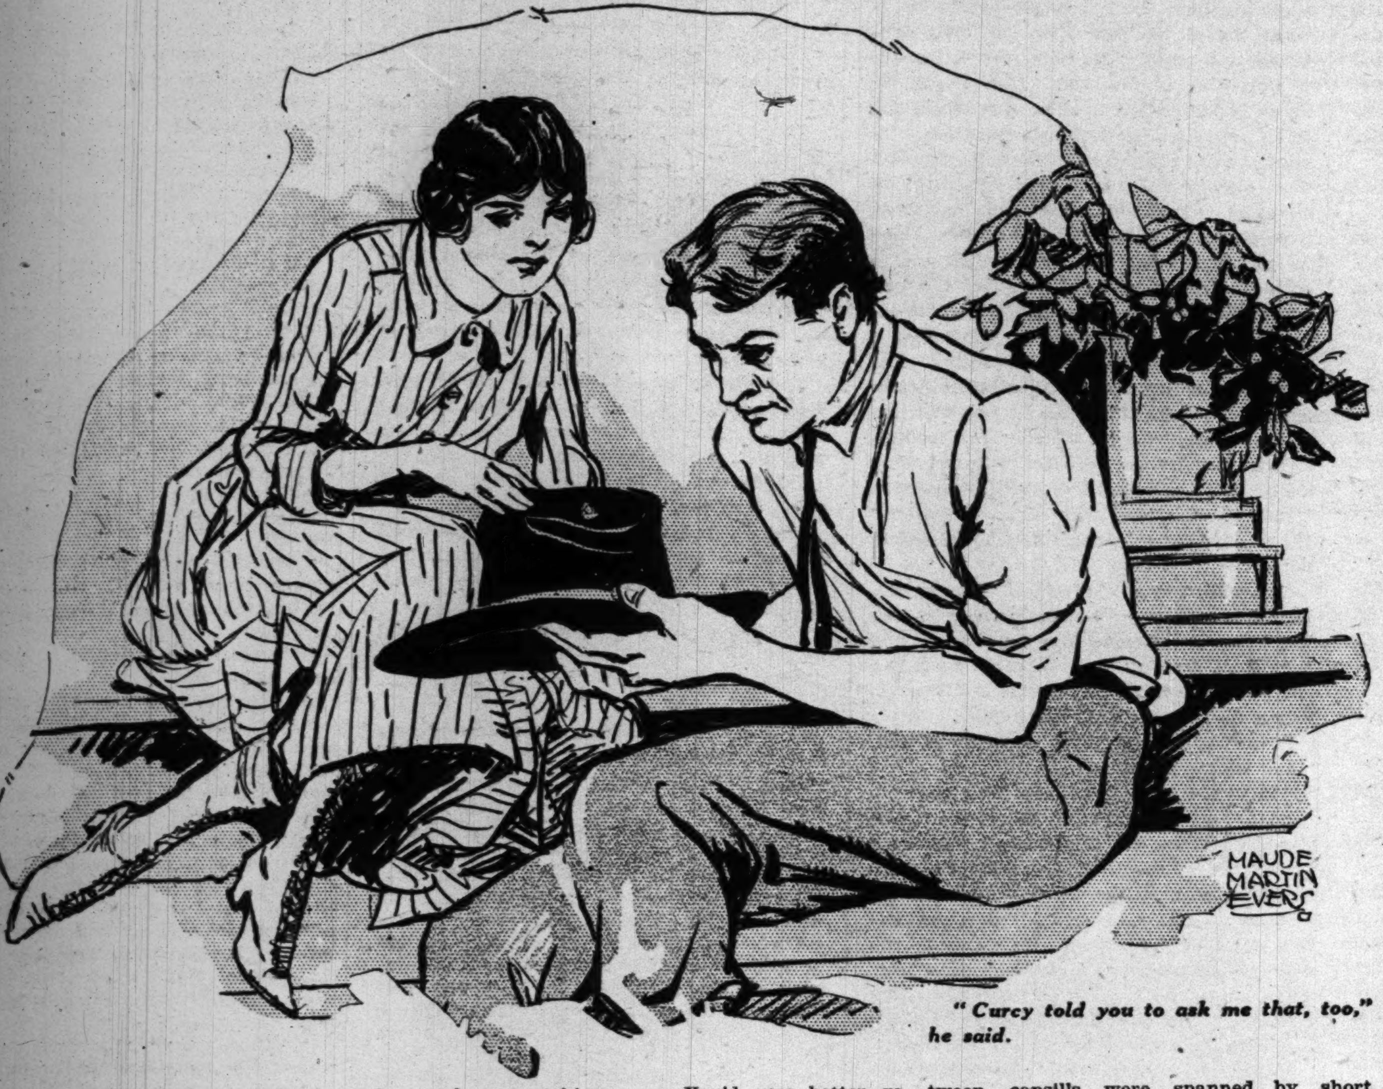
"Then give me until tomorrow night to leave, Bat," Martin Curcy whined. "Some o' the boys owes me a little, and I'll need it. Please, Bat!"

"I'll do it," agreed the good hearted Battery B. "I'll give you until tomorrow night, Mart."

He stepped backward and into the laurels and his big, dim figure was lost to Curcy's sight. Curcy immediately began to think of a most dastardly scheme that concerned a broken wire cable and a falling log.

And he would have carried it out successfully, doubtless, had it not been for a certain other plan. It was about the middle of the following morning that this simpler method offered itself—or Fate offered it, as you like—to Curcy.

The superintendent had sent these two, his strongest men, to pull an extra long crosscut saw through the base of a giant poplar that stood in a cove across the river. The Little Pigeon was here bridged by a trestle of round timbers which was fully fifty feet in height. It was a crude affair, that trestle; instead of being properly spiked to ties the light steel rails were spiked to heavy hewn timbers that ran lengthwise from capsill to capsill; the short distances between capsills were spanned by short lengths of heavy boards, which served as an emergency walkway, and these had not been nailed down.



"Curcy told you to ask me that, too," he said.

What more simple, thought Curcy, than to shove the end of one of those boards off when Guthrie was midway of it? There was hardly a chance of his being seen. And even if he were seen, couldn't he say that he saw the board slipping and tried to catch it?

He chose a board directly above a bare ledge of stone and pushed it off, and he did it very neatly. But in the doing of it he lost his balance, and he, too, fell through! The two men went hurtling down through a maze of round braces, with their hands beating the air in vain attempts to catch. It was Curcy that struck first; his great body made a sickening sound against the jagged stones and broke the force of Guthrie's fall.

Curcy was mangled almost beyond hope of healing, but he was conscious. He tried to lift himself to an elbow, but failed. Guthrie had an arm out of place at the shoulder and a dozen lesser injuries; he sat up and turned his bleeding face toward the man who had been his bitterest enemy. Curcy tried to speak, and couldn't; blood ran from his mouth. Guthrie bent over Curcy to see how badly he was hurt.

"I'm—I'm all in, Bat," Curcy gurgled, with an effort. "I hope you can forgive me, Bat. It was me—slipped the board."

"I know it," replied Battery B. "But that's all right. Sure, I can forgive you, Mart."

He felt for the other's hand and pressed it gently. It was broken, and even the slight pressure was painful, but Curcy gave no sign of it. There were tears in Guthrie's eyes.

"You get somebody to come, Bat," murmured Curcy—"somebody to hear, and I'll confess and save you."

"I couldn't leave you like this," was the quick reply. "I'll take you to camp and we'll get a doctor, and maybe he can fix you up all right. I'll have to take you down the river, Mart; I couldn't get you out of these high banks."

That was the heart of the man.

Curcy's bluish lips moved in an appreciative but pitiful smile. Battery B half carried, half dragged him into the little river's current and began to half carry, half float him down the stream. Curcy's eyes were staring fixedly now. Guthrie feared that he was giving up, and he tried bravely to cheer him, to offer hope. Himself he had entirely forgotten.

"You get me to camp—I'll confess and save you," gurgled Curcy. And then he sank into unconsciousness.

To take a limp and insensible person a mile down a mountain river would be a most difficult task for a man with sound limbs. Battery B Guthrie never could remember any of the details of that trying journey; he could remember only a long, long struggle against the big stones and the tumbling river and the growing weakness that threatened to overpower him at any moment.

When at last he reached the camp clearing, through which the Little Pigeon flowed in lower banks, he was unable to do anything more than to cling to a half submerged bowlder, hold the unconscious Curcy's head out of the water, and call weakly for help. Somebody heard him. Then he, too, sank into total darkness.

He came to an hour later. He was in his own narrow bed, he saw, and the superintendent and Louis Erlanger were standing beside him; the doctor hadn't yet arrived. Martin Curcy lay on a narrow bed to his left. On her knees between them was Faith Miller, beautiful child of Old Buck Miller's trust in the divinity, and her face was pale and worried looking.

Then she saw that Guthrie was conscious again, and her countenance brightened.

"Battery!" she said softly.

"I'm all right," said Battery B, and his voice was convincing.

Curcy, too, had regained his senses, but the deathlight was strong in his eyes. He whispered the girl's name reverently and she turned to him, forgiving everything, and caressed his brow with infinite tenderness. At the touch of her hand Curcy remembered vividly. His dying spirit flamed up in a desperate attempt to atone. His lips moved, and Louis Erlanger bent forward to hear what it was that he was trying so hard to say.

"It was me—that held up pay car," he mumbled. "I told Bat where—to find the money——"

With his last breath he lied to save him whom he had wronged; it was the celestial spark in the man. Faith Miller, grateful to the soul of her, bent over to kiss him on the forehead; but she saw that he wouldn't know it if she did, and she refrained. Then she turned back to Battery B and hid her face against his shoulder with a low sob that was not all of sadness.

There is but little left to tell, and that little is this: Jimmy Ensley's widow received five thousand dollars in due time, and—

As soon as Battery B Guthrie had recovered from his injuries his friends each had a boldly written invitation which ran, word for word, as I am writing it here:

"If you happen to be in this neighborhood next Sunday, come to Old Buck Miller's to my wedding. I'm going to be married there at 9 o'clock in the morning."

CHARLIE SNYDER

He Was a Man Whom Chance Always Favored with Adventure and This Was His Red Letter Day.

"I DON'T exactly like the idea of being burned up," said Miss Austin thoughtfully.

"But we can't burn here—in the legation quarter," insisted the bony woman from Kansas City—"with everything solid masonry, and an open space all around it—and the soldiers."

Miss Austin moved over to the window and looked out at the roaring sky. She was trim and girlish. She wore a watch strapped to her left wrist. Her left hand swung her brown shopping bag to and fro as she gazed out at the extraordinarily brilliant spectacle of burning Peking. Somewhere to the westward a roof fell in; a spurt of flame shot up, threw off down the wind a shining flame of sparks, and painted its own momentary glory in red against the smoke cloud behind and above it.

The months of uncertainty were over for the curious assemblage of diplomats, tourists, bankers, correspondents, soldiers of all nations and Chinese refugees that packed the fortified legation quarter—the months that had alternated strangely between panic and a commonplace quiet. It is now the evening of Feb. 29, 1912. On the 3d of December Nanking had fallen; Peking, it appeared, was falling tonight.

Edith raised her left hand and glanced at her watch—twenty minutes to 9.

Faintly to Edith's ears, above the roar of fifteen square miles of burning buildings, came the crack, rattle, and boom of large and small arms. They were fighting out there, Manchus and Chinese—fighting, plundering, ravishing.

Miss Austin compressed her lips and turned. "My people will be simply worried to death," she said. "Aunt is just about down sick, and uncle had to get over to the special train without waiting for me to finish dressing; but he understood that I was coming on with you. Now if you decide not to go. . . . And the train leaves at 9!"

"I'm sure I don't know what to say," replied the bony woman. "If my husband would only get back! You see, he isn't all packed, even. What are you going to do, Miss Austin?"

This question was prompted by the sight of Edith moving toward the door.

"I left Wing loose in my room."

With which rather inadequate reply Miss Austin went out.

Arriving in her own room, she stood for a moment with pursed lips gazing down at the absurd litle Pekingese dog on the bed. Then she looked at her watch. "Come, Wing," she remarked, with sudden decision, and, cuddling him on her arm, she picked up her traveling bag and umbrella with her free hand and left the room and the hotel.

The approaches to the railway station were congested with laden carts and disorderly piles of boxes and crates and panic stricken human beings. Even here in the shadow of the wall that towered forty or fifty feet above them, light from the burning city flickered redly on yellow faces and threw denser shadows in between the cluttered heaps of household goods. Men were shouting. Women and children were wailing. Somewhere up ahead a locomotive was coughing.

She could see a part of the train now. It was full of white men and women; there were faces at every window. Blue clad Chinamen with blanched faces were clinging to the platforms and steps between the cars and to each other. Many had climbed to the roofs of the cars. There were soldiers up there, too, on the roofs; American marines, she thought, from their olive drab clothing and dust gray campaign hats. She had to keep turning and twisting to protect Wing from the pressure of the crowd. Her watch, as she hugged the dog close, was right by the little black and white head. She could see that the minute hand was all but on the hour . . . closer . . . it was on the hour.

There was a sudden quick rhythm in the coughing of the engine. A bell began to ring. Her heart sank; for the cars were moving. Wing was looking up at her, his tiny eyes shining out through the angle of silky black and white hair like glistening beads. He reached out a diminutive tongue and licked her chin.

Miss Austin stopped, in some concern as to what she should do next. The train was gone—that much was clear. She turned back, then paused to look up at the red sky. She shrank from the thought of returning to the doomed city, even to the guarded legation quarter. But certainly she couldn't stay here in this wild mob about the station. It was to be the hotel and that bony woman from Kansas City, apparently. That or nothing.

The crowd that had been surging toward the train was now falling back. She found an opening between two stacks of freight and started through it.

At the same moment an American marine, a private apparently, rushed into the narrow opening from the other side. He was young, and not over tall. At least, her eyes and his, when they met, seemed nearly on a level. His eyes were blue and mild. His luxuriant hair, partly exposed by the backward tilt of his campaign hat, was light brown and curly. His nose was short, and it tipped up at the end. His mouth, set above a rather small chin, was large and of an amiable, easy smiling inclination. He wore the full equipment of the campaign soldier—blanket roll looped over one shoulder, knapsack, khaki covered canteen, revolver, bayonet, and bulging cartridge pockets; and he trailed a rifle. He was flushed, and a little blown, as from hard running. He was, everything considered, astonishingly attractive. It had not occurred to Edith that a private soldier could be so attractive. For one thing, he was utterly, comfortably American. "He looks almost as if I had met him at the country club back home," she thought swiftly, "or having soda in Williams' drug store. It's queer, but I'm positively certain I must have danced with him, somewhere." He was hardly older than herself—certainly not more than 21 or 22.

The soldier, with a breathless "Excuse me, Miss Austin!" stepped aside in order to pass her. But she stepped the same way; and they stood face to face. In some confusion she stepped back, just as he did the same. Again they confronted each other.

"Guess it's no use, Miss Austin," he said. "The train's gone."

"Yes," she replied ruefully, "it's gone."

His eyes wandered off down the track where the train had disappeared, then back toward the burning city. Suddenly he seemed to hit upon an idea. He straightened up, and an expresion of soldierlike determination came over his face. He glanced back over his shoulder, as if seeking something. Then he turned to Edith and asked, quite casually: "Do you want to go to Tientsin—now?"

"Then come with me," said the extraordinary soldier. "I'm in bad myself," he explained cheerfully, as he led the way back along the platform. "I had instructions to leave a message at our attaché's house and rejoin the company here. Couldn't make it."

He led her straight to the motor car that she had had to climb over. It was a large touring car with the top down, apparently of French make. Oil and acetylene lamps were all lighted, despite the glare from beyond the wall. The Chinese chauffeur was still in his seat and was still blandly smiling. The cars that had blocked his way were gone now.

"Get in," said the soldier to Miss Austin.

She hesitated, looked at him with startled eyes, bit her lip, then stepped up into the front seat. On the instant she reconsidered and started to her feet. But the soldier waved her back into the seat, cranked up, and leaped in beside her. The big car bounded forward.

A pack of screaming yellow children, with faces like painted eggs, tumbled headlong out of the way. Muleteers plied their whips to make room. In a moment, as it seemed, they were out of the press about the station and were headed southward on the Chienmen road across the Chinese city. Through the occasionally tangled traffic and the scurrying natives the soldier picked his way with skill.

"It's eighty-odd miles to Tientsin," he said. "And we're either going there or we're not—more about that later. How are you standing it?"

Edith looked with an odd, absorbed expression at her watch.

"It's some experience!" said he, with a sudden glow in his voice. "I haven't the remotest idea whose car this is. The Lord knows how far we're going to get in it and what's going to happen to us. But I'll say this right now, before any of it happens—you're a sport clear through."

"It is an experience," she said.

He was watching her through narrowed eyelids. He drew in a slow breath between partly opened lips; then brought himself back to his task. They were clear of the city now. The big car leaped forward like a dog off the leash.

"How did you know my name?" she asked, with a sudden recollection.

He did not reply at once. She thought that he had not heard, and repeated her question.

"Why—it's like this——" he began, hesitatingly. Then he seemed to remember. "I was in the company that went out to the American mission that night to fetch you in."

Edith looked back. There was a patch of dull red off there in the northeast; that was all. The stars were distinct now. She looked up, holding tight to the seat with her free hand. How the car lurched and jumped! She looked at her soldier. He was driving desperately through the night over one of the worst roads in the world, but with easy assurance. He was only a boy—a nice American boy!

The soldier glanced around. Their eyes were very close. He smiled. Even in that faint light she could see his white teeth. It was pleasant to see them.

"God's own guides," he said, nodding upward, then bent his gaze on the road.

She did not catch the phrase. Without looking at her he repeated, again with a jerk of his head indicating the star sprinkled sky overhead:

"'They're God's own guides on the old trail.'"

"O," she murmured, "yes. I didn't hear. I love Kipling."

It was an hour later. The soldier was driving more slowly. A new sound was coming to her ears—a soft, musical whine, a faint singing in the air that was barely distinguishable over the steady purring of the motor. It came again—and again. It was ominous; she could not have said why.

Again she heard that whining sound. It ended abruptly with a zut!

The engine, that had been running smoothly and sweetly, suddenly exploded—once, twice—like a pistol shot at their feet, and the car, at the same moment, took to jerking violently. There was a flash of light behind them that for an instant lighted the road and a row of abandoned carts beside it. Then the soldier, with an exclamation, drove his foot down on the brake pedal, the car stopped short, and Edith pitched forward.

He caught her arm with a strong hand just as her knees touched the dashboard and drew her back into the seat. For a moment he stood over her, his hand on her shoulder. She wondered, in a momentary flash of cool intelligence, why she did not shake it off. Every nerve in her body was conscious of the pressure of that hand. An impulse came to ask what was the matter, but she said nothing, merely lifted Wing and held him against her cheek. She felt, rather than saw, that her soldier was standing erect, looking out ahead. Again that singing whine overhead. She began to understand now; it was the song of a bullet. The corks were still popping away off in the darkness.

The soldier bent quickly down then, until his face was close to hers. She wondered, thinking with great rapidity, what he meant to do, and shrank back in the seat. He relaxed his grip on her shoulder, deliberately put his arms about her, slipped his other arm under her knees, picked her up as if she were a child, swung her around, and, himself kneeling on the seat, gently deposited her on the floor of the tonneau.

"Stay right here," he said gently. "The car is protection enough, I think, for now. They're not shooting at us, but we seem to be right in the line of fire of a skirmish down the line."

"Where are you going?" she asked anxiously, as he straightened up.

"I've got to look over the engine," he replied, "and find out what they did to us. Be back in a minute."

He disappeared. She could hear him moving about, tinkering with the engine, and striking matches. It seemed a long time. The corks were still popping intermittently. Every minute or so a bullet sang by.

"Please come!" she called, a little catch of excitement in her voice.

He laughed softly and called back: "In a minute."

He struck more matches. Soon she felt the car body move as he leaped up in front. Then appeared a heavy boot and a sturdy calf inclosed in a laced legging feeling its way toward a footing. She caught the ankle and guided it. A moment and he was crowded in beside her.

"You just make yourself comfortable," he said. "We're up against it—for fair. We can't go on, on foot even, while they're fighting. So just make up your mind to settle down and make the best of it."

"My mind's all right," she replied. His hands were still on her shoulders. She moved uneasily, but he did not take them away. "What happened?"

"Queerest accident I ever heard of. A rifle ball hit the interrupter box of the magneto."

"Can you repair it?"

"Hardly," he said, shaking his head.

"Things are pretty serious, then, aren't they?" she asked.

His face was very close.

"Very," he replied. And his voice trembled a little. He hesitated. He seemed to be having some difficulty with his throat. "I don't want to frighten yon," he went on, after a moment, "but it could hardly be more serious for you."

"And for you," she breathed.

"It doesn't matter about me." He seemed suddenly bitter. "I'm only fodder for bullets, anyhow. I shouldn't have brought you."

"But I asked you to bring me."

"That makes no difference. You're a girl. That situation was up to me. Absolutely."

She bridled at this. Was there a man anywhere in this masculine world who could perceive woman as responsible, independent human material?

"Please," she said gently, "If there's any fault or blame, it is half mine. I'll take my share."

"I'm going to tell you something," he said a little later. "There's no use of our pretending that this isn't a very remarkable experience."

"I know," she breathed. "And I don't even know your name."

At this they both laughed.

"Isn't that just it!" he cried. "That shows how much names and positions and all really matter. Now, listen. Here's what I was going to tell you. My name—my military name—is Sanders, Harry Sanders. That's the name I enlisted under. The boys in the company call me Curly Sanders. My story is a very strange one. Perhaps you've noticed that I don't talk quite the same as some private soldiers—my use of English, I mean. Though, after all, there's all kinds in the service. But I was brought up to something different. My father is a very rich man—a multimillionaire."

"It doesn't seem to matter," said she, "the way I feel tonight, who your father is—or who you are."

"I know," said he. "It's just you and me—the man and the woman. That, I suppose, is what love is. Real love, I mean. The big thing."

They were silent for a time. Then he resumed his story.

"Last year my father made up his mind that I had to go into his business—at the bottom and work up. When I objected he cut me off—wouldn't give me a cent. I tried to get along by myself for a while. But it's hard, you know, earning a living when your parents haven't give you the right kind of a training to start with. One day I saw a recruiting station of the United States marines. In a park. It struck me that I was young—only 22. It looked like a good chance to travel around a bit and see the world in a pretty interesting way. Certainly it was a heap better than the job I had in a shoe store."

"It was plucky of you."

"O, no. Any fellow would have done it. Anyhow, I knew it would be a shock to the governor and it wouldn't hurt me, so I enlisted. I'm glad I did. It brought me out to China and to you. . . . It is all queer and strange. My job now is to get you out of here and safe to Tientsin. I'm going to do it if I can. If not, if I fail at it—well, I love you, that's all. It has come to me, the big experience. And I'm going to give you this. Whatever happens, you must keep it always." He took from his little finger a heavy seal ring and placed it on the third finger of her left hand.

by Samuel Merwin

[illegible] said nothing. For a long moment she [illegible] looking down at the ring and turning it [illegible] round and round her finger.

“[illegible]-strange,” she murmured.

[illegible]. He took her two hands and pressed his warm lips against them, one after the other. He released them, slipped his arm about her shoulders, and drew her close to him. She made an effort to hold herself back.

“[illegible],” he whispered, close to her ear.

[illegible] told him her name was Edith? She was trying to think. Strange, vague forces newly released within her, seemed to be sweeping over her mind and undermining her [illegible].

“Not now,” she was breathing—“not yet—.” She managed to wrench herself free.

“[illegible]—on the forehead—just one——”

He raised her head. She feared he was going to kiss her lips, and started to dodge away, but he held her face firmly between his hands and brushed his lips gently against her forehead. Then he released her. She sank back against the cushions with pounding temples and covered her face with her hands.

He leaned forward. “Do you regret it, dear?”

She lowered her hands and for a moment looked at him. Suddenly her eyes filled with tears. She rested a light hand on his arm.

“I'm sorry,” she said. “I really don't mean to be cross. You're saving my life, and——”

“Haven't saved it yet,” he interrupted grimly.

They were silent, listening.

She deposited Wing on the seat, got to her knees, and looked out over the road ahead. Faint, far away, there was a new noise in the night, a coughing sound.

“Come up here!” she commanded.

They stood side by side in the car. She was drawing on the glove he had removed. After a moment they sought each other's eyes. “It's an engine,” she cried,” a train. They've been stopped by the fighting. O, do you think we can get to it?” And she opened the door and stepped to the ground.

He stood motionless, looking after her rather ruefully. Then, slowly, very slowly, he put on his equipment and followed.

“I'm almost sorry,” he said.

She started off along the road. There was nothing for it but to catch up with her and take her arm. She walked easily and rapidly. He looked down admiringly at her swinging step.

“I know who you are,” she broke out unexpectedly after they had walked a little way in silence. “You're Charlie Snyder of Middletown.”

The hand that held her arm moved with a sudden start.

“Yes,” he said, “I told you the truth. My father is rich. I'm a rich man myself. I ran away to enlist. I'm Charlie Snyder of Middletown.”

Edith was in a brown study. “I know your sister Betsy,” she went on. “We were at school together.” She stopped short. She knew other things. The escapades of Charlie Snyder were still a matter of gossip, even in the neighboring city in which she lived. This very matter of his enlistment had filled the local papers for just one blazing day before old William H. Snyder could make his influence felt. It was a chorus girl story—and not of one chorus girl, but two! Broadway had made short work of Charlie Snyder.

There was a small farmhouse in a walled compound by the railroad. In the shadow of the wall they paused.

“It's hard to let you go like this,” he said. She felt that he was trying to force a note of sentiment into his voice. But the effort was not wholly successful. There had been magic between them this night, a magic that had gone as a bubble goes.

“Thank you,” she said gently. “You got me here.”

He tried to press closer, but she held him off. “I'll write,” he whispered. “Will you be at the Astor house in Tientsin?”

She shook her head. “You mustn't write.”

“But—you're not stopping it like this——”

She nodded. “We must. It was a mistake.”

“A mistake!” he repeated bitterly, almost angrily. “Then it was what you said—just the romance, not me.”

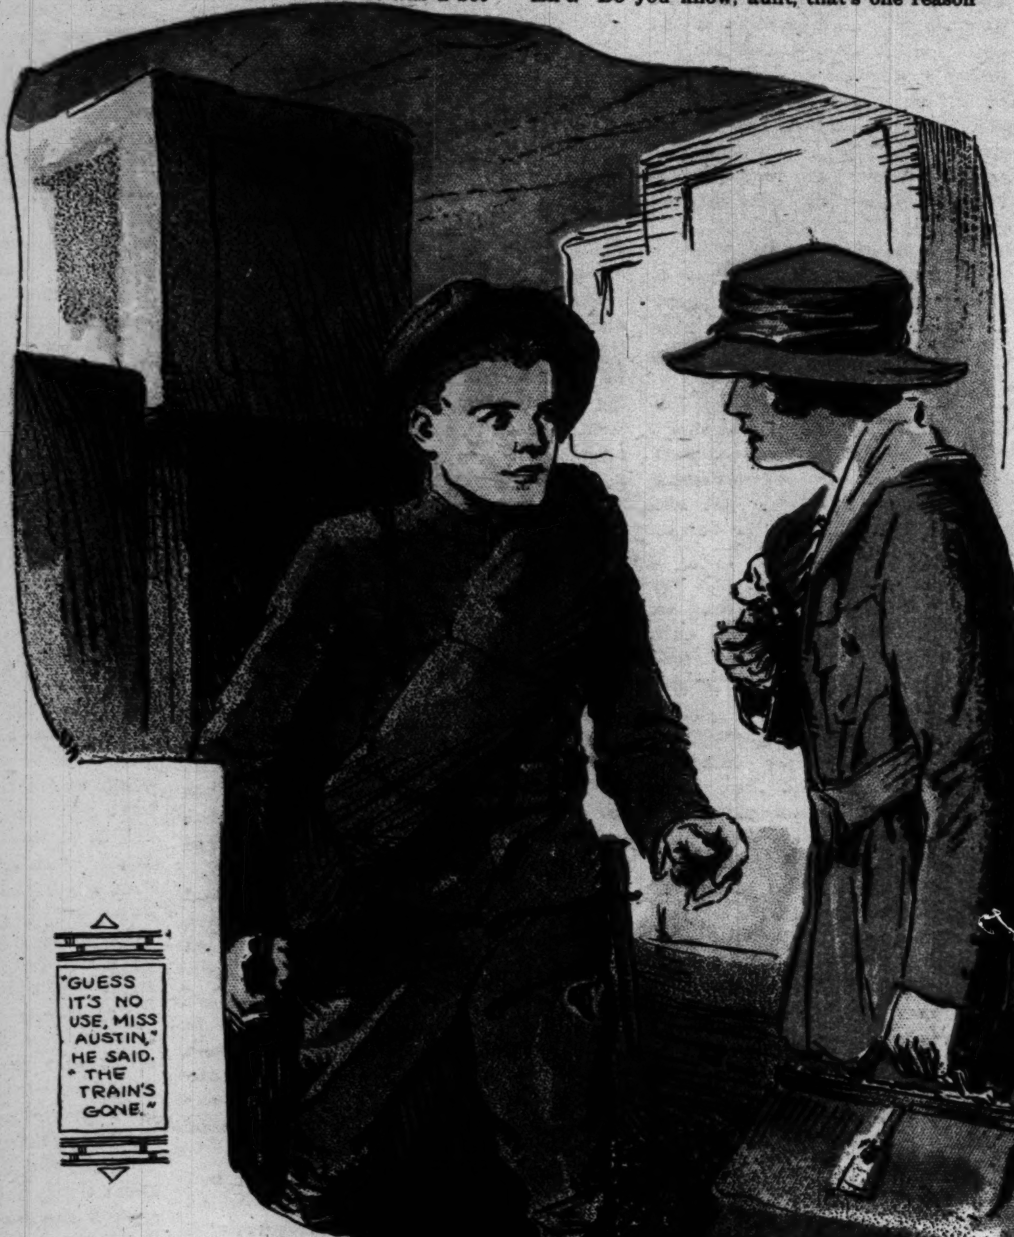
“Don't,” she murmured. “Please let me go!”

He released her hand and she slipped unobtrusively out by the train, among the shadows and the moving group of men, women, and children passengers and the curious, crowding Chinese. She stood quietly there, a slim, pretty girl in a tailored suit, turban, and white gloves, carrying in one hand an umbrella and a small satchel and holding a tiny Pekingese dog that stirred in her arms and licked her face.

And, standing there, she heard an officer call sharply: “Here, Sanders, what are you doing back here? Get forward there on the track work, and be quick about it.”

She pressed her hand to her eyes. How confusing it was! What a night! That officer was an acquaintance of hers. She turned away, unwilling to trust herself to speak to him.

Then she remembered that Charlie Snyder's ring was still on her finger. She wrenched it off. He was coming. He would have to pass her. It would hardly do for her to hand it to him—before all these people. She dropped it on the ground and looked at him. His eyes followed the movement. But instead of picking it up he kicked it contemptuously aside, strode by with stiff, military manner, and went on until she lost him in the shifting crowd. At the sight a little, a very little of the magic that had woven its web about her heart and senses not an hour earlier fluttered back. It was an act of bravado; but she liked him for it. It was a better ending than the other. She looked on the ground for the ring. But over the spot where it had lain was the firmly planted foot of a bland, moon faced Chinaman. She gave a little shrug. That, too, was better. And she turned her eyes to the train.



“GUESS IT'S NO USE, MISS AUSTIN,” HE SAID. “THE TRAIN'S GONE.”

What she saw there made her pulse jump. At an open window not five yards away was the white face of her aunt. and behind it, peering over her shoulder, the rather fat, business worn face of her uncle, Mr. Wilberly.

“For goodness sake, Edith!” cried Mrs. Wilberly. “Where have you been, child?”

Miss Austin, as she nodded and smiled and then moved toward the steps at the end of the car, found herself doing some rapid thinking. “How on earth shall I explain it to them?” she was saying to herself. She found herself getting on the train and making her way along the side corridor to the compartment in which her aunt was reclining.

“How on earth——” began that lady again.

“I felt sure you were somewhere on the train,” her uncle interrupted, with an apologetic expression. “I tried to look through for you, but it was so crowded——”

“Frank, you told me you had looked through,” cried Mrs. Wilberly, reproachfully.

“Well, my dear, I did. I went everywhere it was humanly possible to go. You've no idea how it is. I tell you there are two hundred men traveling on the roof. It's clear enough now that she was on the train, isn't it?” And the uncle added, with assumed cheerfulness, “It's a lucky thing you stepped out here, Edith, and we happened to see you. Your aunt and I have worried about you.”

Miss Austin smiled and said nothing.

A little later a fellow passenger stopped at the door of the compartment to inform them that the track was repaired and the line reported clear to Tientsin. “We'll be off in two minutes,” he said.

On the following evening Miss Austin, in a pale yellow evening gown with a flat gold ribbon bound about her fluffy hair, met her aunt in the hall of the Astor house at Tientsin and went in with her to dinner. Mrs. Wilberly, refreshed after a long sleep in a comfortable hotel, covertly watched her niece as she seated herself at the table and picked up the elaborate menu card.

“The same old thing,” said Edith, pleasantly, running her eye down the long card. “It looks like a real French dinner. But it isn't. Do you know, aunt, that's one reason I'll be glad to get out of China—just to eat a real meal, where there isn't always something the matter with the green vegetables, and the butter doesn't come in a can from Australia, and the milk in a can from home. I'd give anything just to have things taste right again. O, by the way, where's uncle?”

“I meant to tell you,” replied Mrs. Wilberly, “he's invited company to dine with us. Did you ever hear of Charlie Snyder of Middletown?”

Edith sat perfectly still; but her slim body had become suddenly rigid, and her fingers pressed so tightly against the menu card in her hands that the tips, usually a healthy pink, went white. She could not speak; so she nodded.

“Well, it's he. A queer, romantic story. He enlisted, you know—in the marines. He'd got into some trouble. His father decided to leave him in for a year, to get the discipline. Then he had Senator Mangelburg arrange with the department to get him out. Your uncle says that he's really a nice boy, and it's done him a world of good—quite made a man of him.”

Edith's eyes were fixed on the pedestal of the flower vase that stood in the center of the table. Her head was swimming. She heard steps behind her, and Mr. Wilberly's voice. She saw her aunt smiling and preparing to rise, and knew that she must rise too. She did rise. She stood motionless for a second, fighting down the confused tumult in her mind. Then she turned.

There stood her stout uncle. And beside him was a tall, broad shouldered young man of 24 or 25, with straight black hair, heavy eyebrows, black eyes, and with a noticeably long, “strong” chin. He wore a dinner coat. She felt that she was turning pale, and steadied herself by resting the knuckles of one clenched hand on the table.

Then they sat down.

Fortunately for Edith, who could not possibly have framed a five word sentence, the real Charlie Snyder was fully as talkative as his blonde counterfeit had been. And Mr. Wilberly was plying him with questions about his extraordinary experience as a private in the marines.

“It's been rather hard luck,” said the young man—this was later, over the Parisian coffee and the Manila cigars—“that they let me out when they did last week. I'd like to have stayed in for the revolution. But once the orders came to strike my name off the roll and hand me my discharge, I had to go. I wasn't a soldier any more.”

He turned to Edith. “You might think it a rough life, Miss Austin. But it's astonishingly interesting. There are all kinds of men in the service, you know. And it does one good to knock around with them. You'd be astonished to know how much one really learns about life, just being close to those boys. They've taught me a lot. Why, take Curly Sanders alone. My life—the rest of it—would be a lot poorer if I'd never known Curly Sanders. I'm simply dippy about Curly.”

“Curly, you see, is really a gifted person,” ran on the talkative young man. “He's one of that rare sort that actually live in a world of make believe. It isn't his fault. He's a walking Arabian Nights. He can't cross the street without running bang into the most extraordinary adventure. Real ones, too. They happen to him. Mostly with ladies. He is—forgive me, Mrs. Wilberly, but he is —simply one wonder with the ladies. Rich and poor, high and low, they're all alike to Curly.

“And the joy of it is, he always comes right back and tells us all about it. Of course, you can never be sure how much of what he tells is so. But he's always specific as to names and places and dates. And it's always gorgeous. Come to think of it, Miss Austin, Curly is from your town. His father's a grocer. Curly went to high school there. Then he had to drive a grocery wagon. Then he worked in—O. Williams' drug store, a soda water clerk. Then he skipped out to New York, had some hard luck, and enlisted.

“I must certainly look Curly up tomorrow. It's absolutely sure that he's had some hair-raising adventure in this mixup. And he'll begin telling me all about it as soon as he sees me.”

More was said, but it passed by Miss Austin's ears unheard. She could only smile and nod mechanically now and then to give an appearance of being in the talk.

But gradually as she sat there her brain began to clear. Her independent spirit slowly reasserted itself. She wondered if——

“How long are you staying here, Mr. Snyder?” she asked, as she found herself leaving the dining room by his side.

“Only tomorrow. I'm leaving for Shanghai on the night boat.”

“O, really?” Her big eyes turned to his. They were beautiful eyes. And she added, quite deliberately. “I'm sorry we shan't see something of you. Betsey has told me so much about you.”

She saw the light come into his own black eyes.

“Well,” said he—“there is tomorrow. Couldn't we—well, play around together a bit?”

She smiled. “I'd love to knock around and see the city. I don't get much chance with uncle and aunt. But I don't want to keep you from your friend Curly and his new story.”

“O, hang Curly?” cried Charlie Snyder, boyishly. And they both laughed.

“It won't be necessary to hang him.”

“We'll forget him, then.”

As soon as they were outside, in the semi darkness of the big porch, she gave way to the impulse to draw a long, a very long breath.

HIS SECOND SELF

SYNOPSIS.

Joan Wentworth, a country girl, is employed as a nurse in the Southern Hospital at Avonmouth, presided over by Dr. John Lancaster, a bully and a man of loose character. She faints during her first operation, and she goes to his house to beg to get her position back. To her astonishment Lancaster appears altogether different; he is manifestly ill, and gentle with her. He says she needs a change and offers her a temporary post, while her case is being considered at the Institute in the hill country, founded by his father with the Lancaster Fund. Joan goes to Lancaster (the name of the hill village) and finds a dilapidated old building, with a colored doctor, a matron, and a crazed woman, Mrs. Dana, who is locked in her room. There is a superintendent named Myers, whom Joan dislikes. Next day she is surprised to see Lancaster come down to the Institute. She has a quarrel with Myers, who takes her into the doctor's room and shows her Lancaster insensible from an overdose of morphine. Joan discovers that he is addicted to the drug. Lancaster begs her to aid him fight the habit, and a grim battle ensues, first with the drug, then with Myers whom Joan suspects of trying to induce Lancaster to continue the habit. Lancaster's will power is gone. Joan wonders how he has managed to act his part at the Avonmouth hospital. The night after her quarrel with Myers Mrs. Dana gets out of her room. Joan awakes to find her standing at her bedside with a knife in her hand watching her. She leads her back to her room. Lancaster, hearing the noise, comes up with Myers. He is furious and summons courage to discharge Myers. Next day Myers goes away.

SEVENTH INSTALLMENT.

THE DEMON REAPPEARS.

JOAN hurried out upon the veranda and stood peering under her raised hand across the rain swamped fields to where the carriage road wound in and out among the hills. The sun had set and it was beginning to grow dusk; a bat was flitting under the eaves, and the steady downpour never ceased. Mrs. Fraser, who had moved to follow the girl, went back into her room. There was a queer, troubled pucker about her lips, and once she went to the door and looked intently at Joan, who had not stirred from her position of expectancy.

Presently, looking out through the dripping trees, Joan could see the buggy crawling up the hill through the mud. Slowly it moved along the road. Jenkins was driving, and there were two men with him, not one. Joan recognized Lancaster; then she perceived, first the hard hat, next Myers' face under it.

She shuddered. The worst had come about, then. But the last battle was joined, and under her fears she felt a hardening of her spiritual resources. She would not falter. She went slowly toward the top of the three low wooden steps, and stood there like a statue, watching the buggy pass up the weed grown drive until it came to a standstill.

Lancaster and Myers were laughing together, and, as Myers saw the girl, he said something, and the other threw back his head in merriment.

Myers was the first to descend. He raised his hat to Joan and grinned. "The doctor's come back quite safe, you see," he said, "and feeling fine again."

Joan hardly noticed the man; she was bracing herself to bear what was to come.

Lancaster got out, and Jenkins, contrary to his custom, lashed the horse violently and drove rapidly away. Myers and Lancaster came up the steps of the porch together. Now Lancaster was raising his hat in turn, and under it was the face of the smirking bully of the operating theater at the Avonmouth hospital.

"Well, little runaway, I'm back, you see," he said, with a leer at Joan; and Myers chuckled.

Joan stood aghast, looking at Lancaster. He had the look of a man possessed by a devil, as the matron had said. If this was the man she loved, it was the departed soul she loved, not the soul within this same body. She could only stare at him, incapable of speech or movement, while Lancaster went on:

"Well, I had a fine trip to Avonmouth, my dear, and I hurried back as fast as I could, to see you. I couldn't stay away from you very long, Joan, after you saved my life. And I persuaded Mr. Myers to return with me. We're all going to be good friends. Mrs. Fraser! Mrs. Fraser! Where the devil are you?" he bawled.

Mrs. Fraser's frightened face appeared at the door. "Here, sir!" she stammered.

"Is supper ready? If so, we'll all eat together."

"It's waiting, sir. I'll lay another place," said the matron.

"Good! Then we'll go in. What do you say, Joan, darling? Aren't you glad to see me?" he asked, linking his arm in the girl's and advancing his face within a few inches of hers.

He pulled her toward the door, through which Myers had already preceded them. But at the door Joan found her voice. She pulled herself away. "Dr. Lancaster!" she gasped.

"Yes, my dear?"

"What has happened? What is it?" she cried, wildly.

He bent toward her and kissed her. "It's the sight of you, little Joan Wentworth," he said. "My, you do look a stunner tonight!"

With a sob Joan tore herself away from him and ran upstairs at the top of her speed. She was choking with grief and shame. Hard as she ran, she knew her flight was an incentive to Lancaster to follow her. He went after her as fast as he could, and as she slammed the door of her room his hand was on the knob outside. She was just too late to turn the key.

"Joan! Joan! Open the door and don't act like a little fool!" he shouted. "What's the matter with you? Ain't you glad I've come back? Say, I've got a half dozen bottles of the fizzy stuff in my bag, and we three will make a night of it."

"Go away!" cried Joan, hysterically. "Leave me alone, please, Dr. Lancaster."

"The devil!" shouted the other, and set his shoulder to the door. It crashed open, sending the girl staggering into the center of the room. Lancaster stood before her, with evil, angry, mocking face.

"See here, now," he began, as Joan retreated slowly before him, looking at him in fascinated horror, "I guess this is a sort of misunderstanding, isn't it, Joan? You haven't turned against me since I left here yesterday? There's none of these spry young farm hands about here has cut me out, eh, dearie?"

"O, won't you please leave me?" pleaded Joan. "Try to remember how—how different you were yesterday."

"That's true!" he swore. "I'm different now. I was a sanctimonious mug yesterday. I'm in my right mind today. It gave me the blue creeps, being cooped up here in this God-forsaken place. I tell you, Joan, now that I've had enough good liquor to soak that morphine out of my system, I'm feeling like a king. Say, now, come down to supper, like a good little girl, and we'll have a great time together. Myers doesn't bear any ill feeling. And we'll put him out after a while and finish up the bottles ourselves. And say——"

He was advancing toward her with his arms outstretched. Joan sprang back to the washstand and snatched up the half filled pitcher, with such an evident determination to defend herself with it that the man fell back scowling.

"Joan, don't be a little jackass!" he shouted, angrily. "I know what you mean when you look at me like that. You think you're above being jolly and sociable just because I don't choose to stand on my dignity tonight. Did you expect me to go about always looking like a sanctified mummy, as I did when I was ill?"

"Listen, Dr. Lancaster," panted the girl. "I am not going to judge you by what you are saying now. Leave me, and tomorrow, if you are yourself, I shall be willing to hear your explanation, because I know it is not your better self that is speaking. Leave my room now, please, immediately!"

The man glared at her; but he was dominated, in spite of himself, by her courage and apparent calmness.

"Well, I'm not going to fight with you before I've had my supper," he answered. "You think things over, and in a little while I guess you'll see them in a different light. You can't fool me with those mock airs and graces, dearie. I've seen them in women before. Used to believe in them once, too, till I found it meant that it was going to cost me more in the end. You come down and act straight, Joan—see?"

He slammed the door viciously behind him. Joan fell upon her knees beside the bed. There, tearless, but shaken with her grief, she poured out a wild prayer for the lost soul of the man. This was worse than anything she could have divined. Better by far that he had returned as on that earlier day, drugged and possessed by the morphine spirit, than in the chains of this devil. Better that he had died. For Lancaster, even when the shifty, false, lying drug fiend was in control of him, had never been vicious and vile like this before.

And yet this was the John Lancaster of the Southern hospital. It was the traditional Lancaster in his hour of relaxation. He treated women shamefully, as the gossiping nurse had said. Joan had never been in fear of physical harm as she was now. She rose from her knees, looking wildly about her. Then she heard footsteps outside, and she sprang back across the room.

But it was only the matron. Mrs. Fraser cast a scared glance at her and ran forward. "What did he say to you?" she cried.

"Who is he? What is he?" whispered Joan. "He is not the John Lancaster I know."

"I don't know. Heaven help me if I know what has changed him!" Mrs. Fraser cried. "It is what I was telling you about this afternoon. Twice or three times before he has come back from Avonmouth like this. He's come back like this, acting as if the devil had his soul. What are you going to do?"

"I am afraid of him. I dare not stay here. Where shall I go?" cried Joan, losing all self-control.

In the midst of her terror Joan suddenly realized that the look upon the matron's face was the same as on her first night, when they had held a brief conversation in the same room.

For a moment Mrs. Fraser did not answer her. The women drew together, listening. They were having supper below, conversing in boisterous tones and laughing loudly. Joan heard her own name spoken, and a renewed outburst of mirth followed.

"Mrs. Fraser," said Joan, "the Dr. Lancaster whom I respect and honor is not in that man's body. I am going away. I am going at once. I shall ask Dr. Jenkins to protect me until tomorrow. He is a gentleman; he will do so."

"You can't go through this storm," exclaimed the other, and as she spoke Joan realized that the wind had risen to a hurricane and the boughs creaked and snapped like pistol shots. "You must stay here tonight. Stay with me and I'll swear he shall not hurt you. Look at this!"

She pulled a revolver from beneath her apron and handed it to Joan.

"I've kept that ever since the last time he came back like this, when he went raving among the patients, mad with liquor. That was the end of the institution. He frightened a sick girl almost to death. Use it on him if you must—use it, because it won't be him you'll kill, but the devil that's got him."

She was almost incoherent with fear and excitement. Joan took the revolver and slipped it into the pocket of her uniform. Oddly enough, she felt that the Lancaster of that evening had so grossly wronged the Lancaster of earlier days that to kill him would be to avenge an intolerable outrage. She hated him with all the intensity of which her heart was capable, hated him for the wrong he had done himself, the outrage on their love; and under the hate the flame of the love she had borne burned pure and clear.

It was long since dark, but the maid had not lit the lamp outside Mrs. Dana's door, near the head of the stairs. The moon had not yet risen. The women crept cautiously along the hall.

Lancaster and the secretary were in Myers' room. The door was open. Joan heard a cork fly with a bang, and the gurgle of the champagne in glasses. Their voices were raised high, and there came the sound of a scuffle.

"Sit down!" the secretary was crying. "Do you want to be a fool and spoil everything? Leave her alone until tomorrow."

"I'm damned if I do!" cried Lancaster.

"Waite a minute. Listen to me. You agreed to come back here and put her out. Why don't you do it now?"

Lancaster laughed coarsely. "Because she's too damned pretty, Myers," he answered.

"It's the drink in you. She isn't better looking than any average woman in Avonmouth. See here, now, are you going to bust up the game or are you not?"

"I'll show you!" shouted Lancaster, breaking from Myers' grasp and rushing from the room.

He met the women at the foot of the stairs. His face was flushed, his hair disordered, his manner maniacal.

"You sneak, what are you butting into this show for?" he demanded of Mrs. Fraser.

The matron, cowed by his violence, trembled. She tried to pull Joan toward her room; then caught her eye and made the slightest gesture indicative of shooting. Lancaster raised his fist threateningly.

The matron did not lift a finger to defend herself. She stood quite calmly, awaiting the expected blow. Perhaps it was some atavistic trait inherited through generations of downtrodden ancestors; and yet, servile although it might have been, the look on the woman's face was almost heroical.

The man let his fist fall; he seized the matron by the shoulders and pushed her back into her room. He turned the key in the lock and put it in his pocket.

"That's settled, I reckon," he said, with satisfaction.

Joan's hand went into her pocket. Her fingers closed about the revolver handle. But at that moment the secretary, who had come out of his room, went up to Lancaster.

"See here, now," he began to remonstrate, "have a little sense, doctor. If you're bent on busting everything up, you and I part company."

The other turned on him with so menacing a gesture that Myers flung up his hands in despair and went back into his room. Joan stood facing the doctor alone. At that moment her decision was nearly ripened, and she felt conscious of no fear of him at all.

If he attempted violence she knew what she would do. But he did not lay hands on her. He stood leaning against the newelpost at the foot of the stairs, watching her face.

"Joan, I guess you and I are old enough to understand each other," he said. "Maybe I've been a bit rough. I was so glad to see you again that I may have let my feelings get the better of me. Now just explain to me, like a sensible girl, what it is that has changed you. Is it because I've come back jolly instead of like a sick man? You were nice enough to me yesterday. You liked me; you know you did. I fired Myers to please you. Now I've brought him back to patch things up, and you shrink from me. What's the matter with you? Do you want Myers to go? Will you act differently if I kick him out right away? Say the word and I'll do it, Joan."

Joan was searching his eyes for the least sign of the man she had known, and he broke off, scowling, and wincing under her stare. Above his words was the sound of the beating rain, the lashing wind; and from within the matron's room Joan heard Mrs. Fraser crying in prayer:

"Oh, Lord, save her!" she wailed. "Save that girl this night, O Lord, from the devil! Save her! Save her, O Lord!"

"Maybe I got you wrong," continued the doctor. "But if I did, I ask you, who's to blame? Didn't you come to me at my house in Avonmouth and ask for your job back! Weren't you as sweet as sugar when you wanted something out of me? And didn't you agree to come up here to work for me? Well, what's the inference, then? You can have your job back if you want it. But I can do better by you than that. You're too pretty for a nurse's job, and I told you so that day you turned on me in the theater like a wildcat. Now, then, it's up to you! Your move, partner!"

"What do you mean by all that?" asked Joan. "What do you wish me to do?"

He gave a gratified grin. "Now you're talking sense, my dear," he answered. "Live up to your promise, that's all. A nod's as good as a wink, and you can't fool me with your pretenses. I've seen enough women in my life to know that they're all the same. You know why I gave you this job here. Don't try to pretend it was because you are such a clever nurse. I reckon that if I'd wanted a nurse I could have gone no further and found a better one. Live up to your agreement and don't be a little cheat. That's all you've got to do."

Joan tried to push past him, but he remained at the foot of the stairs, blocking her way.

"Let me pass, please!" she cried. "I'm going to leave the institute at once."

"Without your hat?" he sneered.

"Let me pass at once!"

"Well, I reckon I can't stop you," he rejoined. "Just one word more, though. Do you realize your situation? Do you know what people will say when you go to them with crazy stories about me? Nobody will think you came down here to the notorious John Lancaster after he'd fired you just because you were such a wonderful nurse that he couldn't do without you. What sort of reputation do you expect to have in Avonmouth? You can go, but you won't go there. Not back to Avonmouth, understand that well. I'll hound you out of the town, you little double-crosser!"

For the first time Joan felt her spirit begin to shrink from the ordeal. She was cowed, she was almost as helpless as if he had used physical violence toward her. And through the baneful dream she was aware that Myers had come out of his room and was watching the scene from the end of the hall, wearing a smug, complacent smile.

by Victor Rousseau

Myers was getting his way and having his revenge in one.

And because the situation was too horrible for belief, Joan could remember only the Lancaster of the yesterday. She ran to the man and caught him by the arms, and looked into his face with pathetic earnestness.

"I'm going to stay, John!" she cried. "My faith is stronger than that. I remember what you have said to me, and I remember my promise to you. Some day you will come to yourself and everything will be clear. I shall call to the John Lancaster I know against the man who claims to be he and is not."

"What do you mean?" shouted the other. "Whom do you take me for?"

"You are not the John Lancaster who won my love," cried Joan, with an impassioned gesture. "Let your better self hear and understand me. You asked me to stay and fight your battle with you, and nothing shall drive me from you till you tell me to go; and not even that; nothing shall make me falter till I have won you again."

The man's eyes blazed. "You're right; you're dead right there, Joan!" he cried, and caught her in his arms. He pressed his lips to hers.

She struggled wildly in his grasp. "Let me go!" she panted. But she could not free herself. She screamed. The matron's voice shrieked through the door. "Shoot him!" she cried. "Shoot him dead! Shoot him!"

Joan wrenched her arm free and struck at the man, but he pinioned it again.

"I've got you, Joan!" he cried triumphantly, "and nothing under heaven shall make me let you go."

Held as she was, Joan got her fingers into her pocket. She thrust it upward into the man's face. He recoiled with an oath, squinting at the weapon, his face convulsed. And in that moment knowledge came to Joan Wentworth.

"You are not John Lancaster!" she cried.

As she spoke they heard the sound of halting footsteps on the porch. The door swung slowly open. Joan's hand dropped to her side, she slid the revolver mechanically into her pocket; she tried to cry but could not.

Upon the threshold of the door, looking out with a wry, distorted grin on his pale lips, was the man who had held her. And on the threshold, looking in, with eyes drug-clouded, swaying and clutching at the door pillars to support himself upright, was the John Lancaster of yesterday. And even Joan, with all her love and hate, could not have told the one man from other.

But with a cry she ran to Lancaster and caught at him, and felt his arms about her.

It seemed to Joan, long afterward, like some dreadful picture; the swaying man upon the threshold, to whom she clung and his double within; and then the rasping voice of Myers broke the long silence.

"Well, well," said the secretary, rubbing his hands together, "here's a pretty kettle of fish. It will all have to come out now."

The Lancaster within the door turned his eyes from Joan to Myers; his passion and rage had frozen into malevolence.

"Don't put the blame on me," said Myers acidly. "I warned you to get rid of her."

John Lancaster advanced into the hall. His double, who had drawn back a pace or two, stood watching his efforts to steady himself with a scornful smile. Joan put her hands on her lover's arm; it seemed unbearable that he should display his weakness for them to mock at.

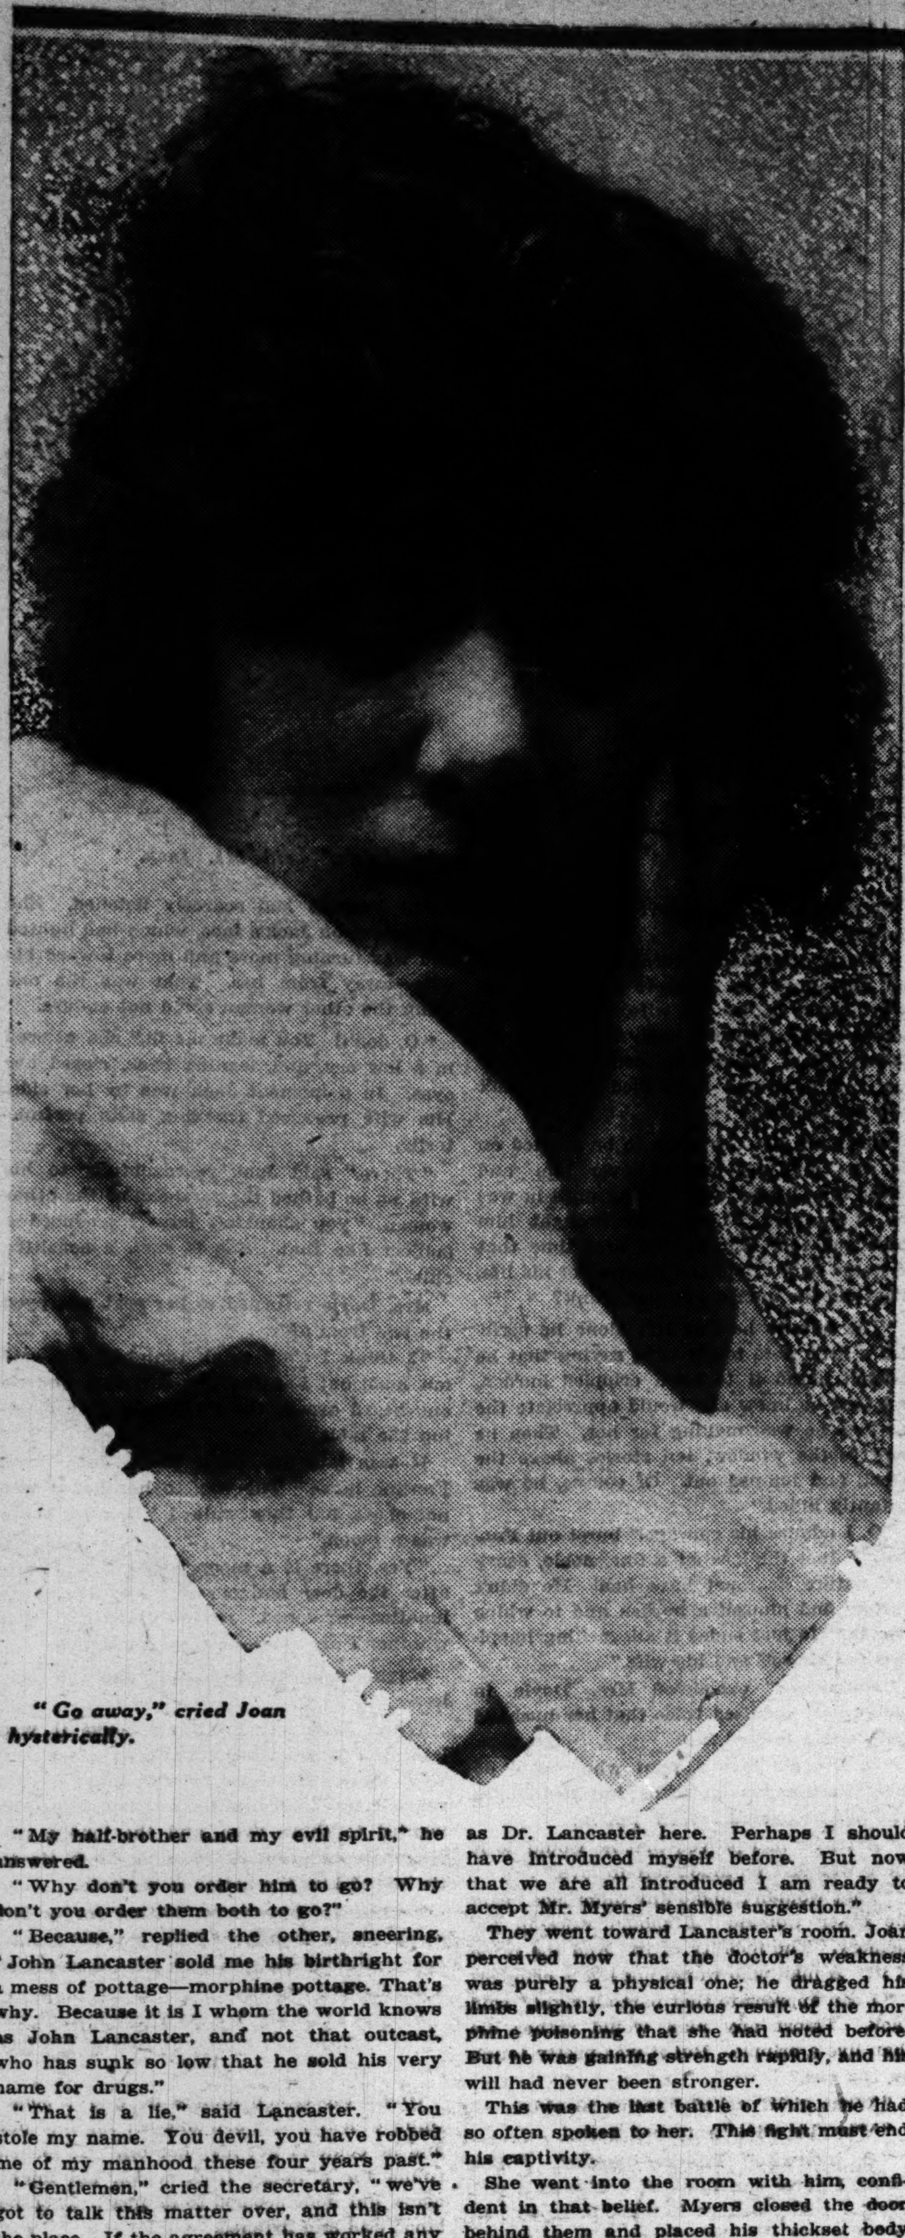
But then, glancing into his face, she saw that, weak as he was, and morphine-ridden, too, it was John Lancaster himself, virile in personality and mind, who had come back. The devil which had been exorcised had returned into his swept and garnished chamber, but he could claim only the physical domain. The body was afire with the accursed drug, but the soul of John Lancaster looked from the cloudy eyes, a man's and not a weakling's.

And Joan knew that it was through no fault of his that he had come back enchained, and that her love had borne him throughout the day and kept his spirit whole.

Lancaster's double turned fiercely upon the secretary.

"Yes, it is a pretty kettle of fish," he retorted, "and it's going to be fried. We'll have this out tonight. Curse you, why didn't you stay here at your post, instead of running to me? Were you afraid of this girl?"

"Who is this man?" Joan asked Lancaster.



"Go away," cried Joan hysterically.

"My half-brother and my evil spirit," he answered.

"Why don't you order him to go? Why don't you order them both to go?"

"Because," replied the other, sneering, "John Lancaster sold me his birthright for a mess of pottage—morphine pottage. That's why. Because it is I whom the world knows as John Lancaster, and not that outcast, who has sunk so low that he sold his very name for drugs."

"That is a lie," said Lancaster. "You stole my name. You devil, you have robbed me of my manhood these four years past."

"Gentlemen," cried the secretary, "we've got to talk this matter over, and this isn't the place. If the agreement has worked any injustice to Dr. Lancaster, no doubt it can be readjusted. It is clear that we've got to come to a sensible understanding. Let's face the facts like men and talk it over in the doctor's room. And this girl had better go upstairs," he added.

"Miss Wentworth stays with me," said Lancaster.

The double and the secretary exchanged ironical glances. It was evident that they did not feel themselves to be in the position of trapped conspirators.

"Dr. Lancaster, if you cannot order them to leave, is it necessary that you should be drawn into a discussion now?" Joan asked.

"Yes, it is necessary," said Lancaster. "I'll fight this thing with Lawson to a finish tonight."

"Lawson?"

"I believe that I am Lawson," said Lancaster's half-brother, with an ironical bow, "though I have as good a right to the name as Dr. Lancaster here. Perhaps I should have introduced myself before. But now that we are all introduced I am ready to accept Mr. Myers' sensible suggestion."

They went toward Lancaster's room. Joan perceived now that the doctor's weakness was purely a physical one; he dragged his limbs slightly, the curious result of the morphine poisoning that she had noted before. But he was gaining strength rapidly, and his will had never been stronger.

This was the last battle of which he had so often spoken to her. This fight must end his captivity.

She went into the room with him, confident in that belief. Myers closed the door behind them and placed his thickset body in front of it. It was astonishing to see how Lancaster braced himself for the ordeal. He drew himself up, standing erect, and faced the others.

"Dr. Lancaster has the floor," said Lawson mockingly. "At least, I understand that the proposal to revise our agreement comes from him."

"Joan, I owe you an explanation," said Lancaster, turning toward the girl. "This morning, after I had operated, I was called to the house which people think is mine—which should be mine," he added with sudden vehemence. "I was told it was an urgent case. I found these men there. They drew me into an argument and in the heat of it Myers plunged a needleful of morphine into my arm."

"To quiet you, because you were becoming violent and injuring yourself," sneered the secretary. "Yes, I did, and I left you in good hands."

"They left me senseless in the consulting room, but I managed to force my limbs to obey my will. John Lancaster had still a little more will power than they had counted on. And John Lancaster's name was enough to conjure up a special train this afternoon, though they had robbed him of his money."

"Your seven dollars was left in the care of the servant," interposed Lawson. "Don't be cynical and childish, John. As for the hypodermic that Myers gave you, it was under my instructions, and I accept full responsibility for the action."

Joan put her hands on Lancaster's shoulders. "That is all you need to tell me," she said quietly. "I knew you had been trapped by them. I never doubted you."

Lancaster's eyes blazed. "No, I am going to tell you everythng," he answered.

"Better not, John," said Lawson. "You'll find it difficult to separate your hallucinations from the substratum of fact which they contain."

"O, let him talk," said Myers. "Let's hear the worst he has been storing up against us. Let him get his visions out of his system and maybe he'll feel better."

"Eight years ago," said Lancaster, "I was a man respected in Avonmouth and everywhere throughout the south. Then a domestic trouble overtook me. You know what that was, Joan. It broke me down. I could not cope with life. I lost my grip on reality, gave up my work——"

"Yes, John, now we're getting at the truth," interposed Lawson bitterly. "You, the honored head of the Southern hospital, became a common tramp and wandered about the country with hoboes, and I have been living down your reputation for you. Go on, John. Don't skip the interesting parts."

"I shall skip nothing. The woman I was to have married left me the evening before, and disappeared with another man. Had he been free to marry her she would have had no need to escape in secrecy. I gave up my work. I hunted them through the southern states. My mind was obsessed with the idea of redeeming my honor. If I had found them I should have killed him. They knew it, and they fled before me. I gave them no rest. For five years I pursued them, running down every clew."

"You'll permit me to correct your memory on that point, John," said Lawson suavely. "For five years you wandered among tramps and hoboes, to the scandal of your former friends, thinking that you were looking for your fiancée, but actually doing your searching in morphine visions. Such delusions of phenomenal activity are a recognized symptom of your disease. De Quincey imagined that he visited every corner of the earth while lying at home in an opium stupor."

"I never touched morphine until you gave it to me," said Lancaster.

"That delusion is part of your disease. No, John, you may have searched the suburban districts of Avonmouth, but you can't have gone far, because every few months you would turn up at the institute, looking shabbier and more disreputable on each occasion, and more and more morphine soaked. And every time I tried to set you up and help you. I was sorry for you, and you knew it and traded upon my pity; I was shamed by you, and you knew that and traded upon my shame."

Lancaster hung his head; Joan laid her hand lightly on his, and after that he continued to return Lawson's gaze steadfastly.

"I went to you, Jim Lawson," he said, "because I had placed you in charge of the institute when I elected to head the other branch of the trust fund, the Avonmouth hospital. I had given you the charge here because you were——"

"Your illegitimate half-brother," said Lawson bluntly. "We are not mincing our words. Because you robbed me of my own birthright as your elder brother, by reason of the fact that my mother was not legally married to our father. Yes, go on."

"At last, Joan, I was broken down completely," continued Lancaster. "It was a monomania, that search of mine, as I came to understand afterward, a perverted pride that had eaten into my heart and left no place for other thoughts. But I did not become addicted to morphine until this man urged it upon me, under the guise of medical care. And even then I could have broken off the habit at any time, but I had no heart to, and it gave me relief from thoughts that tortured me."

"So they all think," said Lawson.

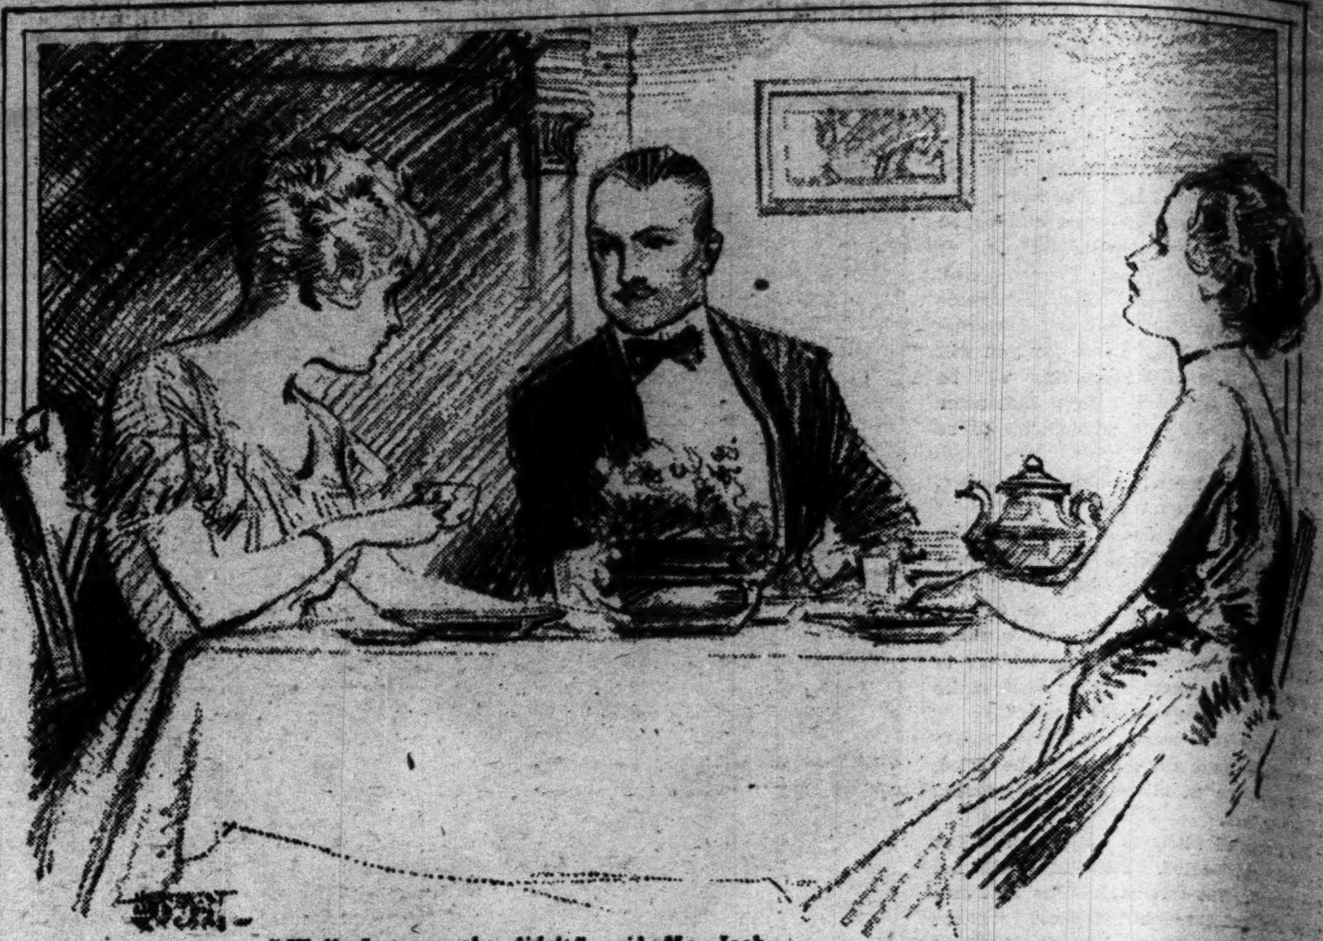
UNOFFERED SACRIFICES

by Marie Belden James

Her Role in the Triangle Was That of a Neglected Wife, But She Did Not Play It Long.



"Well, I guess she didn't," said Mr. Jack.

THIS story is about Jack Doyle. By nature and heredity he was the sort of man that no one would ever have written a story about—good tempered, shallow, sentimental, and susceptible. But Circumstances wrote him a play in which he simply couldn't dodge the limelight, and Environment cast him for the part of hero, regardless of his qualifications for it.

Environment, in Jack's case, consisted of two women, his wife and another one. His wife by herself would have furnished material for a great many stories; and the fact that she is only a minor character in this one is due to those ridiculous Circumstances, before mentioned, which always seem to arrange their plot and characters so inartistically.

She was a neglected wife, but she was not a typical one. No one ever saw the patient smile on her careworn face as she sat by the window waiting for the husband who did not come; neither did she turn aside to drop a tear whenever she chanced to see some happier woman hold up her lips for her husband's evening kiss.

Instead, she wore the prettiest clothes in town; she enjoyed her young life as deeply as the penetration of the oldest female inhabitant could penetrate; she laughed as though she meant it; and she was polite to the other woman.

The other woman was vanity. From her pretty arched forehead to her pretty arched instep—all was vanity. She had, perhaps, a little—a very little—intelligence; but even that was mixed and coated with vanity.

In fact, she had so much vanity that she had no pride at all. That was why, when Mrs. Doyle, who possessed much pride, invited her to dinner, she accepted; and then scarcely spoke to her hostess, so intent was she upon her host.

First, Mrs. Doyle thought Jack would tire of the girl. Second, she thought the girl would tire of Jack.

Third and last, she forced herself to stop thinking at all, which I think is one of the sanest and noblest things that a woman can do. A woman who keeps on thinking for any considerable time about herself, her husband, and the other woman usually ends by destroying the triangle in one of two ways—she either shoots one of the trio, leaving only two angles, or else she encourages the other man, making four angles.

There always is another man, who only needs encouragement to make him the other man.

But Mrs. Doyle did not do so. She only laughed through her heart-break until it seemed to her that those who cried must be happy.

August came, the month when happy people grow most reckless and miserable people most desperate. It was harder than ever for Mrs. Doyle to force herself not to think. To make sure that her self-control was not failing, she asked the other woman, whose name was Fantine, to dinner for the second time in a week.

When they sat at the table Mrs. Doyle was pale and her eyes were hard; but Fantine flushed and fluttered like a dainty pink rose.

"This heat wave," said Doyle, after the iced salmon, "is causing all kinds of horrors. I read an awful story in the evening paper."

"Tell about it. I just love horrors," lisped Fantine.

"Well," said Doyle, turning toward her and motioning the maid to place the uncarved roast before his wife, "a couple of months ago a man was badly hurt in an explosion. They thought he couldn't possibly live, and he would have died if it hadn't been for his wife.

"She gave her own skin to be grafted on his arm and she worked over him and tended him, hardly ever resting until he was out of danger. Today they brought him home and told him for the first time that he would be a cripple all the rest of his life. What did the man do, do you think?

"The minute he was left alone he scribbled a little note to his wife, saying that he couldn't stand it to be a crippled burden, and that he knew she would appreciate the sacrifice he was making for her. Then he went to the window, ten stories above the street, and jumped out. Of course, he was instantly killed."

"O, I admire his courage!" burst out Fantine. "Just think what a fine, noble, sensitive nature he must have had! He didn't wait to find himself a burden and to whine over it. He just ended it all, making happiness for himself and his wife."

"Happiness!" exclaimed Mrs. Doyle in such a low, agonized voice that her husband half turned toward her.

"O, I could love a man who would do that!" Fantine was going on; but Mrs. Doyle, who had recovered herself, put in:

"After he had proved that he would do it there wouldn't be much left to love."

"That wouldn't make any difference," said the other woman; "I should worship his memory. The nobility of it! And the pride of it! A man who would not live a cripple!"

"I can appreciate that part all right," said Jack. "Most any man would rather die than live a cripple. But it was pretty tough on the girl."

"What girl?" asked Fantine blankly.

"Why, his wife," returned Jack.

"O, his wife!" Fantine laughed. "You know, I never can think of a wife as a girl. Well, I really believe it was kinder to her, and I guess she thought so, too, when she thought about it."

"Well, I guess she didn't," said Mrs. Jack suddenly, a flush rising to her face as she spoke. "He probably broke her heart in the cruelest, meanest, most cowardly way possible. If he'd been anything higher than a beast he wouldn't have gone and left her like that after she'd suffered and worked so unremittingly for him.

"He must have been an utter idiot not to see that just the sound of his voice, no matter how hoarse and feeble, was dearer to her than the sweetest music ever played; that she loved the sight of his face, however disfigured, better than the finest, most perfect sculpture. She—she—why, can't you see?—she loved him."

Her voice almost broke on the last words, and she stopped. It was to her as though she had told her secret to one who would rejoice at her sorrow.

But Fantine had scarcely listened. She was intent on Jack's face, which had lighted and was turning more and more toward his wife—away from her. That was the one thing the other woman could not endure.

"O, don't! You make me ill," she uttered in a low cry, and, leaning back, closed her eyes. In a moment Jack was by her side. His wife produced smelling salts perfunctorily.

"There," said Jack reproachfully to his wife, as he bathed the forehead of the other woman, "you shouldn't have introduced a subject like that. She is such a sensitive child."

Mrs. Doyle returned to her seat and eyed the two from afar.

"I think I shall think tonight," she said out loud; but Fantine was reviving, and no one heard except the maid, who was clearing the table.

It was late and dark when Jack took Fantine home. The way to her house was not short, but they walked "because there was a moon."

"Yes, there is a moon," said Mrs. Doyle, after the door had closed, "and there are lunatics—wretched, raving lunatics. But whether I am mad—or they—or both——"

Having determined to think, she was reckless.

When Jack left Fantine's house it was later and darker than it had been when they went there. He chose to walk home by the railroad track because he, too, had things he wanted to think over, and the lonely, mechanical operation of stepping from tie to tie helped him the better to cogitate.

He believed he was meditating deeply; but in reality he thought a little, smoked a good deal, and kept his ears open for the sound of a locomotive whistle.

Then, in turning to give a last look at the lights in Fantine's house, he twisted his foot and caught it in the track.

Under the circumstances he was in something of a fix. He couldn't get his foot out and he couldn't get his shoe off. He looked round for a house from which aid might come, but none seemed to be near. Then he stood still and listened.

It was too quiet. Never before in the man's life had he been in so still a place. Everything seemed to have stopped to watch him. He began to fear sound—sound of any kind.

He crouched, perfectly rigid, lest his moving startle the quietness. He was listening for something in the distance—the rumbling noise of a train. For a train would come—of course it would. It would come and run over him and kill him.

So far he had thought slowly; but now a crash-smash of ideas came altogether—his dead body—men finding it—carrying it home—ringing the bell—his wife's face—the undertaker—the funeral—his relatives—chicken sandwiches and wine—graveyard—headstone—inscription—and then, dragging after the rest—Fantine.

Then he thought of the man in the evening paper who jumped out of the tenth story window rather than be a cripple, and with that thought came a sickening dread. Suppose the cowcatcher of the train should toss him to one side, so that only the imprisoned foot were cut off, leaving him a—a cripple for life.

No more tramps into the country—no more walks home with Fantine—no more anything but confinement—watching—care—every one grown tired of him. Fantine grown tired of him—hadn't she said that a crippled man did right to kill himself?

Well, he could easily avoid all that. He would lie down, quite flat and still, straight across the tracks, and the opposite wheels of the engine would cut off symmetrically at the same moment his feet and his head. He lay down and arranged himself beautifully—and then in the distance he heard the rumble of an approaching train.

It was the "limited," of course. He knew it must be that long line of lighted cars which flashed by every night and was scheduled as the "limited." And he was glad, for it was a good, respectable train.

His wife had said so the time they went to Niagara Falls. That was when they were first married—it had been a nice trip—he forgot the "limited" in thinking of it.

The rumbling of the train came nearer, and his thoughts went faster and faster. He remembered incidents of his life one after another until his mind was racing along with the events of that very evening, and he was repeating the conversation they had had at the table.

What was that his wife had said? Why, she would love him even if he were crippled, she would take care of him. If he let that train kill him he would be breaking her heart in the cruelest, meanest, most cowardly way possible. And—but, no—he wasn't the man to do that.

He scrambled up and flung himself violently off the track. There was a sound of tearing shoe leather, and he pitched down the bank ten feet, into the long, damp swamp grass.

He lay there a minute. Then he sat up. The "limited," which had really made a great deal of noise for a handcar, had stopped, and the belated track levelers who had been running it were peering over the bank.

"She—she—why, can't you see she loved him?" asked Doyle, blinking up at them.

Then he stood up, picked up his hat, inspected his torn shoe amid a chorus of maledictions from the Italian, lighted his pipe, and walked quietly away.

He trudged home, limping, and found his wife.

"Honey girl," he said, "I'm a low down, dirty, boiled lobster, but I'll be white after this."

To which she replied with her head and her lips where they belonged, and a sob and a laugh strangely mixed in her voice: "Boy, dear boy, lobsters are never white; so you can't be a lobster."

She—but, of course, you can see—she loved him.

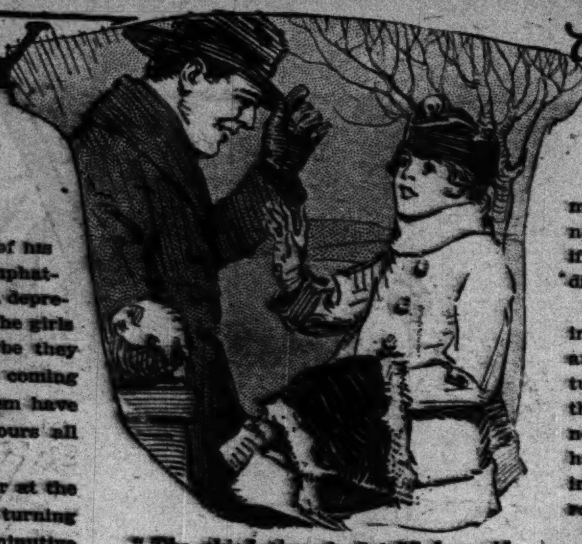
The FATALITY

By Mabel McElliot

About An Ingenue and a Youth Who Had a Way with Women



"The third time is fatal," he said.

"WHAT'S all the festivity?" asked Hally Lou, indicating with her muff the high school building, ablaze with light. The juvenile lead, a lean youth with blue jewels for eyes, was heedfully lighting a last precious cigaret in the shelter of the stage door and did not reply, so with a brief "Good night" she scrambled up the area way and went on alone.

There was an undoubted air of festival about the stark gray building across the road. A real orchestra (trust her practiced ear) was pounding out the latest thing in fox trots, and there were undulating shadows on the bright windows. Hally Lou, plowing through drifts in carriage boots which she had dragged on over the silver slippers she wore in the last act, was possessed of a desire to be one of the youthful crowd within. She had not danced since way last August, when the Home Drama club had given her a farewell party and everybody had wrung her hand and felicitated her on the splendid chance the city manager offered. Then she had been green and gauche. Now, behold, she was ingenue of the Franklin Stock company, full fledged and sure of herself.

But—and here was the rift in the lute—Hally Lou was lonely. She knew not a soul in the exclusive little suburb except three high school girls who bade her good morning occasionally and waited for her after the matinée. It had not occurred to them to ask her to their blithe little party, however, and Hally Lou felt suddenly shut out of it all, forgetting her brief triumphs—that evening's applause and the line or two of praise in one of the big dailies. She wanted to dance—to skip about—and be wholly, irresponsibly gay.

"Hel-lo!" said the thing she careened into, sweeping around the corner with a fresh gust of snow. Hally Lou looked up, pink and flustered, at a muffled bronze giant in a greatcoat, who seemed vastly amused when she begged his pardon with proper dignity and regret. She could have sworn he was laughing at her as he went on down the street, after a magnificent bow and a flourish of his hat; and perhaps it was the recollection of the contretemps that made her slam the drug store door with unnecessary vigor, so that the tall boy in the white jacket flew out of his cubby hole with a startled air, to be reassured by the vision of Hally Lou over the peppermint jars. He was a nice boy, who, in his own words, worked his old head off at "trig." when he was not doling out cough drops and telephone checks to the populace of North Acton.

"They're dancing over at the Daniel Webster, I see," observed Hally Lou as he made a workmanlike package of her special cold cream and clicked the spandy new cash register open and shut in a flash. The drug store boy beamed!

"Yes. It's the Tau Phi's tonight, you know," he explained. "I'm going over as soon as I get through. Quarter to 11 there, isn't it?" craning his neck for a view of the clock. The boy had a happy thought.

"That's a great show you have on this week, Miss Charrington," he said. "We went Tuesday night, my sister and I. She's mad to meet you."

Hally Lou glowed and flicked her lids downward in a way she had. "I should love to—any time," she said.

"She's dancing tonight," the boy went on eagerly. "I wonder if you—would you like to go over with me? Say, she'd think it simply ripping if I should trot you along. Will you—are you tired?"

Hally Lou was not. "I thought I was about fifteen minutes ago in my dressing room," she laughed. "So much that—look!" and she permitted him a glimpse of black and silver, her last act frock in "The Firefly." "I was too lazy to change," she told him, "and, besides, there was a tiny rip in the train and I thought I'd just wear it home and mend it. Am I too gay for your party?"

The Oram boy was struggling out of his store coat. "No, ma'am," he said emphatically. "Informal, of course," with a deprecating wave at his blue serge, "but the girls are always pretty toppy. And maybe they won't think it simply great—your coming in offhand like this! Why, half of 'em have been raving about this dress of yours all week!"

Hally Lou laughed, fluffing her hair at the soda fountain mirror. The boy was turning out lights and pushing back diminutive tables. "Ready?" he asked. Down Clifton street came the faint "tum-te-tum" of a one-step.

"You see," said the Oram boy, skillfully piloting her through the crowd at the door, "you're not a scrap too gay in this mob. Whew, look at that peacock!" as a blue and gold vision flashed by. Hally Lou glanced at her glittering draperies with satisfaction, looping the offending train over a small wrist. "It's a perfectly lovely party," she told him, nodding to two shy girls in white who adored her from afar. "Is this your sister?" as a slim young thing, obviously amazed at Francis' proprietorship of the Miss Charrington, bore down upon them.

"It was nice of you to come," she cried for the third time, wondering how "old Frank" had managed it. "We're dancing till 1. of course, but Alice wants us to ride home with them and if you will let us drop you off?"

Hally Lou signified her delight as the music began again and the Oram boy carried her off triumphantly. He danced very well, she thought, blissfully treading the intricate measures. She was feeling—what was that she had thought before?—"wholly, irresponsibly gay——"

Ah, it was the bronze giant again, shorn of disfiguring cap and muffler, who extricated her from the confusion and restored her to her partner. "Th-that's the second time I've bumped into you tonight," mourned Hally Lou, hoping she was not as peony red as she felt.

"My fault," he replied, admiring, apparently, the color of peonies. And then they were introduced, and she tripped down the long room with his pleasant voice in her ears. "Lancers!" Why, that must be Edward Lancers of the university. He had just lately returned from Oxford, she knew, and North Acton was proud of his scholarship. Where—O, she knew now where she had seen him before! He had been alone in the first box on Friday night. "He must think me terribly stupid," she sighed.

But she was not sorry to find he was to ride the short way with them in Alice Gore's motor, and when they stopped, amid much suppressed laughter, Lancers forestalled the Oram boy and handed her out like a precious bit of porcelain.

"I insist on finding the truant keyhole," he said to her soft note of protest. Why, she was not afraid! There was absolutely no need of his coming up the steps. "Don't get in my way again, child," he said in that curiously musical voice. "The third time is fatal, you know."

"Good night," said Hally Lou, this time to listening ears. And then, pattering noiselessly up to her warm room, "Fatal—how silly!" And, kicking off the silver slippers, "Child, indeed!" I'll take good care not to collide with him again," she announced vindictively to the darkness.

"I haven't the time, really!" she said to Callista Oram a week later, holding up the white satin boot she was liberally plastering with gilt paint. "What with costumes and rehearsals and everything!" She waved the brush embracingly.

"It's going to be an awfully nice tea," regretted Callista, "and you know how we'd love to have you; but of course——"

"Sorry," murmured Hally Lou, dabbing artistically at the buttons. "I've got to wear these things tonight, and my frock hasn't put in an appearance. "O," as a messenger clattered in, "here it is now! Do you want to see it?" untying the string and shaking out the rosy tulle.

"It's charming," said the younger girl, lingering, and knowing she ought to go. "I should love to see you tonight. The first is so exciting, I think. But Frank has season tickets for Tuesdays, you know. By the way," she came back to add, "I ran around through the theater and Mr. Lancers was at the box office getting tickets. You remember him, don't you?"

Hally Lou did, but looked vague. "Now, I really must fly," said Callista, panic stricken after a glance at her wrist. "It is nice of you to let me come at all. I'm such a pest."

"Wish me luck for tonight," called Hally Lou down the steep iron stair. "O, the best of luck, of course," came back the clear soprano; "but then, you never need good wishes. You are always darling."

Hally Lou, if she had time to think in the customary Monday night flurry, might have wondered at the curious aptness of the bouquet the youngest usher thrust over the footlights.

It was of tea roses—tight, fragrant buds—with a single crimson one in the center. There was no card, but she speculated cannily as she made herself grotesque with cold cream after the performance. Callista (little monkey) had babbled about the rose colored frock to Mr. Lancers. No one else could possibly have sent them. Cuddling the flowers against her substantial ulster as she passed out, she decided she was sorry to have been away when he called. He was nice, after all.

The ancient doorman chaffed her ponderously on her "bokay." "You were fine tonight, Missy; just fine. I was out front."

"Did you like it? Thank you," she cried, pausing under the arc light to frown suddenly at the man who came up to her with an ingratiating "Good evening." This chap McArthur was getting to be somewhat of a nuisance, she thought.

"Are you walking home, Miss Charrington?" (Idiot, of course she was walking. Did he suppose she'd wings?) She resigned herself to boredom as he fell into step beside her. A sort of theatrical free lance who occasionally had a minor part in the company, he insisted on fastening his will-o-th'-wisp affections on Hally Lou.

"Pretty child in that rosy dress," he ventured, attempting to take her arm. Hally Lou wrenched away. This was intolerable! They were in front of the theater now and she saw her chance of escape.

"How d'ye do, Mr. Lancers," she called to the tall shadow at the entrance. "Were you waiting long?" and without giving him time to reply she ran on to McArthur, "Good by! Nice of you to see me this far."

"Not at all—only—he must have been rather awful for you to take refuge in me when you've avoided me so consistently all week."

"O, but I have been busy," appealingly. "Please—you really don't need to come any further. He's gone now, and it's out of your way——" Her objections trailed into silence as Lancers strode along, swinging his stick.

"You know, it's appalling, the way you run about alone at all hours," he began, "especially when you will flaunt that expensive looking thing," touching the bag of gold mesh that glimmered at her side.

"O, that!" with disdain. "There's nothing in it but a lip stick and a handkerchief."

"No matter. I hate to think of your going about unprotected. That's why I waited. You'd eluded me so often that I'd given up hope."

"You were waiting, then," she cried, and stopped. "Well, there's no help for it," carelessly. "It's all in the day's work, and I'm not afraid."

"That's just exactly it," with heat. "Foolhardy nonsense! I'm sure I don't know what your people can be thinking of," and he looked at her curiously. "You're only a child," he said.

Hally Lou stood stock still at the curb. "I'm not," she defied in her sweet carrying voice. "I'm not a child at all. And as for my people (she was close to tears), well, I'm not going to talk to you about them. And if you'd planned to lecture me I'm sorry to disappoint you. Good night—I'm tired."

Frequent rehearsals of this dreadful scene in the small hours caused her to oversleep and fumble drowsily about for the mail Clara tucked under her pillow. There were two thin statements from her modiste, a brief note from home, and a fourth, in unfamiliar handwriting. She opened it with languid interest. A scant three lines, but they roused her:

"You do need protection. I want you to marry me. Will you? Faithfully,

"EDWARD LANCERS."

"Well, of all the——" she flared, pattering out of bed and reaching for note paper. "Of all the impudence!"

She answered in tall graceful script:

"No. Thank you.

"SARAH LOUISE CHARRINGTON."

And dispatched the willing Clara to the postoffice in hot haste. "For I shouldn't be able to get through rehearsal with that on my mind," she confided to the chocolate pot, dismissing the incident, or pretending to.

She went to Callista's tea, after all, wearing a black hat that dashed recklessly up on one side like the Laughing Cavalier's. She had to beg off from rehearsal to do it, but back in her mind was a slinking notion that some one (an unmentionable some one who hadn't bothered to find out whether she were alive or no for over a week) might be there. Not that she expected to hear from him, she declared, stabbing the cavalier hat with a silver pin, but he might have called if he had cared in the least.

Callista handed her about with a pridefully possessive air, and Hally Lou found herself wedged between the Greek professor's wife and a thoughtful young man who lost no time in inquiring her opinion of the modern drama. Meanwhile her thoughts went a-roving, and she discovered, with a giddy little thrill, that Lancers was holding forth to an interested group in a far corner. She came back, a trifle wild eyed, to earth and the fact that Mrs. Appleton was talking about him. "Everybody likes Edward," she said with a gratuitous beam.

Hally Lou assumed what she hoped was a mildly disinterested air. "The broadest and most chivalrous of men," the older woman said. "His sisters adore him. You know them, I suppose, Miss Charrington. Effie's teaching economics here, and Winifred is a physician at Lynn. They'll be losing a lot when Edward marries, if he ever does. And then it will be some girl who'll be treated as if she were made of gossamer silk, I suppose." And remembering her own Lucius, who was far too absent minded to assist her down the car steps, she sighed a little.

This gossamer young person, whoever or wherever she might be, gave Hally Lou a sudden, fierce pang of jealousy. She had thought him unreasonable, narrow—had been furious with him for treating so lightly her beloved career. Now her defiant little speech of a week before sounded childish and absurd.

"I really must go—really," she said, in a panic lest he catch sight of her across the rather dim room. And murmuring something faint and feeble about having to hurry away, she made her adieux.

Outdoors she was glad of the friendly twilight creeping over Clifton street and of the brisk wind that cooled her flushed cheeks. Turning down at her corner, she remembered some belated purchases and retraced her steps. But as she was flying out of the high school bakery, laden with a precious bag of eclairs, a muff, and a bottle of milk she ran directly into the object of her ire. He rescued the milk and smiled brazenly.

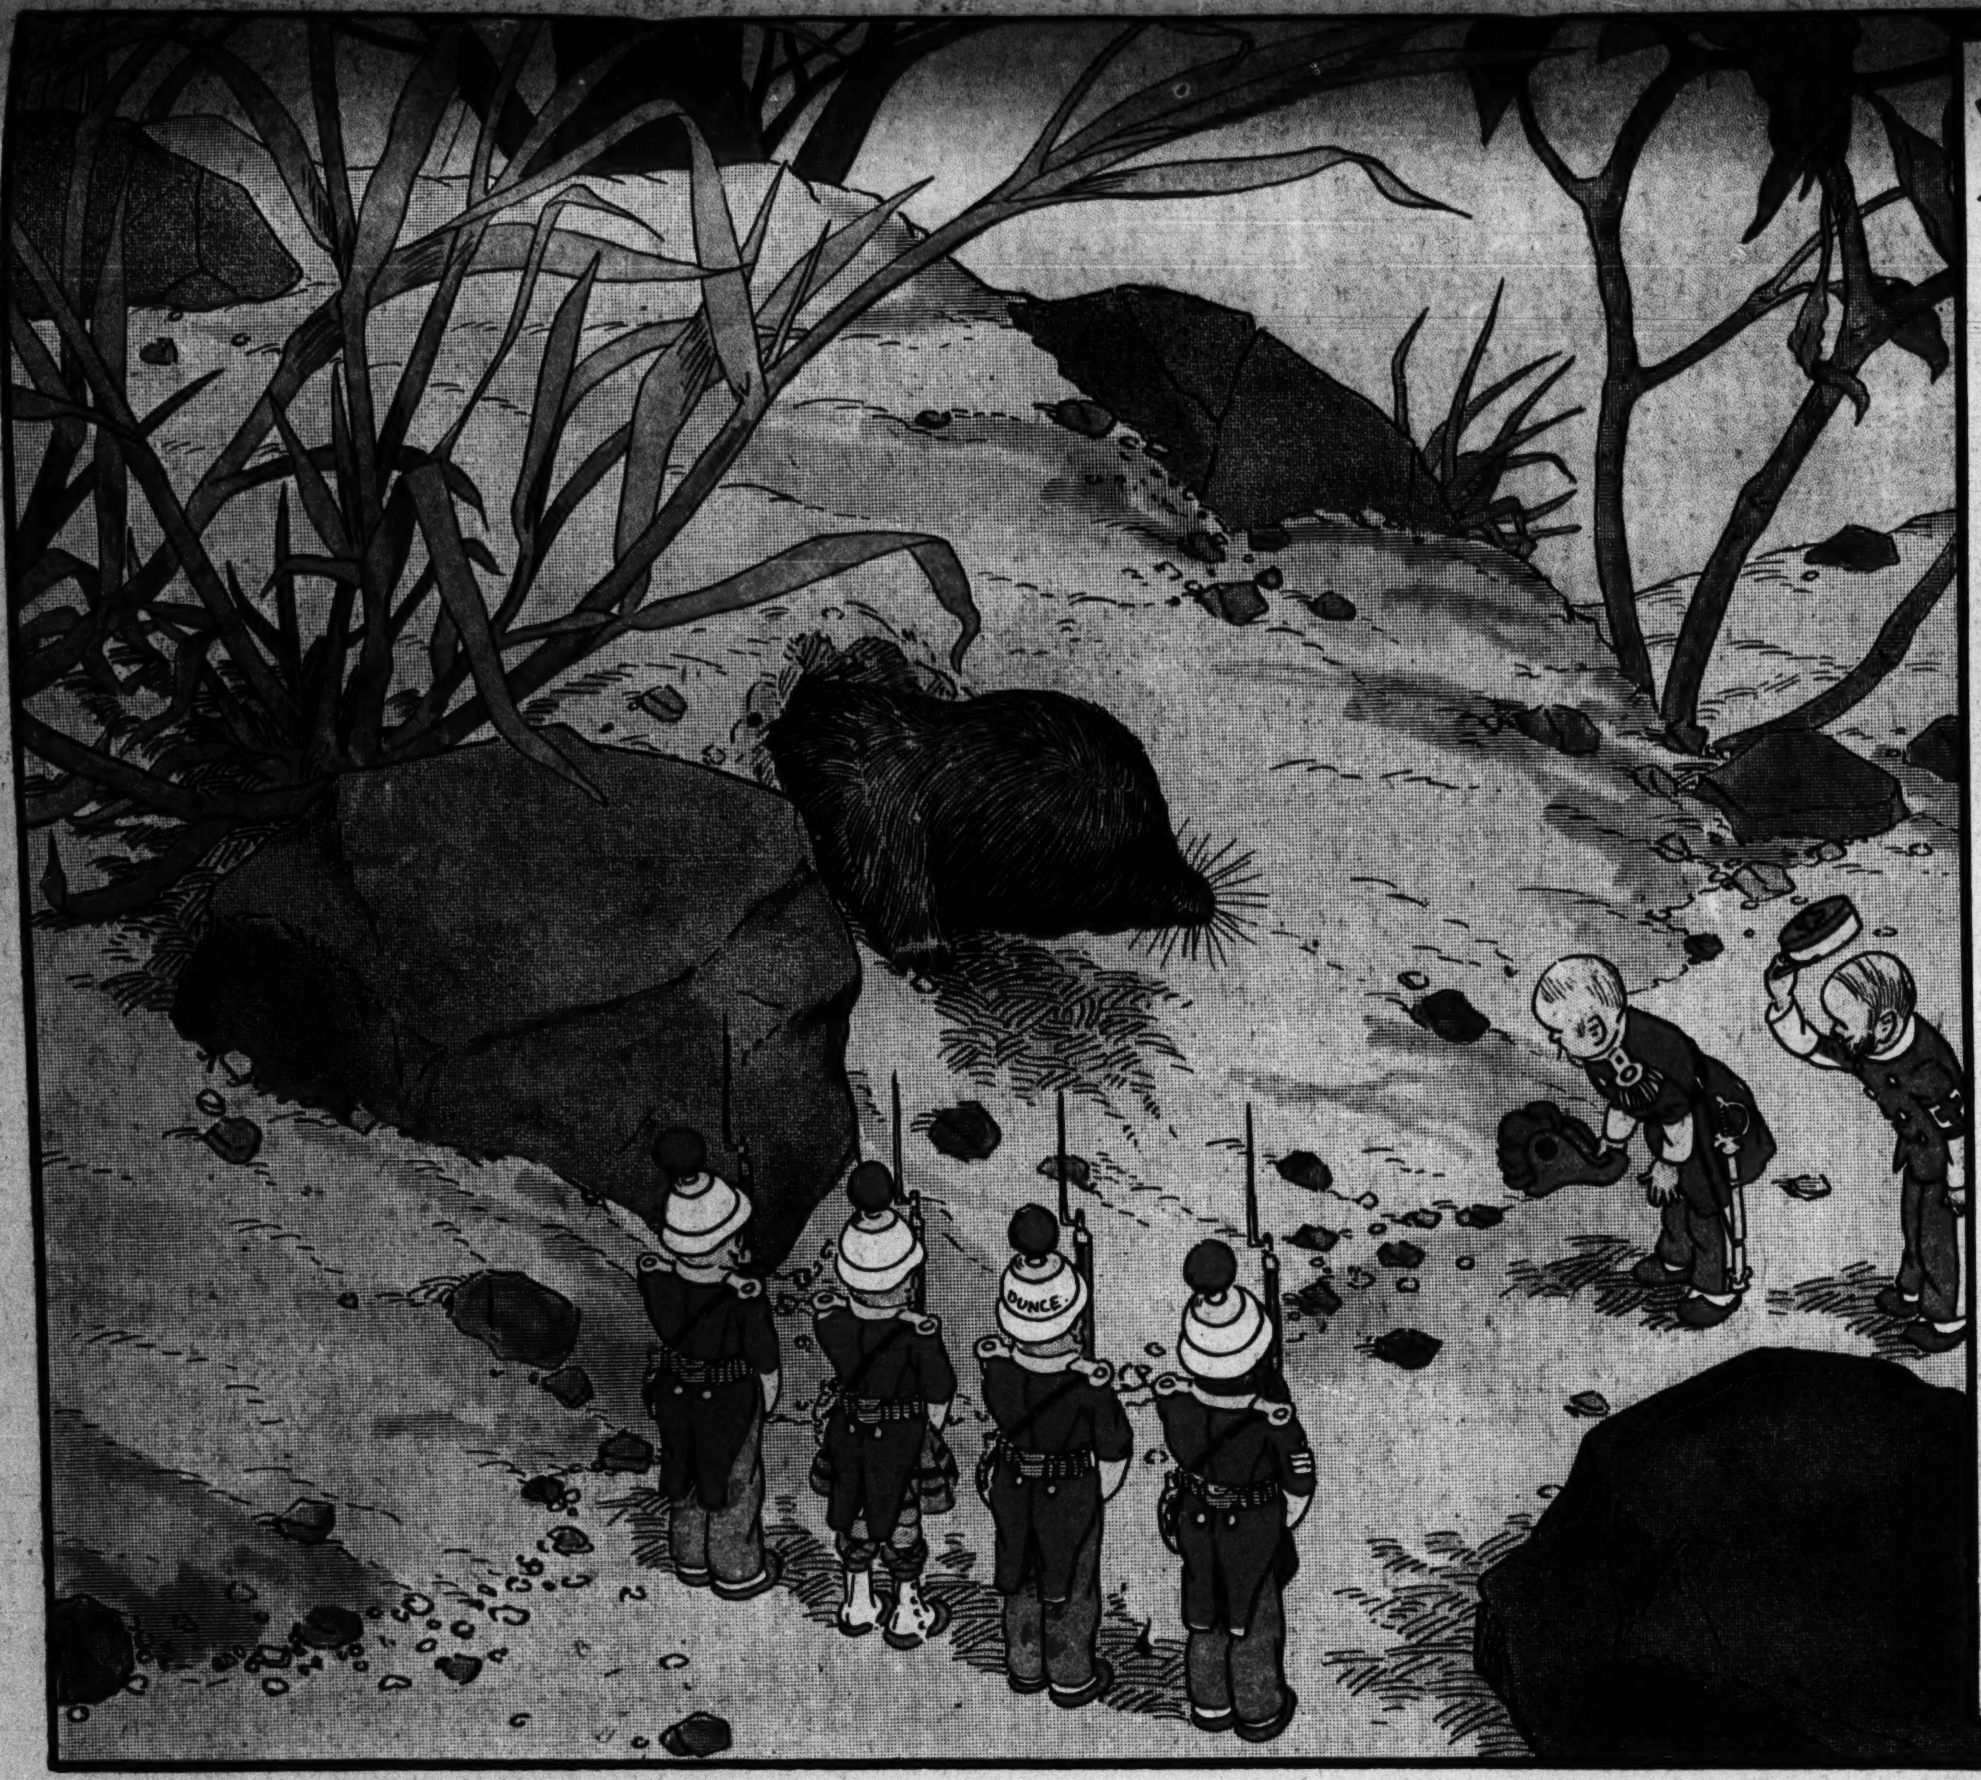
"The third time is fatal," he said. "Do you remember?"

Hally Lou bobbed along silently, hoping she hadn't looked too glad. "I had your note just at noon," he continued. "I had to rush away, you see, and my mail wasn't forwarded."

"O, did you, really?" contributed Hally Lou, with admirable calm, considering that her heart was thumping furiously.

"Please don't be cross, sweetheart," he begged, "and please don't run away as you did just now." Then, taking possession with difficulty of a cold little hand, "You are my sweetheart, aren't you?"

And after a bit Hally Lou admitted it.



THE TEENIE WEENIES.

THE GENERAL HIRES A FAMOUS ENGINEER.

BY WM. DONAHEY.

THE wild men had built a sort of fort across the only road which led into the Sabo village where the Lady of Fashion and the Poet were held captive. The trees and grass on either side of the narrow road were so thick that no Teenie Weenie could have possibly made his way through.

The General studied the map of the wild men's island which the Turk had drawn in the hope that he could figure out a way to attack the Sabos without storming their fort. In storming the fort, the General felt sure that many of his soldiers would be killed and he wished to rout the enemy with as little loss of life as possible.

"I have it! I have it!" exclaimed the General one morning as he sat studying the tiny map. "We can hire a mole to tunnel under the wild men's fort and then we can blow it up with a firecracker."

"Bully!" shouted the Old Soldier. "And before they get over the surprise of the explosion we can charge through the destroyed fort into the village."

"That's the idea," smiled the General. "We'll go over tomorrow and engage the old mole who lives on the other side of the river."

"Moles are great engineers," said the Doctor, "and what they don't know about underground digging isn't worth knowing."

The next day the General and the Doctor with an escort of four soldiers set out on the journey to the mole's home.

"S-s-say, what is a m-m-mole anyhow?" asked the Dunce as the little party crossed the river on the army raft.

"A mole? Why, a mole—let's see, a mole—why a mole is a mole," answered Gogo.

"I'll tell you what a mole is like," laughed the Doctor, who had overheard the Dunce's question. "A mole is an animal about the size of a rat and he lives under the ground. He has very small eyes and ears, and he very seldom comes out in the day time, for it is pretty hard for him to see in the bright sun light. He has very short and powerful legs with which he can dig very fast. He lives on bugs and young frogs and he is usually very gruff and bad tempered."

When the raft landed on the other side of the river the General led the little party for some distance over very rough ground to a small hole in the side of a steep bank.

"Dress up in line men!" commanded the General, "and when Mr. Mole comes to the door of his house I want you all to present arms, for we will have to use the greatest diplomacy in order to engage this fellow."

The General stepped up near the bank and called loudly several times into the hole and presently a long hairy nose appeared in the opening.

"Well, what do you mean by awakening honest people out of a sound sleep?" growled the mole. "What is it, what do you want?"

"I beg your pardon," said the General as he lifted his hat and made a low bow; "I'm awfully sorry I disturbed your rest, but having heard of your reputation as an engineer I have come to beg your services for the Teenie Weenie army. We want to engage you to dig a trench for us."

"I'll work for four young green frogs a day and not a frog less," snapped the mole.

"That's satisfactory," said the General. "When shall we expect you to start the work?"

"Four o'clock tomorrow morning."

"Shall we send the raft for you, sir?" asked the General.

"No!" snapped the mole, "I can swim;" and he backed into his hole while the General ordered the troops to march for the raft.

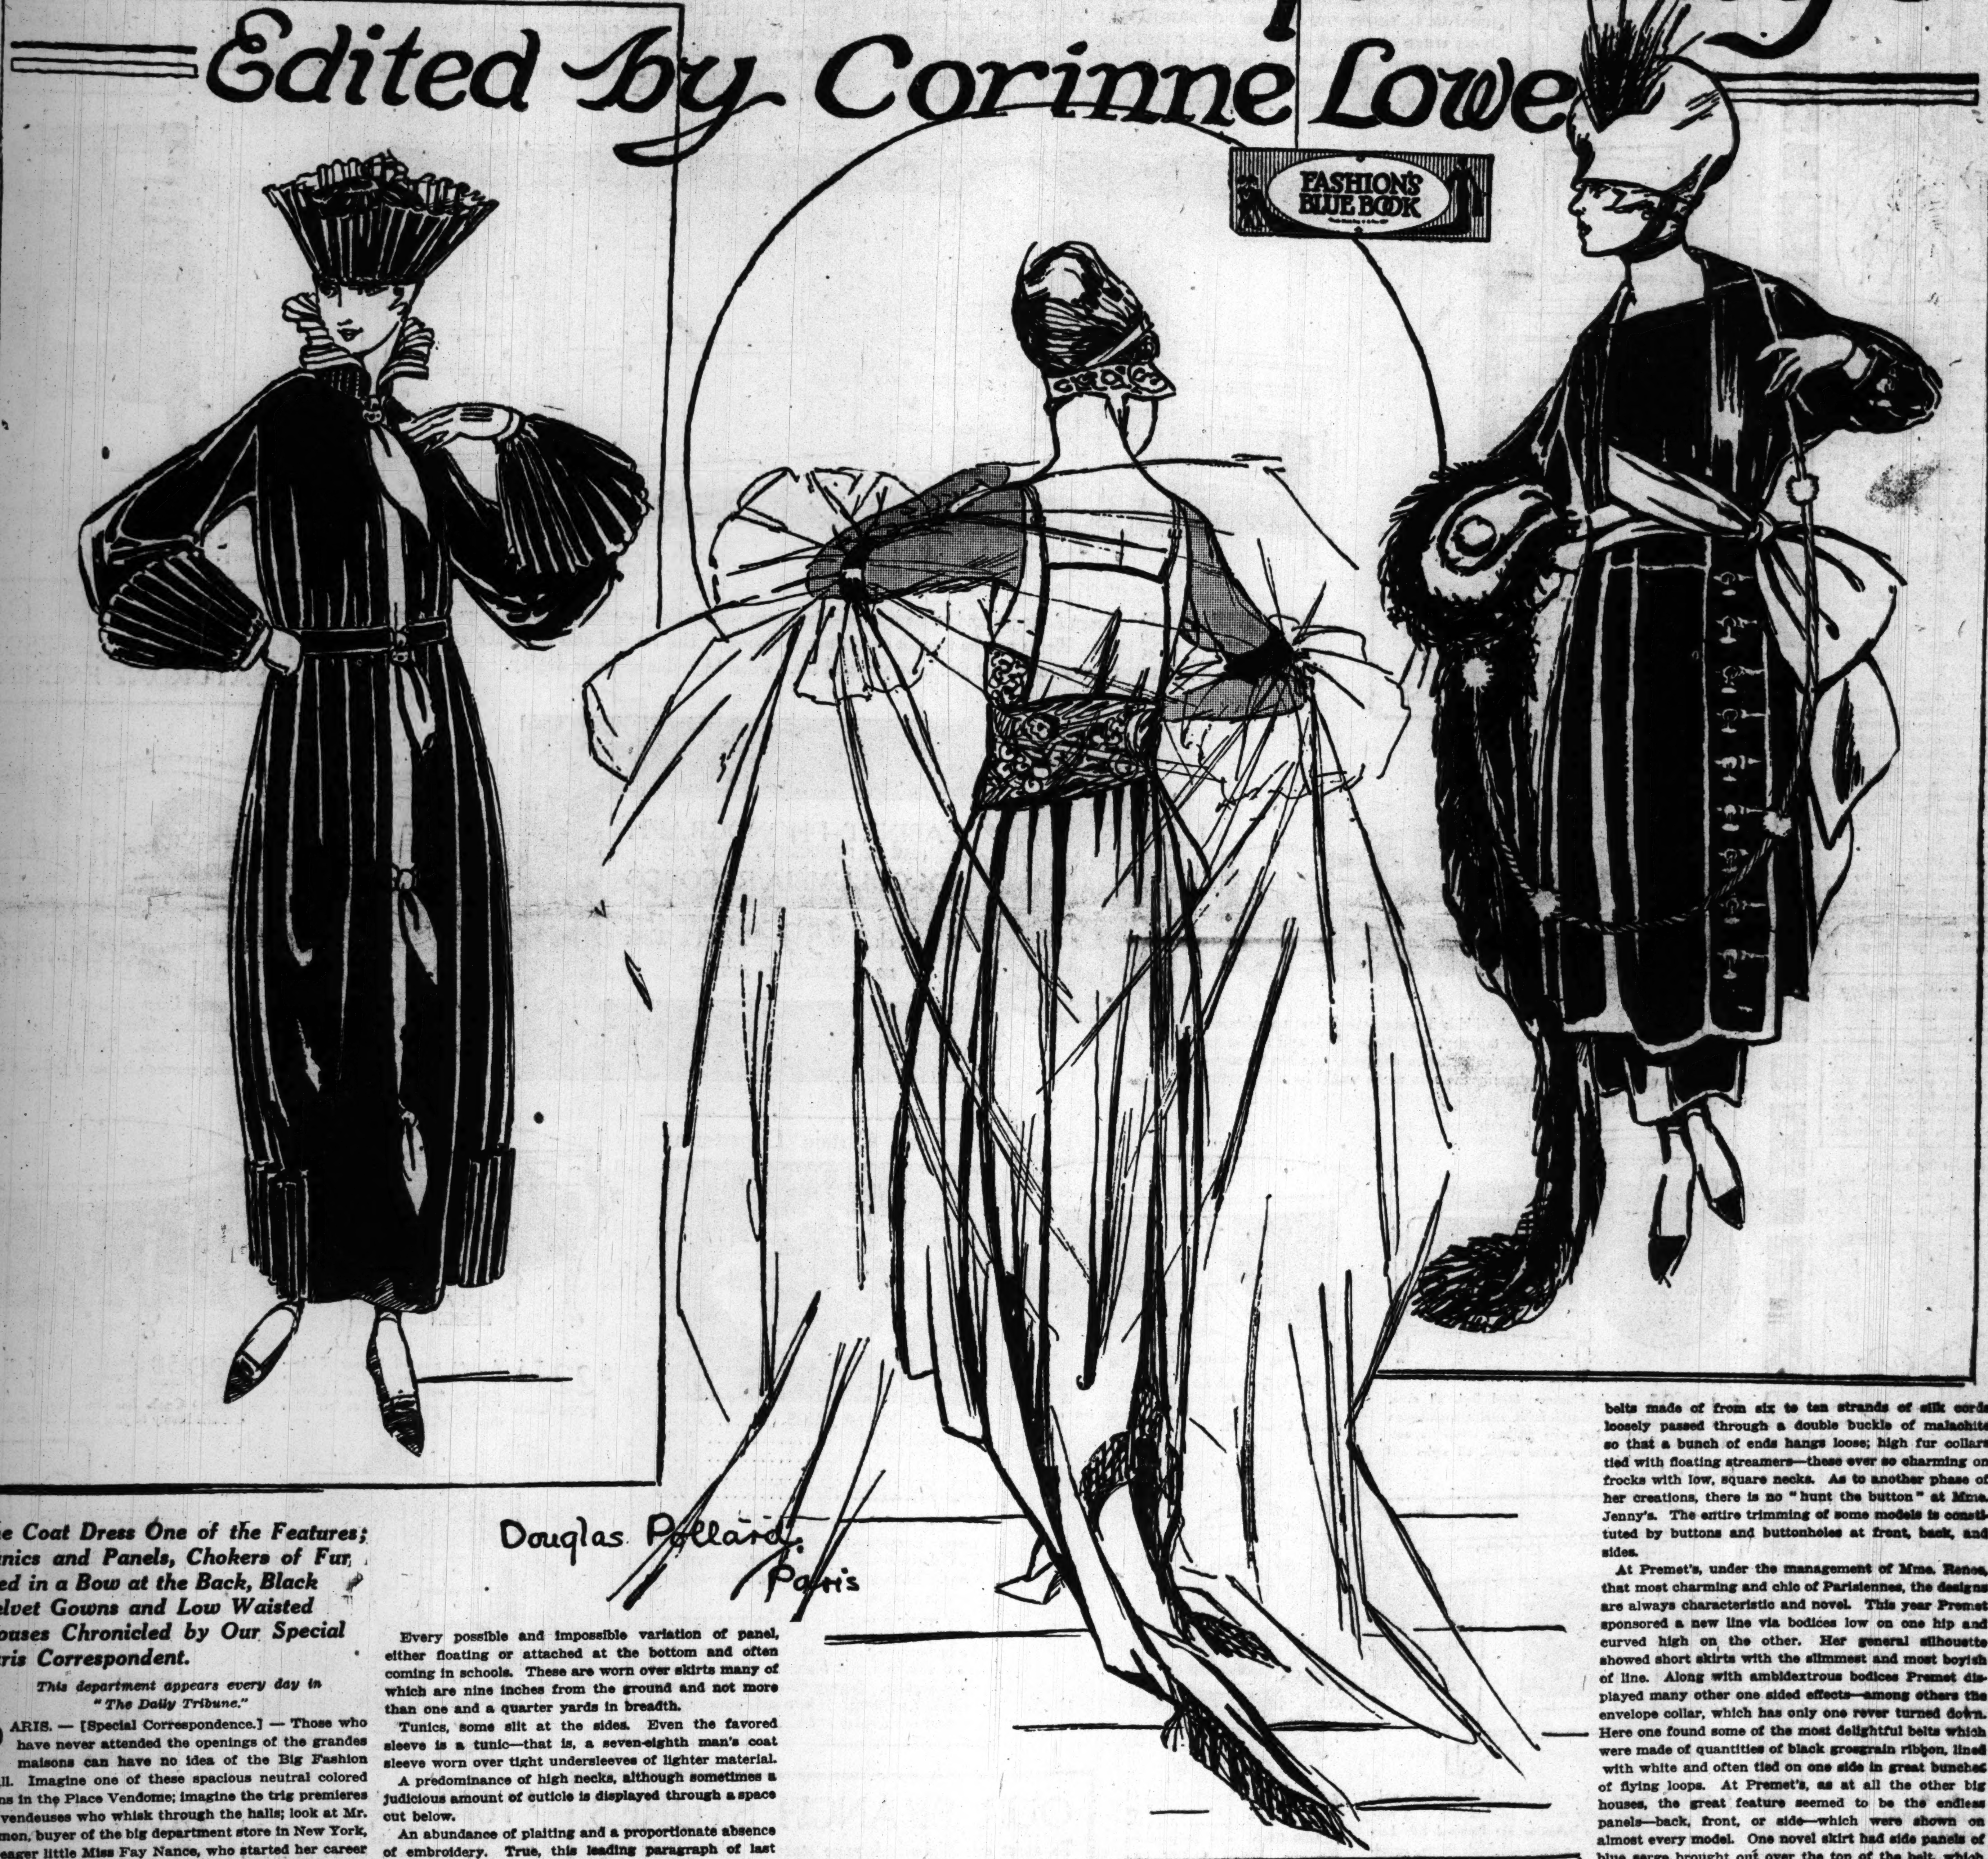
FASHION'S BLUE BOOK



BACK to the times of the Tudors and Stuarts Lanvin whisks us in "Moliere," one of the most stunning of her period frocks. This is of corbeau blue Lyons velvet with fluted velvet collar, cuffs, and skirt trimming. Moroccan crepe, the new heavy surface Georgette, is used for the tiny vest which extends below the knees. This is of white and is amusingly held together by ends of cardinal purple charmeuse, each tag of which is knotted through a carved ivory ball Undersleeves and collar lining are of this same purple charmeuse, and with it Lanvin has designed the lovely fluted hat which may be pulled into lines becoming to the wearer.

2. A Worth queenly evening gown which he calls "Jardin Persan." This model of oyster white satin with one sided belt and front of corsage, carried out in a Persian design of green and white and gold, has the long sleeves which Worth is favoring for evening gowns. These are of green mousseline de sòie and are fastened to the bodice by white, green and gold bands. The edge of the draped skirt with its double train is fringed with the same colors. The scarf worn with this is an endless length of black tulle passed through armholes of gold tissue before trailing into these graceful Madonna sleeves.

3. Premet's "Rigadin" is of that now rare and costly material, blue serge. It has an irregular sash of mole satin and the same material is used for the under sleeves and the tightest of tight under skirts. Down one side are ribbons and embroidery of Hindoo design in gold. The collar is sailor shape in back. With this is worn one of the smart black and white hats—this of snowy duvetyn with panache of burnt pheasant in black and white..

The Coat Dress One of the Features; Tunics and Panels, Chokers of Fur, Tied in a Bow at the Back, Black Velvet Gowns and Low Waisted Blouses Chronicled by Our Special Paris Correspondent.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

PARIS. — [Special Correspondence.] — Those who have never attended the openings of the grandes maisons can have no idea of the Big Fashion Thrill. Imagine one of these spacious neutral colored salons in the Place Vendome; imagine the trig premieres and vendeuses who whisk through the halls; look at Mr. Solomon, buyer of the big department store in New York, and eager little Miss Fay Nance, who started her career as stock girl in the shop and who, as head of the ready to wear department of her store, has been going to these Paris openings for the last twelve years.

Mr. Solomon and Miss Fay Nance, together with all the other American buyers, are pressing forward on their noble antique chairs. Their eyes are already thrilling with expectation. No wonder! From these hundreds of models which are displayed at each maison they must select a few which will "take" with the American public. They must not "plunge" on a wrong style. They must please Mrs. Brown of Oshkosh and Mrs. Smith of Salt Lake City.

As the hour approaches 2:30 the buzz of the American buyers deepens. Then, at a movement from one of the vendeuses, there is a sudden hush. A beautiful mannequin appears in the doorway. Smiling, ingratiating, infinitely chic, she is followed by other mannequins, and "the line," as they call it, has commenced. The winter silhouette is being revealed and Mr. Solomon's left eye crosses his right eye in an effort to get there first.

And what did the fashion bells ring out this year? And what—O, what!—did they ring in? The reporter's pencil fairly leaps to its service, and we record breathlessly:

Every possible and impossible variation of panel, either floating or attached at the bottom and often coming in schools. These are worn over skirts many of which are nine inches from the ground and not more than one and a quarter yards in breadth.

Tunics, some slit at the sides. Even the favored sleeve is a tunic—that is, a seven-eighth man's coat sleeve worn over tight undersleeves of lighter material.

An abundance of plaiting and a proportionate absence of embroidery. True, this leading paragraph of last season's frocks and suits is still seen, but much less hysteric is its application. When it does appear it is invariably oriental in design.

As to materials, the new cloths, as was predicted, have a hairy surface. Great quantities of velvet and satin are used and the black velvet gown is seen everywhere. By the way, there is a new fabric available for these velvet gowns. This is Moroccan crêpe—please commit that name—and it is in reality nothing but a heavy surface Georgette crêpe. This or white satin is combined widely with the ubiquitous velvet gown.

Jersey still holds its place; and among afternoon and evening gowns one finds quantities of self-embroidered black taffetas and silk embroidered net. Favorite color combinations are navy velvet and deep purple Ottoman silk, sand cloth and ruby Moroccan crêpe, black velvet and imperial purple. These combinations, together with much mole color, wood crown, and navy blue, lead the fashion color program.

Jenny was the most important house to show, and here was launched the new narrow skirt. Mme. Jenny's big novelty was her "coatdress" which this year replaced the robe chemise launched by her several seasons ago. This costume consists of the simplest kind of frock with the simplest kind of bodice over which pulls down the slip-over coat. This is generally of knee-length—often longer—and is extremely chic over the short narrow skirt. One of the smartest of such models occurred in blue serge with collar and band on the front edge of the coat only, of black horizontal bugles. As a rule, the trimming of these coat dresses—or suit dresses, as they are sometimes called—is of fur, but it is significant that Jenny uses much less of this than she did last year.

Among noteworthy details at the maison Jenny were belts made of from six to ten strands of silk cords loosely passed through a double buckle of malachite so that a bunch of ends hangs loose; high fur collars tied with floating streamers—these ever so charming on frocks with low, square necks. As to another phase of her creations, there is no "hunt the button" at Mme. Jenny's. The entire trimming of some models is constituted by buttons and buttonholes at front, back, and sides.

At Premet's, under the management of Mme. Renee, that most charming and chic of Parisiennes, the designs are always characteristic and novel. This year Premet sponsored a new line via bodices low on one hip and curved high on the other. Her general silhouette showed short skirts with the slimmest and most boyish of line. Along with ambidextrous bodices Premet displayed many other one sided effects—among others the envelope collar, which has only one rever turned down. Here one found some of the most delightful belts which were made of quantities of black grosgrain ribbon, lined with white and often tied on one side in great bunches of flying loops. At Premet's, as at all the other big houses, the great feature seemed to be the endless panels—back, front, or side—which were shown on almost every model. One novel skirt had side panels of blue serge brought out over the top of the belt, which belt was in one model serge piped with geranium cloth and in the other black patent leather buckled with gold.

Paquin's gowns were this year of the exquisite and unusual materials and were enriched by costly furs. Here one found skirts ten inches above the ground, often shown with the low waisted bodice which was prophesied earlier in the season. Paquin's blouses are "something to write home about," as the English say. The new ones, destined probably to succeed the Russian and peplum blouses launched by Paquin, are jumpers hanging straight to a few inches below the waist line. Sometimes they are crushed a little where they end over the hips, and when this is not the case a sash is attached to the bottom of the blouse. In all events a loose, low, unfitted waist effect is obtained.

A word here about Paquin's spangled net jumper—sure to be a popular novelty this winter, inasmuch as, although simple enough to wear under a tailleur, they are quite dressy enough for the restaurant when the wearer throws back her coat. One beautiful model shown with a simple wool tailor made was made entirely of rose spangles. Even more stunning perhaps are the black and white spangled jumpers which go with the popular velvet suits.

Suitors' Mistakes Contest.

Did you make a mistake that cost you the one you wanted to win more than any other? Was it an unkind remark, a selfish deed, a mean or careless one, an error or tendency of your past come to light? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "The Mistake That Cost Me the One I Wanted Most to Win." Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Tribune."

Saving the Cherries.

I was totally unprepared for my first proposal. So was the weather. For with the rush of my lover's words came the first great drops of a summer rain.

I was confused by both outbreaks, but the one thought that became vivid in my mind was that the green cherries on my hat were endangered and that neither I nor my hat would be objects of love to any one if the cherries melted and ran down on my face.

I fled from tree to tree, pursued by my lover, still ardent, voluble, and quite unconscious apparently of the light shower. As we neared the edge of the little park we were crossing, he threw up his hands with a gesture of despair. "I knew it couldn't be," he groaned. "I knew you were too fine for me! I am going back west."

He dashed away from me, and when I heard next from him he had gone west and married.

I still have the green cherries and the little white straw hat. I also have had plenty of time to decide that I loved my tempestuous lover whom I sacrificed to save them. H. R. S.

A Sure Sign.

I went to visit his family and got there about half an hour before I was expected. To my disgust I saw him playing ball with a neighbor while his gray haired mother was breaking kindling. I thought, "He will treat his wife as he treates his mother," and broke the engagement soon after.

Wins Her Argument.

He had a large nose, of which he was plainly sensitive. One evening, while trying to convince him that my side of the argument was correct, I remarked, "Why, it's as plain as the nose on your face." That ended it. G. G.

In the Whitewing's Path.

Mine, certainly, was about two weeks ago, when I was all spruced up to have luncheon with a friend, and I was to meet him at the corner of State and Jackson at noon. There I was crossing the street dressed in white from head to foot, when a big truck passed near me, and in the excitement I stepped quickly backward, when a street cleaner, not noticing me, pushed that long brush right under my heels, causing me to flop down on his shovel. Well, I wasn't all in white then, and I did not keep my date for luncheon. A. D.

Without a Doubt.

My husband and I were waiting for a train one morning. The station platform was crowded, and while we were standing there I noticed a woman whose petticoat was hanging at least two inches below her skirt. I called my husband's attention to it, saying that I believed I would tell the woman, for I felt sure she was ignorant of it.

While we were discussing the advisability of my doing so my husband remarked, "Heavens, look at her shoes! How they are run down at the heel!"

At last I summoned courage enough to speak to her about the petticoat, and with my husband's remark about the shoes still ringing in my ears I walked over to her and said, "Please pardon me, but did you know your heels are terribly run down?" Well, that was certainly the most embarrassing moment in my life, without a doubt. L. R. B.

Ready for Action.

My aunt had never been on the "elevated," so I decided to take her for a ride. We soon found a seat and everything was all right until the car turned a corner, giving a sudden lurch to the side. My aunt, thinking the train was going to fall, yelled to me in a loud voice: "Quick, I'll stand on this side and you stand on the other so we can balance it." With that she stood up ready for action.

The Successful Home Garden.

No. 210.

[Copyright: 1917: By J. F. H. Heide.]

WINTER SALVAGE IN THE FLOWER GARDEN.

KILLING frost generally strikes the vicinity of Chicago between Oct. 1 and 15, though last year it came on Sept. 16. Some plants are more resistant to frost than others, but it is well to know just what to do with the more common bulbs, roots, and plants of the garden, porch box, and vase, and when to do it. The following incomplete list covers practically all that are worth the effort, and gives the winter care of those suitable for house plants.

AUCUBA—It resists light frost and may be taken up any time with a ball of earth covering the roots. It must be firmly planted in 4 to 6 inch pots, using sandy garden soil, and watered thoroughly after planting. It may be stored in a basement or cellar if given subdued light, at a temperature above freezing to 50 degrees F. It is there watered moderately twice a week. If used as a house plant it is placed directly at a cooler window of a living room, watered on alternate days, in midwinter daily, and syringed or sponged twice a month. It may be hardened off in a shaded, sheltered position outdoors and planted after May 10.

BEGONIA, WAX (B. semperflorens)—It must be carefully lifted in the garden now, before frost, with a ball of earth to protect the roots, and potted in a 5 to 6 inch pot [larger if necessary], using sandy soil for filling in. The pot must be well drained by placing charcoal, pot sherds, or gravel in the bottom. Have the soil moderately loose, water well, and place in a sunny [not airy] position in a living room where the night temperature does not fall below 60 degrees F. Water three times a week at first, and oftener as the heat is turned on, keeping moderately moist. Do not prune except to remove sick leaves. It will bloom all winter. Plant outdoors again after May 15.

BEGONIA, TUBEROUS—When it has finished blooming as a house plant withhold all water and place the pot with plant in a dry cellar or basement with temperature not under 50 degrees F. When the leaves are dried off shake off all earth and lay the tubers in dry sand, with the same limitation of temperature, till March, for greenhouse treatment, or April, for use as a house plant.

CANNA—After frost cut off the plant 2 to 4 inches above the ground, in the morning of a dry day. Lift the stools carefully in order not to break the brittle rhizomes or rootstocks. Shake off most of the soil and let lie till evening to dry; then shake off more soil, carefully, so as not to break the stools apart. Store them on a dry spot in a dry cellar or cool portion of the basement, not below 38 degrees F. In a heated basement all interstices in the soil must be filled with dry sand or earth. Do not water. In April the stools may be divided and started in hotbeds or window boxes, or they may be planted in the open about May 10 to 15.

DAHLIA—In the morning of a dry day, after frost, cut off the plant four inches above ground. It is deeply rooted and the cluster of tuberous roots is brittle and easily broken. Lift it carefully, shake off most soil, and let lie to dry till evening. Store in a dry, dark portion of a cool, frost free cellar. If not cemented, spread boards or use shelves. In a warm basement the roots must be packed close together in dry sand or earth. They are planted out in May.

DRACENA, BROAD LEAFED (D. Fragrans and D. Massangeana)—Lift carefully with roots. Pot firmly in 6 to 8 inch pot, using sandy loose loam containing one-third to one-half decomposed manure, and placing charcoal, broken pot sherds, or coarse gravel in the bottom for drainage. The blunt end of a piece of building lath is a handy tool for packing the soil around the inner edge of the pot. Long, heavy roots should first be shortened to the original soil ball. Set the plants a half inch deeper than before to cover the entire roots. Water thoroughly after planting and place it near a living room window with temperature ranging from 65 to 75 degrees F. Water well on alternate days and sponge the leaves with temperate water (about 60 F.) once a week. It is one of the best house plants. Harden off gradually about May 10 and plant it out some ten days later.

DRACENA, NARROW LEAFED (D. indivisa)—The potting is like that of the broad leafed dracena. It is not so well adapted to use as a house plant, preferring a temperature of 50 to 60 degrees F. It is better stored at the window of a moderately warmed basement. Water these about twice a week and sponge the leaves only when dusty, perhaps once a month. When the ends or margins begin to die, clip off the yellow portions. If used as a house plant, it should be treated like the broad leafed species.

EVONYMUS (Spindle Tree)—May be stored or used as a house plant, planting and treating it exactly like Aucuba.

FERNS—They must be removed from outdoor vases and boxes before frost. They are lifted with a ball of earth to protect the roots and planted in pots 6 to 8 inches in diameter, three-quarter size, called azalia pots. Set them a half inch deeper than before, to cover exposed roots, in sandy, loose loam of which one-third to one-half is decomposed manure. Pot sherds, charcoal, or coarse gravel is put in the bottom for better drainage, and the planting is only moderately firm. Water thoroughly after planting and on alternate days thereafter. Ferns are among the most grateful house plants if kept near a living room window at a temperature not under 55 degrees F. Runners may be planted by gathering several together in a 3 to 4 inch pot or by grouping them closely around the parent plant. Their treatment is identical. The ferns may be planted out again about May 20 after first gradually hardening them off in a shaded, sheltered position outdoors ten days previously.

FICUS ELASTICA (Rubber Plant)—The potting and entire care and treatment like those of broad leafed dracena.

FUCHSIA—The plant should be rested from now on. Remove all weak growth now and reduce the remaining young growth by one-third to one-half, forming a well balanced plant. Place it at a window in a frost free cool basement or in the coolest portion of a heated basement. Water sparingly every ten to fourteen days, the first part of winter, keeping the soil almost dry. If wanted for April blooming, bring it up early in January, cut back the young basement growth to 3 or 4 inches, water thoroughly at first and then on alternate days, sufficiently to keep the plant moderately moist. In February, stir up the soil with a table fork and work in evenly a teaspoonful of bonemeal. In May to June repot in a well drained sandy potting soil enriched with decomposed manure. Such soil is readily obtained from any florist. If early house blooming is not required, the fuchsia is kept in the basement till the end of April or beginning of May and then treated as stated. After duly hardening it off by gradual exposure, it may be planted where desired, in porch or window boxes.

GERANIUM—Before killing frost, lift the plants and roots carefully, removing all soil. Cut down unduly long branches, even by one-half, and remove all leaves except the young terminal growth. For basement storage, they are then heeled in with loose, friable soil in boxes or large pots, several together. They are placed in a cool frost-free cellar or basement and not watered till the beginning of March; then lightly every two to three weeks. About the end of April the boxes are placed outdoors, in a sunny, sheltered position, protecting with burlap during possible frosty nights. After May 15 the plants are removed from the boxes and planted in the allotted garden space. In heated basements, a light watering will be needed every four to six weeks, causing a spindly winter growth. The topmost of such shoots are removed at planting in spring. If outdoor geraniums are to be used as winter house plants, they are taken up and potted in good sandy garden soil, using 4½ to 6 inch pots, tomato cans, or other receptacles with a hole in the bottom for drainage, with pot sherds, charcoal, or coarse gravel in the bottom. Firm packing with the blunt end of a building lath, around the inside edge of the pot, is desirable. Remove all leaves except the small terminal growth and two or three of the larger near the ends. Gather straggling branches around a stake, water thoroughly, and place in a ventilated, sunny position in the living rooms, watering perhaps twice a week to keep the soil moist, not soggy. It will bloom the greater part of the winter. It may be planted out again after the middle of May.

GLADIOLUS—Cut off the plants an inch above the ground in the morning on a dry day after frost. Lift the corms [bulbs] and shake off all soil. Let them lie to dry till evening, then store them in a dry cellar or basement. In six weeks, when the stem is dried out, remove it and place the corms in dry sand till planting time in May. If dry sand is not available, dry earth will do.

GLOXINIA—The salvage and treatment are identical with those of tuberous begonias.

HIBISCUS [Garden Rose Mallow]—Lift carefully with roots. Pot in sandy, loose loam containing one-third to one-half decomposed manure. Use 6 to 8 inch pots, placing charcoal, broken pot sherds, or coarse gravel in the bottom for better drainage. Pack the soil firmly around the inner edge of pots with the blunt end of a piece of building lath. Long, heavy roots should first be shortened to the original ball of earth. Set the plant a half inch deeper than before to cover the entire roots. Water thoroughly after planting and place at a sunny [not airy] window, in a comfortable living room temperature, not under 58 degrees F. They will then bloom the greater part of winter.

HYMENOCALLIS [spider-lily]—Cut off the plants 2 inches above ground after frost. Lift them in the morning carefully in order not to break the large, white roots from the bulbs, as these must dry off gradually with the stem. Let them lie till evening and store in a dry portion of a warm basement. When the roots and stalks are dried out, remove them from the bulbs and store the latter in dry sand or earth at a temperature not under 50 degrees F. Plant out about May 15.

IVY, ENGLISH—Such as has been used in out-door vases or in porch and window boxes, should be taken up when such receptacles are cleared, either before or after frost. The ivy is planted in pots or boxes, using sandy garden soil, and placed in a cool cellar or basement, watering once a week till the end of April or beginning of May, when it is slowly hardened off for use out doors. It is excellent for use with house plants in hanging pots, plant tables, and interior window boxes; or it may be twined around the casing of openings and bay windows or mantel pieces. Before again using it out doors, it is shortened to desirable lengths. The cuttings are easily rooted and may be planted directly in the soil with the rest, or they may be first started in moist, sandy soil.

IVY, GERMAN—If used in porch or window boxes, it may be lifted now with a ball of earth for root protection. Put in 4 to 5 inch pots, using sandy garden soil. Water thoroughly at potting and on alternate days thereafter. For use as hanging plants, cut to desirable lengths of perhaps two feet. Cuttings may also be made shorter, with at least three leaf nodes to each, one or two leaves remaining above ground in planting. One inch is then inserted in well watered sand, or in sandy soil if clear sand is not available. In two or three weeks, when rooted, the cuttings are transplanted to pots, baskets, or boxes, where wanted. It is a rapid grower, producing quicker results than English ivy, but not as resistant to unfavorable conditions, and therefore more readily attacked by plant lice. It requires more light. It is planted out about May 20 and hardened off gradually about ten days earlier.

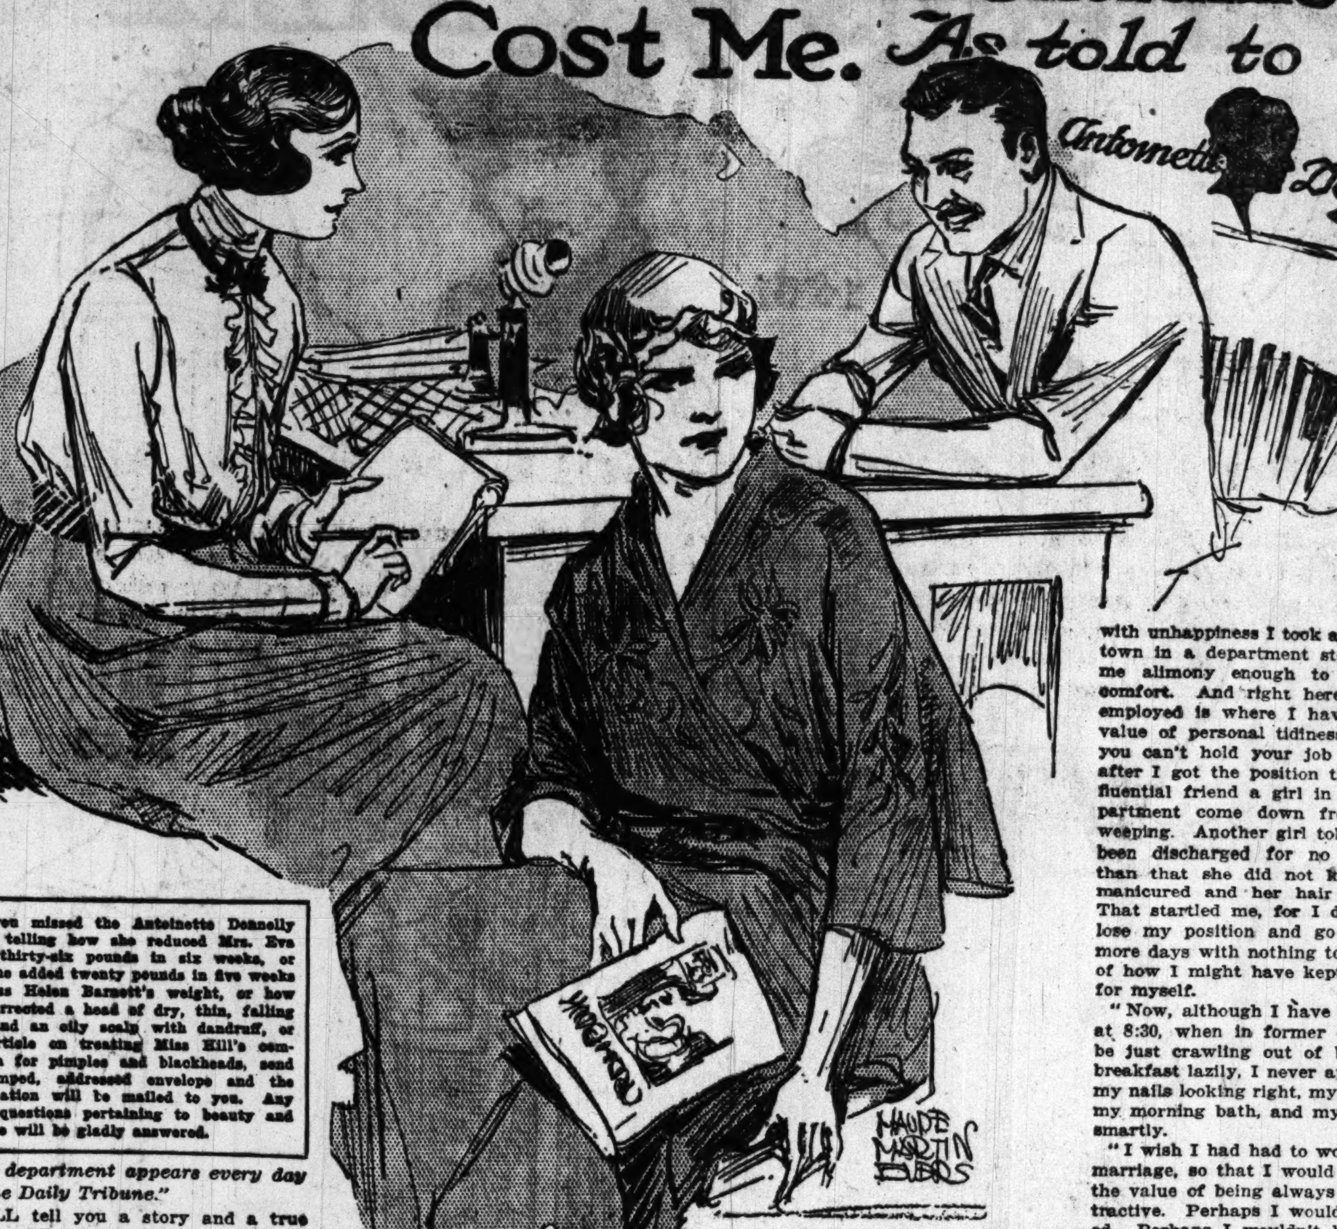
PANDANUS UTILIS [Screw Pine].—The treatment is identical with that of Pandanus Veitchii. It is more resistant to drought and neglect than the latter.

PANDANUS VEITCHII [Screw Pine].—Lift carefully with roots. Pot firmly in 6 to 8 inch pot, using sandy, loose loam containing one-third to one-half decomposed manure, and putting broken pot sherds, charcoal, or coarse gravel in the bottom for drainage. Pack the soil firmly around the inner edge of the pot with the blunt end of a piece of building lath. The long, heavy roots should first be shortened to the ball of earth. Set the plant a half inch deeper than before to cover the entire roots. Water thoroughly at planting and then withhold all water till nearly dry. Then water every three days to maintain the soil barely moist. Keep the plant at a living room window, between 65 and 75 degrees F. Clip off the yellow ends. To plant out again about May 20, begin to harden off gradually some ten days earlier.

VINCA MAJOR [Periwinkle]. — It should be taken up when frost is threatened and potted firmly in sandy soil, using 3½ to 5 inch pots, well drained, with the aid of charcoal broken pot sherds, or coarse gravel in the bottom. It cannot be stored at a temperature under 50 degrees F. and should, therefore, be used in the living rooms, at windows, in hanging pots, and on plant tables. Water once a week at 50 degrees and up to three and four times weekly at higher temperatures. Plant out where desired about May 18 to 20, gradually hardening off by exposure in a sheltered, shaded position some ten days earlier.

What Personal Untidiness Cost Me.

As told to Antoinette Donnelly



If you missed the Antoinette Donnelly series telling how she reduced Mrs. Eva Lane thirty-six pounds in six weeks, or how she added twenty pounds in five weeks to Miss Helen Barnett's weight, or how she corrected a head of dry, thin, falling hair and an oily scalp with dandruff, or the article on treating Miss Hill's complexion for pimples and blackheads, send a stamped, addressed envelope and the information will be mailed to you. Any other questions pertaining to beauty and hygiene will be gladly answered.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"I'LL tell you a story and a true one, Miss Donnelly, if you'll promise not to use my name nor reveal my identity in any way," said a woman to me. "It isn't because I'm proud of it, heaven knows, that I tell it. But if it will save one woman from making the mistake I made then I'll be happier for having told it.

"It isn't a story of what drink has cost me or what drugs have cost me. It is something less pardonable than a drink or a drug habit. Mine was the habit of personal untidiness. So, you see why I wouldn't want my name and my picture attached to this ugly confession of mine. But I'll tell you the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.

"To begin with, I married when I was 22, and I married a man of 28 who was desperately in love with me. He was everything a girl could be proud of in a husband. He had a good disposition, was ambitious, generous, was strictly temperate, and was a fine looking man. His skin was as clean and pink as a baby's. He was always faultlessly dressed, not in any sense a dandy, but his linen always looked as if it were fresh from the laundry; his shoes were always shined and he was always brushed perfectly. He took two baths a day and looked the part.

"I remember him telling me once that the thing about me that won him was my immaculate cleanliness. Ironical! For the lack of that very quality was the thing that cost me his love and all my unhappiness.

"When I married, of course, I had my trousseau. And it was lovely. It was the gift of an aunt who adored me and it was most all her own handiwork. The lingerie was enough to make any girl happy, it was so adorably beribboned and exquisitely dainty. And there was enough of it to last me a whole year without a single extra purchase. There were a couple of pretty little morning sets—the apron-dress and cap. So that I started out with a good supply of the things that make a woman attractive in the intimate realms of a new found home.

"For a year everything with us was blissfully happy. My main object in living those days was to fix up for my husband's return in the evening, just to hear him say, 'My, you look sweet tonight.' And we spent the happiest evenings together.

"He petted me so much and babied me so that I began to think I was putting in time unnecessarily in taking care of myself, and I grew careless. I would let a couple of days go by without taking a bath at all. It took a little time for this gradual slumping on my part to become a real issue. But it did. As I said before, my husband was the soul of cleanliness and neatness about his person. I irritated him frequently, but he was such a big, generous hearted fellow, for a long time he was willing to overlook things.

"I got thoroughly careless about my underwear. I never bothered threading it with dainty ribbons so long as there was a washed out yellowish hued one to serve the practical purpose of a ribbon.

"A couple of years went by, and as I look back now I cannot imagine what I was thinking about. I had all the time in the world. I had money enough to buy new things whenever I wanted to. I had no household cares, for I had a good maid. But I slumped so that my husband would burst out frequently his disapproval, and now he refused to baby me into good humor. One day he said to me on sighting a terribly soiled corset that I had left hanging over a chair, 'You don't wear that dirty thing, do you?' And he went out of the room with a horribly disgusted look on his face. Even that didn't upset me enough to accomplish a permanent reform. I went right out and bought a new corset, but I wore that until it was as soiled as the first offend[illegible]

"Real scenes began arising after this. When I went down to his office one day he suggested that while he was attending to some business I run out and get my shoes shined. Next time he invited me down to dinner I went with shoes unshined. He made me realize the fact, too.

"Now, as I look back upon those days I see plainly how I must have tried him daily. I was careless about everything. The drawers in my dresser were always disorderly. My brush and comb I used to let get so dirty that once my husband said, in sheer desperation at sight of them, 'For heaven's sake, buy yourself a new brush and comb. I don't see how you could put those dirty things near your hair.'

"After a few years drifted by my husband started telephoning the old story home to me at 6 o'clock—'He wouldn't be home—had work,' etc. Then tales came drifting in to me about his being seen here and there. To make a long story short, my day of awakening came when he asked me to divorce him. I begged and pleaded with him. I loved him and I couldn't give him up. In the bitter words that followed he said: 'It's your d——d untidiness I can't stand. I've stood it for eight years, until I've grown to hate the sight of you and the untidy house here.'

"He got the divorce and is married again.

"To keep myself from growing mad with unhappiness I took a position down town in a department store. He gave me alimony enough to keep me in comfort. And right here where I am employed is where I have learned the value of personal tidiness. Without it you can't hold your job here. A day after I got the position through an influential friend a girl in the same department come down from the office weeping. Another girl told me she had been discharged for no other reason than that she did not keep her nails manicured and her hair looking tidy. That startled me, for I didn't want to lose my position and go through any more days with nothing to do but think of how I might have kept my husband for myself.

"Now, although I have to be at work at 8:30, when in former days I would be just crawling out of bed or eating breakfast lazily, I never appear without my nails looking right, my shoes shined, my morning bath, and my hair dressed smartly.

"I wish I had had to work before my marriage, so that I would have learned the value of being always neat and attractive. Perhaps I would have profited. Perhaps I wouldn't have. Maybe it needed a lesson as bitter as the one I got to teach me what is next to godliness.

"When I think of the years ahead of me, with my husband making more success with every year and willing to share it with the one who would keep up with him, then the days are hard and the nights are lonely."

Answers to Inquiries.

M. T. M.: YOUR TEETH SHOULD be brushed thoroughly after each meal. Let your diet include plenty of fresh fruit, because the fruit acids stimulate the flow of saliva and are cleansing. An apple eaten in the evening will mechanically and chemically cleanse the teeth, and if followed by proper brushing will protect them from the action of bacteria during the night. The mouth should be rinsed thoroughly before retiring with a weak solution of bicarbonate of soda and salt, a teaspoonful of each to a pint of water. These simple precautions will save you a great deal both physically and financially. Would you like to have my instruction for the care of the teeth? If so a stamped, addressed envelope will bring them to you.

* *

CLARICE AND C. M. C.: PLEASE send me a stamped, addressed envelope for the directions and formulas you ask for. They are much too long to publish here, and in shortened form would be of little value to you.

* *

MARY M.: POOR CIRCULATION IS as a rule the cause of cold hands and feet. Outdoor exercise, together with deep breathing, will remedy this if you practice faithfully. A long brisk walk daily, breathing correctly, will do a great deal to send the blood racing to the extremities. Foot and ankle exercises are also of help in stimulating the circulation.

DOROTHY P.: GRAY HAIR IS often hereditary, and when this is the case and the scalp is apparently healthy there is nothing that you can do that will stop the graying process. Keep up the daily scalp massage. Careful shampooing and a thorough brushing before retiring will keep your hair looking well groomed, and in that, after all, lies more than half of its attractiveness.

REAL LOVE STORIES

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

A SENSE OF HUMOR.

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. "The Tribune" will pay $5 for every story published. Manuscripts will not be returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

I HAD an involuntary habit of reading the character of some of my correspondents by their handwriting. I managed a dealers' service department of a large manufacturing company and, of course, many of the small dealers who wrote in for assistance did not use a typewriter, but wrote the letters by hand.

One day I came across a handwriting that showed unmistakable signs of humor. This was interesting and I took time to study it carefully. I figured that the writer not only had a keen sense of humor but was industrious and sympathetic, with an amiable, happy-go-lucky disposition.

I wrote him a long letter full of suggestions for developing his trade and made my letter as interesting and personal as the restrictions of business etiquette would permit. During the next month or so we wrote many letters back and forth—each one a little more newsy and friendly than the last. He often related funny incidents that had arisen and made me realize how droll he could be. Of course, this could not go on forever, and our correspondence finally ended.

I had just returned from lunch one day when the office boy announced that he had a fine joke on me. That a man giving the name of my dealer friend had asked for Mr. French [thinking I was a man], and seeing the possibilities of an embarrassing situation, the office boy had said, "Mr. French is out to lunch." My country friend was in a hurry, so left word for me to meet him that evening at a certain hotel for dinner, or if I could not accept his invitation to call up a number which he gave.

Of course I would call up and give some excuse for not meeting him—this had gone too far. And then I thought of the handwriting in all those letters—the unmistakable signs of honesty, uprightness, and best of all, that sense of humor. My woman's curiosity to meet this man and prove to myself that my reading of his character had been right—which would be clearly shown by the way he took this joke—finally won out. I did not call him up, but rushed home, changed into a becoming dress, and went to the hotel.

He had me paged and I answered to the call of "Mr. French." I must admit that my friend came up smiling from that first encounter and we had the jolliest chat ever over our dinner. It was two weeks before his business was finished and when he left I had promised to help him with his work by becoming his wife. W. W.

Lift Corns Off With Fingers

Few drops of Freezone take all pain and soreness from corns instantly

No humbug! Any corn, whether hard, soft or between the toes, will loosen right up and lift out, without a particle of pain or soreness.

Wonderful discovery by Cincinnati man

This remarkable drug is called freezone and is a compound of ether discovered by a Cincinnati man.

Ask at any drug store for a small bottle of freezone, which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every corn or callus.

Put a few drops directly upon any tender, aching corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears and shortly the corn or callus will loosen and can be lifted right off with the fingers.

Freezone doesn't eat out the corns or calluses but shrivels or rather loosens them without even irritating the surrounding skin.

Just think! No pain at all; no soreness or smarting when applying it or afterwards. Try a little and see for yourself. It is surprising.

Few drops stop corn-pain

Take soreness from any corn or callus instantly

Women should keep freezone on their dressers and never let a corn ache twice. If a corn starts hurting just apply a drop. The pain stops instantly, corn goes!

Tiny bottles of Freezone cost but a few cents at any drug store.

Bright Sayings of Children

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, "Tribune," Chicago.

Mary would run away from the house if she got a chance. One day she got about two blocks away from the house and her little pet dog was with her and when she was brought back her mother said: "Mary, I'm going to whip you," and she said, looking reproachfully at the dog: "Well, mover, I kept telling Rover we ought to go back." Our son is fond of school when he gets thoroughly into the swing of it. One evening after what had apparently been our usual bed time chat, and he said, with all a child's intense seriousness: "Miss B. is a dandy teacher, mother. She makes the time go so fast! Why, today passed by like a shiver!" M. M. L.

Esther gazed long and earnestly at the picture of a be-capped and bespectacled little old lady that headed her reading lesson. "Miss Brown," she said, wonderingly, at last, "they don't make grandmothers nearly so old now'days as they used to, do they?" M. G. B.

It was a rule in our home if my little daughter went away to play when I was absent that she should leave a note telling me where she was. One afternoon I found the following: "Dear Mother: I am invited out t[illegible]. May I go? I have gone. If I can't go telephone me. Margaret." A. E. L.

Dorothy and her cousin Harold were taken one day by their mothers to a restaurant. When they had finished eating Harold began painstakingly to fold his napkin. Dorothy leaned over and, much to the chagrin of her mother and amusement of the women at the next table, said in a loud stage whisper: "Don't fold your napkin in a restaurant, Harold. You only fold 'em at home, cause at home you use 'em for months and months." E. W. Z.

Edward was tugging and dragging, over the lawn, with all his 4 years' strength, a long piece of garden hose as a neighbor passed and said "Good morning."

Looking up from his play, he said with the voice of a 10-year-old, "Good morning, sir."

The neighbor said, "How are you this morning?"

Edward replied, pronouncing his words slowly and even more maturely than before, "I am quite well, thank you. How are you, and how is your wife?" D. J. M.

HAVE COLOR IN CHEEKS

Be Better Looking—Take Olive Tablets

If your skin is yellow—complexion pallid—tongue coated—appetite poor—you have a bad taste in your mouth—a lazy, no-good feeling—you should take Olive Tablets.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—a substitute for calomel—were prepared by Dr. Edwards after 17 years of study with his patients.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color.

To have a clear, pink skin, bright eyes, no pimples, a feeling of buoyancy like childhood days you must get at the cause.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act on the liver and bowels like calomel—yet have no dangerous after effects.

They start the bile and overcome constipation. That's why millions of boxes are sold annually at 10c and 25c per box. All druggists. Take one or two nightly and note the pleasing results. —Advt.

Doris Blake Says

If you were born this week you are

A Lover of Humanity.

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped and addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

YOU take up the thread of life under the influence of the airy sanguine sign of Libra if your birthday falls during the week beginning today. Libra is best known as the conserver of laws and ideas and is a sign that has produced innumerable jurists, generals, and other leaders—men who have known how to respect the confidence of their nation and who could steer clear of graft and greed.

Libra people never lack for followers, because with unusual precision of thought and action they combine a strong magnetic force that commands adherence. Theirs is the power that enables ministers to lead their followers to glory and generals their men to victory.

You are a lover of humanity for humanity's sake. You are extremely lenient and try to find good in every one. You stubbornly refuse to see evil even where it is perfectly apparent, and you grant the "benefit of the doubt" when no one else will recognize its existence. You are indeed true apostles of the old creed of "believing nothing that you hear and half that you see."

Your chief characteristics are ambition, perception, pride, conservatism, inspiration, and respect for laws.

You should guard against worry and impatience, both of which are likely to lead to a nervous breakdown. You are a firm believer in first impressions and nine times out of ten you are correct in your first estimate. This is due to your wonderful powers of foresight. If you would be truly happy bear in mind that the tenth time you are not right and this will keep you from intolerance of the opinions of others. This foresight makes speculators of a great many Libra people and they are often most successful, but there is always the chance that the tenth time will ruin the nine successes.

You are possessed of a stubbornness of purpose which the opinions of others as a rule have no power to move and which rarely yields to an outside force. Reserved and self controlled, you are seldom angry. You cannot stand criticism and it only seems to hurt your feelings and really accomplishes nothing.

You would make a superior lawyer, orator, military commander, commercial organizer, or director of religious organizations.

You are fond of home life, but when you marry you should be careful that your choice is one who will help you to rise to greater heights. A marriage with Sagittarius, Nov. 22-Dec. 21, is a sympathetic one, as well as a marriage with Aquarius, Jan. 20-Feb. 19. But perhaps the happiest union of all would be with Aries, March 20-April 19. In fact, all Libra people have a large choice when compared with other signs, but in spite of this they are prone to make themselves unhappy by a marriage with Pisces. This is said to make the worst kind of a combination because Libra people act from intuition and Pisces are ruled by reason and logic.

The Stamp Language.

Dear Miss Blake: Can you give me the postoffice stamp language? ROSE."

Yes, and I will give it gladly if you will be kind enough to send me a stamped addressed envelope. I have it in printed form. It is too long to print here so soon again.

* *

Not Flattering.

"Dear Miss Blake: I write to you for advice. I am a girl 20 years old, with red hair and the temper that goes with it. For more than a year a young man of 25 has kept company with me, but lately his parents found out that he came to see me and they forbade it. They won't allow him the use of the auto. Of course, I go with others, too. I do not love him, but I like to go with him. He still takes me on the sly when he can. Do you think I ought to go with him? LILLY."

You haven't very much self respect, Lilly, or you wouldn't let any man take you anywhere "on the sly." I would not consider myself flattered a single bit if a man wasn't willing to be seen on every occasion I was out with him. Considering the fact that you have other friends and that you care nothing about this one, my advice to you is to recommend to him that he obey his parents' wishes and refrain from your company.

* *

Considered Backward.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young man of 18 and my friends consider me bashful and backward among young ladies. Will you please give me a remedy? DAVID."

That is a state of mind, David, which you have to work yourself out of. No one can provide the remedy but your own self. You will have to train yourself to mingle oftener with girls, because this will tend toward an easier presence with them. Then, too, you will have to train your mind away from yourself. Put it on the girls. Be thinking of their pleasure and of nice things you can say to them and they in turn will contribute to your greater ease of manner by appreciating you.

* *

A Masculine Wail.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am coming to you for some advice. My parents object to my going with girl friends. All the other boys in my neighborhood and of my age have girl friends. I am 17, good looking, and have a reasonably good education. I was away at school and there they called me bashful, which I really am. I enjoy dancing but can't go with any girls. What's the use? What will I do? BUDDIE."

Buddie, if you will go in for athletics and get that sureness about yourself which physical perfection gives you won't have any more trouble with your bashfulness, and you will be more popular, because both men and girls like an unaffected, healthy, wholesome sort of boy. At 17 you don't need to be discouraged. Instead just say to yourself, "I'll give a year to making myself as attractive as I can and getting rid of my self-consciousness." I feel sure that before long you will be sought after instead of being unhappy over your lot.

* *

Unnecessary and Bad Form.

"Dear Miss Blake: Will you please send me the answers to the following questions? 1. Is it not improper for a young lady to help a young man on with his coat? 2. Is the fork the correct thing to use in eating peas, beans, etc.? 3. When the plate is passed for a second helping, should the knife or fork be left on the plate or not? "HELEN."

1. Not improper, but neither necessary nor in good form. 2. Yes, the fork is the correct thing to use. 3. The knife and fork are placed together at the right side of the plate and left on the plate while passing for a second helping.

* *

Party Manners.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl 14 years old and I would like to know if it is right to go to a surprise party on a boy of the same age. I would also like to know the proper time to go home from a party. M. A."

Not unless there was a chaperon or you have the permission of the boy's mother for the surprise on him and her assured presence. Ten would be the right hour for you youngsters to break up the party.

* *

She Loaned Him Money.

"Dear Miss Blake: Will you please advise me? I have kept company with a young man for nearly six years. I helped him in his work, loaned him money and did all I could so we could be married. Lately he has turned against me—won't see me or even talk to me when I call him up. When I ask him about the money I loaned him he simply says he can't pay as he hasn't it. He makes no promises as to when he can return it. In other words, he seems to want to leave me alone. What ought I to do? In spite of the way he has used me I still love him and in a way I feel sorry for him. EVELYN."

Maybe there are occasions when a man will accept money from a woman and repay her not only in cash but in kindness, but the cases on record are rare indeed. No matter how much a girl may feel inclined to extend this form of generosity to the man whom she loves, her better judgment should restrain her. It is almost a certainty that loans entering into a love affair or even a friendship are the beginning of a disastrous end of things and the donor is too frequently looked upon as the offender in the situation. This may be traced to a guilty conscience and a feeling of not doing the square thing. But when the loan has been made by a girl she ought to make up her mind if things don't turn out right to be game as a loser. Pursuing a man of this type under threat is at best a miserable job. Certainly there's no understanding the heart of a woman and how she can keep on loving a man who deals her such a crooked hand. I really don't know what you can do in your case. If he hasn't any money a lawsuit will bring you no reward, and your love for the man undoubtedly will save him from his just deserts, so you will have to be patient and trust to a change of heart which may be affected by your giving him the impression that you believe him honorable to make good on the money you loaned him.

* *

Black Cat Superstition.

"Dear Miss Blake: Is there anything in the old saying of bad luck or death when a black cat crosses in front of you? I will explain. Sunday night when my friend was bringing me home a large black cat crossed the road just in front of the motorcycle and he asked me if I was afraid of bad luck. Now, is there any truth in it, or is it just an old saying? A year ago this June my father died and my brother went to get my two sisters to see him before he passed away, and on their way here a black cat crossed the road just in front of the auto. Did that just happen that way, or is there some truth in the belief? "RUBY."

Everybody seems to have his or her pet superstition. The black cat is not one of mine! I don't deny, however, that I have one, but I can't believe that a cat of any color passing in front of one should shape or predict a destiny.

* *

Fretting About One Man.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been in love with a soldier for a year, and he promised to write me, but hasn't done so for four months. I am a girl of 18, so do you think I will get a chance to meet anybody else? I am so lonely. "MABEL."

Of course, you will meet many more young men in your life so don't spend any time worrying about this fickle soldier boy.

* *

Making Friends Again.

"Dear Miss Blake: Will you please tell me whether or not it is right to write to a dear boy friend who has gone away from here to be gone some time. Of course, I mean just a friendly note, so that we might correspond if he wishes to. The reason he doesn't write is because before he left he had been going with another, whom he seemed to care for, but his affections were not returned. I told him if he cared so much for her he should not be going with me. Now I'd like to take it back, but as he has gone I don't know what is best, to leave him alone or write him a short note. FAITH."

Under the circumstances it would not be wise for you to attempt to force correspondence, so if you insist on writing some kind of a note make it a postal card with a friendly greeting on it. Then if he is inclined to take up the thread of the correspondence that will be sufficient cue for him.

Christmas Packages for the Boys at the Front.

HERE is an opportunity to bring Christmas cheer to the boy at the front. The Red Cross is asking for Christmas packages to be made ready and shipped abroad on Oct. 15 and to be delivered to the men in training camps or cantonments by Dec. 1. These packages are designed to banish "homesickness" and to let our men know that the folks at home have not forgotten them.

The Red Cross says that next to supplying the men of the army and navy with knitted garments and comfort bags certainly the best thing we can do for them is to furnish them with such entertainment and little luxuries as are contained in these Christmas packages.

The packages contain such articles as a box of writing paper and envelopes, a package of cigarets, a game, mouth organ, or even marbles, a scrap book filled with humorous or interesting clippings, a little candy, and a puzzle to take the mind of the soldier off the dreadful business of war for the time being. These are merely suggestions, as almost anything may be included in the bundles that is inexpensive and of light weight. The facilities for shipping are limited, therefore bulky packages should be eliminated.

The package may be tied up in a bandana or a khaki colored handkerchief. A sprig of artificial holly at the top gives an attractive finishing touch. Or they may be included in an attractive bag tied with Christmas ribbon through which is slipped a card bearing the giver's name and a cheery greeting.

These bags may be made of any attractive material. Some are khaki colored, some are of gay cretonnes, and some are of crimson sateen or drilling on which has been applied a small green Christmas tree of the same material. They are plain bags, about 12x15 inches, a little smaller than this if desired, with double draw strings at the top.

If you desire to send the regular comfort bags instead of the Christmas bags, make your bag of khaki or any plain dark colored washable material, and include any or all of the following articles:

Khaki colored sewing cotton, No. 30; white sewing cotton, No. 30; white darning cotton, needles, No. 5; darning needle, needle case, buttons, khaki colored and white, medium size, in bags 3x5; large thimble, blunt pointed scissors, cake of soap, safety pins, medium size; common pins, small comb, tooth brush, tooth paste, small round mirror, handkerchiefs, lead pencil, writing pad, envelopes and post cards, playing cards, collapsible aluminum drinking cup, pocket knife, tan shoe laces. In comfort bags made for the navy sewing cotton, buttons, and shoe laces should be black.

Make your bag a combination holiday and comfort bag if you wish, like the one illustrated. In fact, use your own judgment about the contents of your package or bag as long as it expresses the Christmas spirit, but lose no time—make it tomorrow if possible and turn it in to the Red Cross.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

Mary King

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

THINK BOSS TOO STRICT.

BEING amenable to discipline is not a shining virtue in the business girl's category. She starts on her career with a spirit of independence, and fired with an ambition toward greater things, that make it difficult for her to submit to the authority of petty officials. That petty officials are necessary in the regulation of big business is lost sight of by her, and she often spends valuable time and wastes precious energy chafing at the bit, when a graceful submission would bring her far toward her goal of success.

The writer of the following letter and her co-workers present one phase of a problem that continually faces employers and managers:

"Dear Miss King: I am one of many girls employed by a construction company. Until recently each department had its own quota of stenographers, but now we are all in one office and form a separate department. We are twenty-one girls and one man, with the man in charge of the department. This chap makes up the daily schedules, and assigns to each girl her work for the day; and she is responsible to him for her work and her time. All criticism of work is made by department heads directly to him, and he has absolute authority to hire, to fire, and make recommendations for raises.

"Before this new stenographic system was installed our boss was one of us, but from the moment he was placed in an executive position his manner toward all of us changed. He became stern and discouraged any signs of friendliness on the part of the girls toward him, and let us see plainly that his new position had created a wide gulf between us.

"This change of manner amused some of us and irritated others. We all liked this man until he was placed in charge of the department. Now none of us can stand him. At first we were not inclined to take his orders seriously, which attitude he resented; and when he discovered that one or two of the girls entirely ignored his authority he became downright ugly.

"By this time he has succeeded in curtailing many of our privileges and is making conditions intolerable. The girls are showing signs of rebellion, and there is some talk of having one or more of the girls go to the general manager with a complaint. I asked the girls to hold off taking the matter to the big boss, as I feel that it will injure rather than help our cause, and they said they would let the matter rest for ten days. If by that time our new head of department shows no signs of reforming they will go straight to headquarters.

"Do you think this would be wise? I would appreciate your opinion in the matter. E. R."

Your difficulty, which seems to me entirely of your own making, is one which you and the other girls in your department ought to settle yourselves. I think it hardly would be to your advantage to take the matter up with the general manager.

I judge from your letter that neither you nor the rest of the girls in the department have been quite fair to your late associate. You have given him neither time nor opportunity to develop into a good executive. By right of his position it was only natural that his manner toward the girls should change; and even though he did carry himself with an exaggerated air of authority, it was ungenerous to resent his promotion. Given a little time and some coöperation from the girls of the department, he might develop into the right sort of an executive.

Talk the girls into showing some disposition toward discipline and you will probably find your erstwhile stern boss is really your friend and champion.

Varied Activities of Women.

The Rockefeller foundation has contributed to the Young Women's Christian association fund the sum of $100,000, to be used for the protection of women and girls in the vicinity of training and mobilization camps.

The state department will issue no passports to women who desire to go to France or England unless they show proof that they are to be regularly employed in war work.

Despite her 70 years of age, Mrs. Samuel Coffin, mother of Howard E. Coffin of the national defense council, recently took an aeroplane trip with an Italian aviator.

According to figures now in the possession of the council of national defense, there are in the United States more than 80,000 registered nurses.

In order that their soldier boys may have a plentiful supply of cigarets, thousands of women in France have given up smoking.

POSLAM EXCELS IN INTENSITY OF HEALING POWER

Poslam possesses healing energy so highly concentrated that one ounce of Poslam is worth a pound of ordinary ointments less efficient in the treatment of Eczema or any eruptional condition of the skin.

Talk with those who have been healed of aggravated skin troubles, who have used all kinds of remedies AND THEN USED POSLAM, and they will say this even more emphatically.

Results come quickly. Itching stops; angry skin is soothed; uncertainty is dispelled, so little Poslam does so much.

Sold everywhere. For free sample write to Emergency Laboratories, 32 West 47th St., New York City.—Advt.

CHICAGO and The Fair—their growth and their progress have been simultaneous. As Chicago has grown great, so has The Fair grown great—great in its purposes, great in its ideals and standards, great in its service to the public.

It was in 1875 that the far-seeing mind of E. J. Lehmann conceived the idea of a great market place where could be found, under one roof, everything to eat, to wear and to furnish the home. It was the inception of the Department Store idea and so great has been its development that today The Fair is recognized as one of America's greatest commercial institutions—the bargain center of Chicago, where the luxuries of life as well as the every-day necessities of existence may be secured, at saving prices, every day the year 'round. For forty-two years we have been doing our best—and our best has always meant honest merchandise, honest prices and a liberal policy of store-keeping. As we have grown this thought has ever been in our minds—We shall continue to conduct a better store for a bigger future.

TOMORROW we shall begin to celebrate our success with a series of very wonderful selling events. Every department in this store will be represented and we assure our friends that this will be an occasion long to be remembered. Months ago we laid our plans for this event—and months ago we sent our buyers to the markets to contract for merchandise—to close as many unusual transactions as lay within their power. How unusual have been the concessions thus secured we leave to your good judgment to decide. While many were worrying over the rising market, we closed deals that seemed almost impossible. Manufacturers and wholesalers helped us to celebrate this occasion; they enabled The Fair to procure merchandise at savings almost unbelievable—and to quote birthday prices that will surely bring joy to the men, women and children of Chicago.

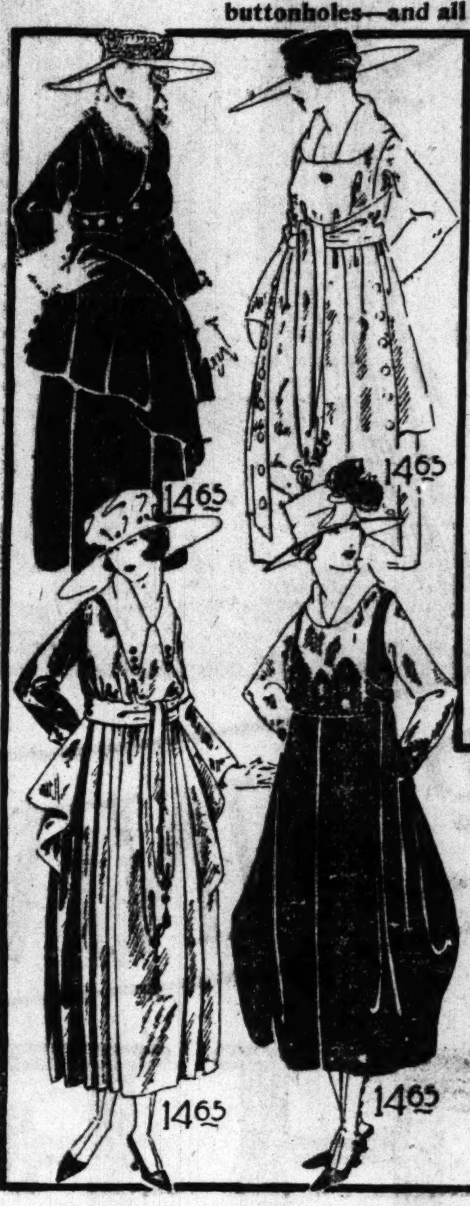
Suits, Coats and Dresses in Bar

Women of Chicago, here's your golden opportunity! Here is, beyond question of a doubt, the most event in the whole Anniversary Sale. Suits, coats and dresses—in the newest fashions down buttonholes—and all at savings that show an utter disregard for costs and no consideration for



21.50 to 29.75 Dresses to Go at 14.65

AT the very beginning of the season, when stores throughout the country are selling dresses at regular prices, here we are with a sale of just the prettiest dresses you could find—and offering them at enormous reductions from the usual prices. But this is our 42d Anniversary and we feel that the unusual must be done—therefore you will choose from several hundred up-to-date dresses at a figure that is startlingly low, to be sure. In this sale you will find the new straight line effects, the side draped skirts, the smart tunics—handsomely embroidered and fancy braided models. There are combinations of serge and satin, serge and georgette, also nobby serge dresses. Included are many dresses of satin and taffeta with georgette and satin collars and cuffs. Your choice of several hundred dresses at 14.65. Third Floor.

Because of the variety of styles we cannot accept mail or phone orders and none will be sent on approval.

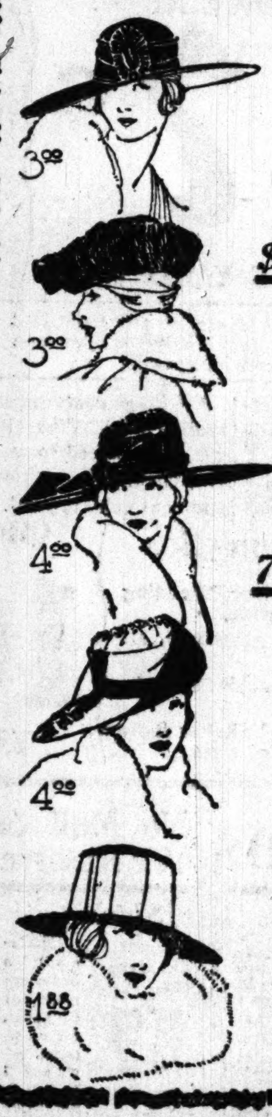
Anniversary Millinery



MANY women like to buy their hats ready to wear. It saves them the time and trouble of picking trimmings. To these women comes the welcome news that for this big event we have selected 500 trimmed hats and divided them into two great lots of wonderful offerings in seasonable millinery.

$5 to 7.50 Hats Go at $3

LOT 1 consists of silk velvet hats, nobby in style, neat in appearance and appropriate at almost any time. The styles are up to the minute and correct in all the little details which you expect to find in good hats. These hats may be had in all shapes and in a varied assortment of desirable and popular colors; they are all trimmed and all reduced to $3

7.50 to $10 Hats Go at $4

LOT 2 is composed of hats of Lyons velvet, silk velvet and Panne velvet at a slightly higher price. All the new shapes—the new droop brims, Chin-Chin, dress shapes and sailors; also combinations of colors, trimmed with fur, gold and silver ribbon, feathers and flowers. These hats have been marked much higher and are really worth while offers at $4

Plenty of black, brown, purple, taupe, etc.

Plush mannish sailors—the hat for everyday street wear. These hats are remarkable values at this special price; it's only because of a special purchase that we can offer them at the moderate price of 1.88

Shoes in the Height of Fashion —All in Perfect Condition

THAT'S the most important fact concerning this sale—the shoes are brand new and up-to-the-minute. The purchase constitutes a tremendous overstock—and our enormous price allowance was obtained because we took ALL. It seems scarcely necessary to say anything regarding "American Lady" shoes. They're too well known for their quality and the beauty of their lasts, to require any further praise from us—and at our Anniversary price they should create a sale sensation, establishing new selling records in Chicago. Special preparations have been made to facilitate rapid buying. There'll be a large extra selling space and many extra salespeople on hand.

Because of the variety of styles, we cannot accept mail or phone orders, and none will be sent on approval.

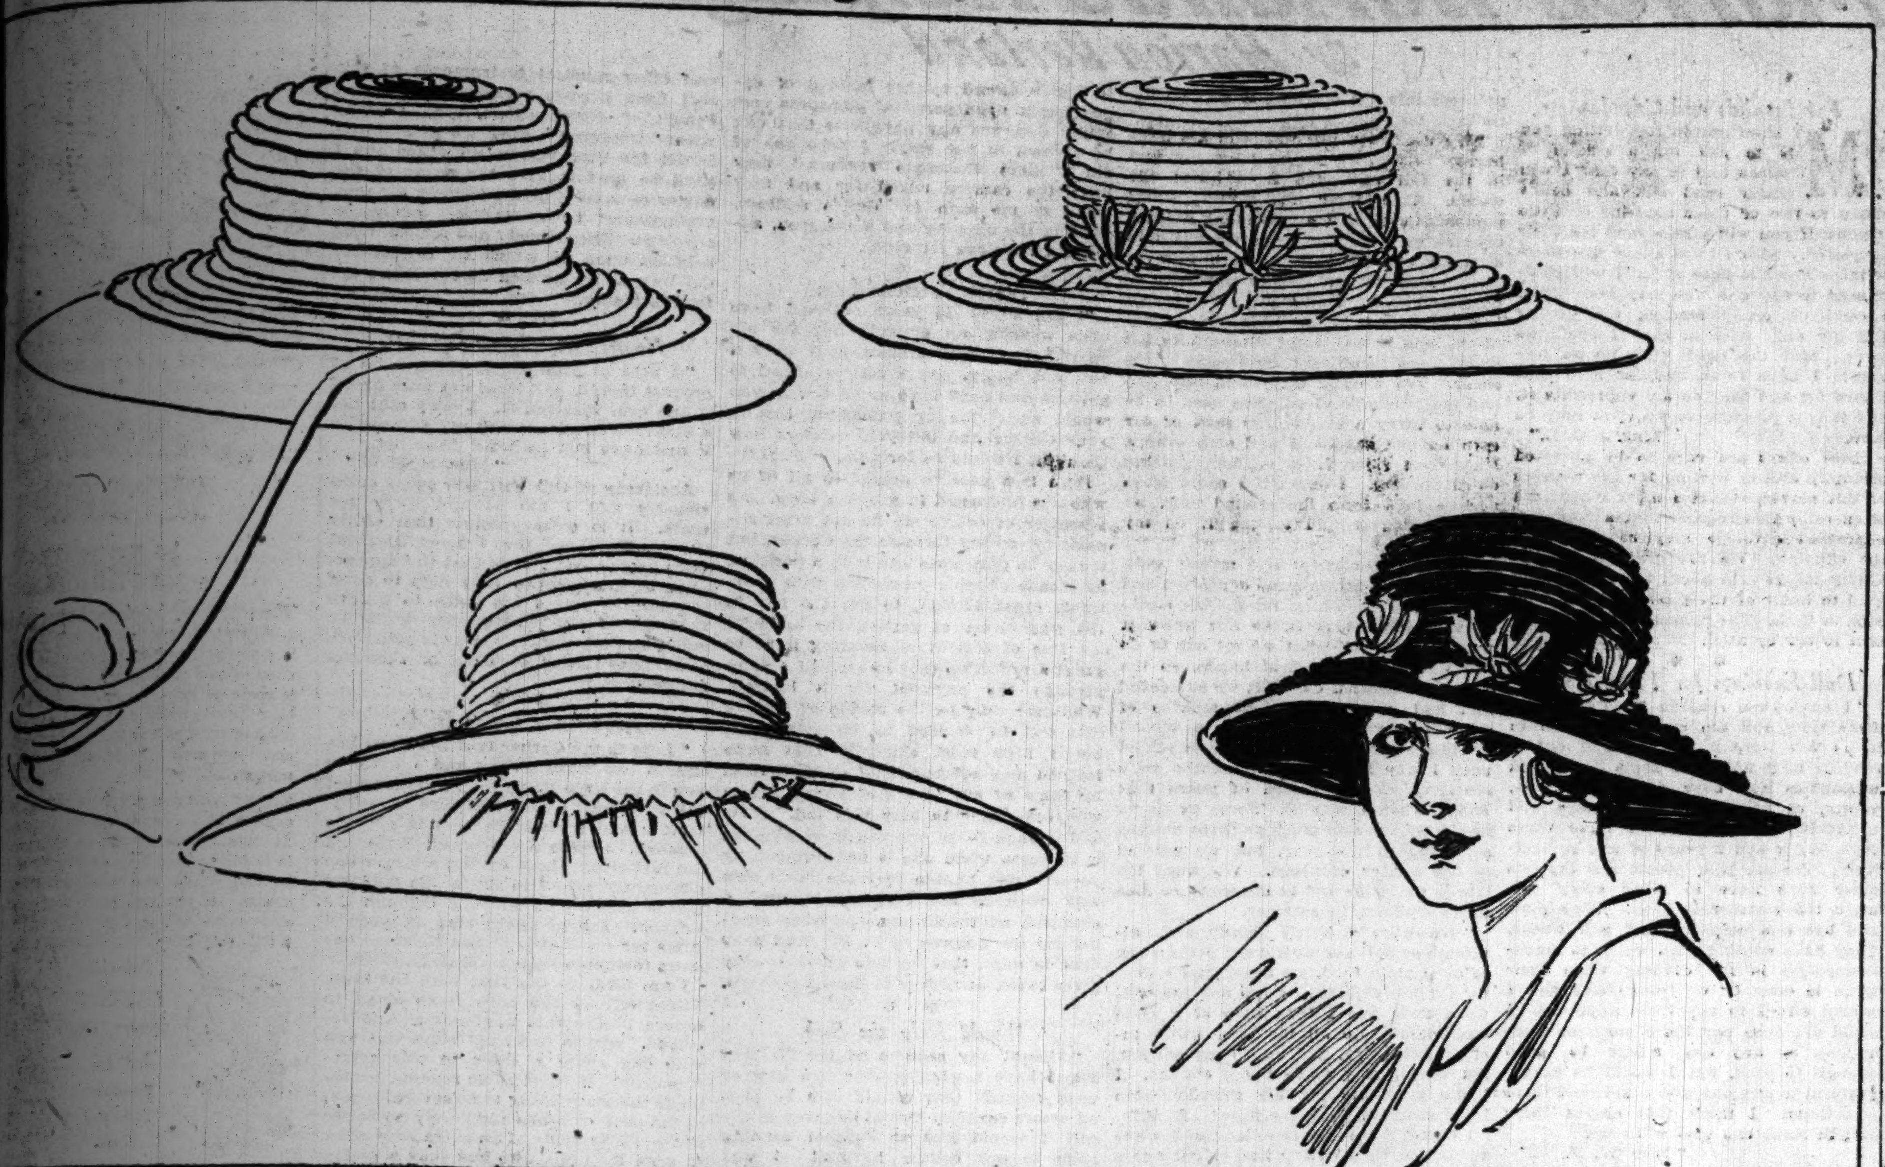
Practical and Fancy Needle Work

By CLOTILDE



Of all the attractive hats that are being shown this fall, the chenille hat with the soft mushroom brim seems to be the most popular. This smart hat is easy to make and can be duplicated at small expense. Especially attractive is the color scheme, a combination of African brown and burnt orange.

To copy this hat you will need a buckram frame with a brim width of four inches, slightly mushroom, and a crown height of 3½ inches, twenty-two yards of African brown chenille, and three-quarters yard of eighteen inch burnt orange velvet. The material required for the trimming is four yards of king's blue chenille thread, four yards of old rose chenille thread, two yards of white chenille thread, and six pale green velvet leaves.

The first thing to do is to take the wire out of the edge of the brim. This gives the brim a softer line.

The brim and crown are covered with the chenille stitched on in rows. Leave a loose end of two yards of chenille and start to sew on about 1⅓ inches from the edge. Sew on row after row until you reach the crown, then continuo around the side crown to the top until the entire crown is covered. Finish in the center of the top crown, slipping the end of the chenille under the last row. The chenille must be put on carefully, as, of course, no stitches can show.

The next thing is to put on the velvet edge and facing, which are in one piece. This requires a strip of velvet one and one-third yards long and six inches wide cut bias. Stitch the bias edges together on the sewing machine if possible, as this makes a better seam. You now have a circular piece of velvet six inches wide. Bring one end of the velvet one and one-half inches over the edge of the brim and stitch it all around. Now cover the raw edge with the loose end of chenille.

Next carefully draw the velvet for facing under the brim and up into the head size and stitch it to the buckram crown. The lining will cover the raw edges and stitches. Be sure that the velvet lays smoothly under the brim before stitching. It might be well to pin it in place before sewing.

A nice finish for the facing, which also holds it in place, is to sew a row of chenille all around the velvet facing, one and one-half inches from the edge.

The trimming is made of clusters of king's blue and old rose chenille thread loops with white chenille centers. Six of them with six pale green velvet leaves are tacked all around the side crown of the hat. If you cannot obtain the velvet leaves the chenille thread ornaments alone make an attractive trimming.

Childhood Ambition Contest.

Did you ever have a childhood ambition—a humorous one? Of course you did. And what you did wasn't anything like what you dreamed. Tell us what your great ambition was—and then tell us how far short you fell. Do it in 250 words, on one side of the paper, and address manuscripts to Childhood Ambition Editor, Chicago Sunday Tribune. For each story printed $1 will be paid. No manuscripts returned.

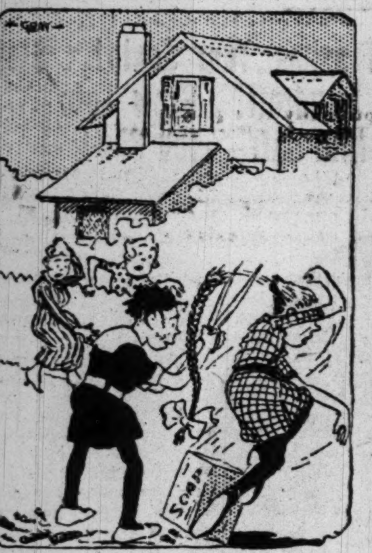
Speak a Piece.

I was a timid, dreamy child who seldom spoke except when spoken to, but to hear music or some one "speak a piece" carried me up to the gates of heaven. I had an intense longing to be a preacher or an elocutionist.

I would sit for hours and plan the kind of sermons I would preach and how I would make my audiences laugh or cry; how in my recitations I would tell boys and girls just what to do to be great men and women. I never had a doubt but what they would do just as I told them, for I was always trying to put into practice what I heard in sermons and recitations.

I went through school and then taught for ten years. But with all of that experience I never reached the point where I could stand before an audience without suffering from stage fright. My heart always went "pit a pat" even if I didn't hear "Whose little girl is that?"

O. B.



A Too Industrious Barber.

Even as a child I showed a firm belief in the equality of the sexes, for my dearest ambition was to be a barber. I cared not a whit for dolls, tea parties, and such feminine amusements.

I generally confined my operations to the parts of the head that would not be noticed by the discerning eyes of the mothers of my chums and myself. But ambition sometimes leads to folly. One afternoon our mothers arrived on the scene just in time to see my playmate's cherished "pigtail" drop to the floor to keep company with the lovely curls that had recently adorned my own head.

Of course there was a scene, a decidedly dramatic one, that completely squelched my ambition. But it was some time before friendly relations between the two families were restored. M. P.

The Pinnacle of Fame.

When quite a young girl, I devoured detective stories. Finally I happened to read one called "The Female Detective." Right then I made up my mind that when I was a little older, I would be a detective. It seemed to me that the pinnacle of fame would be reached when I could slip around the dark streets enveloped in a long dark cloak and change my disguise several times during an evening. Then suddenly feel that I had all the evidence I wanted, and walk boldly up to some deep dyed villain, clap my hand on his shoulder, and say: "You are under arrest for the murder of ——. Doin't make any fuss, and understand that everything you say will be used against you." Then calmly whistle for a policeman, and send him to the lockup.

But instead of realizing that noble ambition, I am a quiet housewife. My most exciting moments are when a whistle on the front steps announces the fact that the meal will not have to grow cold waiting. As I measure just exactly five feet tall, I feel that I chose a more suitable calling. And the man I married is not a detective.

An Ardent Compromiser.

My childhood ambition was to be a great warrior. I would show everybody that a girl could fight. In fact, I was so confident of my warring abilities that I had no trouble imagining myself a second Napoleon. But that was a long, long time ago. I am now an ardent compromiser—that is, at home. I have all that I can do to keep my children from fighting. It is a daily occurrence to bandage up scratched arms and legs. Evidently they inherit the fighting blood.

Of No Consequence.

Because I thought the giving of an engagement ring should be made as inconsequential as possible, I tossed the diamond ring across the room into the lap of my erstwhile fiancee. She fitted it to her finger and seemed delighted. We have now been married five years and she continually reminds me in the presence of others how unfeeling and unromantic I was not to have presented her with the ring in a more graceful manner.

Too Much Conversation.

A friend before he was married would often boast to me of his sweetheart being such a brilliant and entertaining conversationalist.

Now they are married and have a baby of which he is very proud.

The other day I remarked, "Your baby is 2 years old. Strange he has not begun to talk yet."

He replied: "Well, he's a mighty smart chap and I'll bet he'd talk if my wife gave him a chance."

Thirteen Happy Years.

Before my marriage my one great dread was that my husband to be just pretended he loved me and might, after our marriage, discover that I was not the one for him. I felt sure that I could not any such a feeling on my part, and constantly imagined myself losing the first place in his heart.

Now, we've been married thirteen happy years, and I'm sure neither of us ever doubts the other's love. We have a little family, and every action of my husband's daily life speaks of the love he holds for us.

When I hear a married woman advising girls not to get married, I pity her, for I feel sure she has missed the sweet contentment that is hers who is a loved wife and mother.

Girls! Use Lemon Juice!

Make a quarter pint of beauty cream for little cost.
Clears, softens and whitens the skin.
Brings out the hidden roses!

By all means, girls, prepare a lemon lotion to keep your skin flexible and young looking. You will soon realize that true loveliness does not mean the powdery look or waxen colorlessness of some hot-house flower, but is typified by the velvety softness of your skin, your peachlike complexion and rosy-white hands.

At the cost of a small jar of ordinary cold cream one can prepare a full quarter pint of the most wonderful lemon skin softener and complexion beautifier, by squeezing the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White. Care should be taken to strain the juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as freckles, sallowness and tan, and is the ideal skin softener and beautifier.

Just try it! Get three ounces of Orchard White at any pharmacy or toilet counter and two lemons from the grocer and make up a quarter pint of this sweetly fragrant lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms, and particularly rough, red hands. You'll like it immensely.

Genuine Orchard White bears the name, Edward Wesley Co., Cincinnati, Ohio.

ETIQUETTE

By ELIZABETH VAN RENSSELAER

Any question on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope. Please write on one side of the paper only.

COURTESY A WINNER.

THERE is a certain policeman who brings joy to my etiquettish soul. To the driver of every passing motor—and there is an almost continuous stream rolling by him—he bows and smiles in friendly fashion, with an extra little touch of deference in the salute if the driver be of the fair sex. Seldom during a busy day in a rushing city does one meet with such pleasant courtesy.

Why cannot more of us, regardless of our walk of life or duties, school ourselves to be just a little more polite, to add to what may already be deemed sufficient that last small touch of affability that warms the cockles of the hearts of those with whom we come in contact? It requires no great amount of effort, but it does necessitate a sincere desire to please and be pleased in order to be agreeable to all.

As some man has said: "Courtesy is to business and society what oil is to machinery. It makes things run smoothly, for it eliminates all jar and friction." No new thought, to be sure, is here, but a truth that is worthy of study and consideration. Surely those people will succeed whose machinery of manners is best lubricated and runs most easily; and does not each of us yearn to be successful?

M. N.: It is not considered proper for a girl to accept valuable presents from a man to whom she is not engaged. Candy, books, and flowers are permissible presents.

HELEN: It is quite proper to recognize your employer if you meet him with a young woman at a restaurant at noon.

How I Overcame Insomnia

Have you discovered relief from the agony of sleepless nights? Have you found some remedy for broken sleep? If so, won't you please pass your secret on to some poor sufferer from insomnia? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "How I Overcame Insomnia." Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned.
Address Antoinette Donnelly, Chicago Tribune.

Reads Till Sleepy.

I am a stenographer. During the first year of my work in the office I began to lie awake at night. I would go over in detail every letter which I had transcribed during the day. I would fret over every complaint that my employer had made. Every criticism that he had offered, when I met it again in the "still night watches," would assume such fierceness that I knew right there on the spot at 2 o'clock in the morning that I would be fired the first thing the following day. I would carry this idea to the office with me and consequently would be so nervous that I could not do accurate work.

I started to cure myself in this way: I ate a light supper such as cereal and cream, bread and milk, or soft egg and toast. Then I began to prepare for bed early. I allowed an hour to get ready. This was not too much time, for I spent as much energy and enthusiasm on the task as if I had been going to a party. I took a hot bath, manicured, brushed my teeth, gave my hair a hundred strokes (and did not do it up in tight and uncomfortable curlers), massaged my face with a good cold cream, put lotion on my hands, and was ready to hop into bed.

But I didn't—not yet. I slipped on a kimono, curled up in a chair close to the bed and read a good story. When I began to get sleepy I didn't go to bed. I read another story. When I was so sleepy that I either had to get in bed or fall off the chair I did the former.

Not once after this program have I been awake for more than ten minutes. Besides I am so thoroughly prepared for the office as to toilet in the morning that I dress in a short time and a few long breaths in front of my open window equip me for a good day. X.

Right Ways of Living.

Correcting my diet by ceasing to eat promiscuous foods at irregular hours.

Living much in the open air and having my bedroom sunshiny and well ventilated.

On going to bed I banished all thoughts of sleeplessness and other fears.

When sleep was obstinate, I refrained from getting up to read or embroider as formerly, but remained instead passively in bed.

I kept my mind peaceful by quietly realizing that a night of good resting almost equals one of sleep.

In a word, after obeying nature's laws of right living, I conquered sleeplessness by refusing to struggle with it. One cannot court sleep without defeating their purpose. G. W.

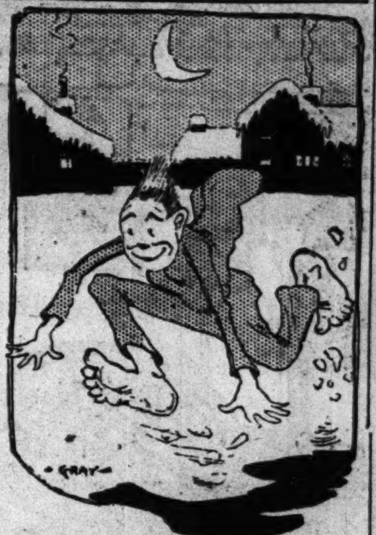
Mr. Fat Departed.

A rather obese young man of good habits was calling regularly to see me. I liked him very much, and my mother approved of him, too. My baby brother often heard the older boys herald his approach in this wise: "Say, Ann, here comes Fat." Much to my chagrin, the last time he called the small brother ambled into the parlor, stood before the young man, and asked: "Are you Mr. Fat?" I was dumfounded, the conversation lagged, and after a short time he excused himself. Needless to say he called no more. J. M.



Barefoot in the Snow.

At night, just before retiring, run barefooted in the snow for a couple of blocks, then plunge the feet in a cold bath and dry vigorously. The result obtained is a feeling of warmth and contentment and an increase in circulation all through the body. After this treatment sleep will not be long in coming.

Many are afraid to try this cure, for fear of catching cold or of freezing the feet, but if one keeps moving and goes through the exercise with snap and vim he need have no fears along this line, and it will prove not only a cure for insomnia but an improvement of health in general. F. T. F.

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

JUST what is it that differentiates a man's bedroom from a woman's? The variance is slight, yet so pronounced that it is instantly recognized. The furniture is pretty much the same, but the general effect distinctly bespeaks the gender.

Men as a rule voluntarily sacrifice the æsthetic to solid comfort. They want neat, practical, necessary things and nothing superfluous.

All that is required of a lamp is that it shall give strong enough light to read well by and that it shall be conveniently placed for writing or reading. It need not be considered as a decorative factor. Whether it has a silk shade or not is unimportant; in fact, the lamp shade that men like best is the type shown here, known as the "orchestra lamp," that shades the eyes and is adjustable.

At least one easy chair should be in the room. A popular type is the Morris chair, which has lately been revived. The cushions may be covered with washable fabric snapped or buttoned on.

Little furniture has been devised that is solely for masculine use. Notable among the new pieces is the chiffonier illustrated. It has a hinged front drawer that pulls out and is intended for shoes and hats. The desk too is "manny" in style with a good writing surface and plenty of leg room. This piece is used in a man's room in place of a dressing table.

The dressing of a man's bed is a simple problem. The best solution I know is to have a day cover made of two breadths of cretonne, sunfast, or any desirable stout fabric, not too light in color. This should measure at least nine feet in length. The two breadths are stitched together down the middle, and hemmed at either end. It requires no trimming.

In making up the bed, when the day cover is laid on, the top edge is folded back, and the pillows laid on the fold. The edge is then drawn up over the pillows to cover them, and the sides tucked in, as seen in the sketch. The effect is that of a spread and bolster, though the whole thing is in one piece. This will be found to be a great saving to the wash, as a substitute for the regulation white bedspread, which is too easily soiled to use in a man's or boy's room.

Men usually have a preference for strong colors. In view of this, deep toned furniture is more desirable for their use than light enamels. Antique oak is a favorite wood. Walnut is suitable. Mahogany is rather fine. Plain sturdy things are best. A new finish is in light brown—the wood used is birch stained and rubbed and treated with a mar-proof finish.

Keep the walls light and neutral. Plain ingrain is in good taste, or flat tone paint, or any small two tone patterned paper, or stripe—but not "pretty flowers" or pink or baby blue.

A man's small room with but one window has the narrow bed drawn up the window to serve also as a window seat. As closet room is limited, a full length drawer on casters is fitted to the space under the bed. A roomy desk table is placed at right angles with the window. This has a chair before it, and another soft brown leather overstuffed chair, with low round back and arms in one piece, completes the furnishing.

The curtains are of ecru homespun embroidered with colored worsted. One oriental rug gives its cheerful fling of color to the room. The lower side walls are of old blue, while the upper walls and ceiling are old ivory.

The furniture and the picture frames used on several Japanese prints are of brown wood. On the bed is a blue denim day cover, with extra pillows of dark blue velveteen topped, with smaller cushions of chintz in gay colors, on an old ivory ground.

When men are allowed to make their own color selections they sometimes hit upon the most unique schemes. Out of about a thousand color tints, hues, and shades, comprised in my collection of color cards, wall paper samples, and bits of fabrics, etc., here are half a dozen of the combinations that men (not professional decorators) have chosen for themselves.

1. Brown and midnight blue floor covering, burnt orange and yellow jaspe stripe side wall, tan upholstery, and deep violet blue drapery traced with apple green.

3. Wall and ceiling the color of raw oatmeal. Woodwork enameled Yale blue, draperies in leaf and ornament pattern, green and blue on an oatmeal ground. Upholstery in olive velveteen invisibly striped with citron, one flame colored cushion.

5. Violet carpet, sage green wall paper overprinted in violet and gold. Ceiling a lighter green. Furniture, mahogany upholstered in rust color and gold. Plain violet draperies.

6. Floor covering of elephant gray. Side walls and ceiling a lighter tint of the same. Draperies light claret color and gray; light brown furniture upholstered in gray and peacock blue. Lamp shade in intense lemon green.

Care must be taken in planning men's rooms that the textural quality of all in them is characterized by strength. Among the suitable materials for curtaining are crash, cretonne—with conventionalized designs (anything but floral sprays), broken stripes are good—casement cloth, unbleached muslin, monk's cloth, arras cloth, cotton rep, and homespun. If glass curtains are used, they should be made of plain voile, preferably ecru.

Answers to Inquiries.

MRS. M. McC.: Four brackets with two candles each would hardly give sufficient light without a cluster candle drop light, or table candles adjusted to a floor plug in addition—forty watts.

* *

MISS V. G.: You failed to describe the character of picture that you wished to have framed. It is not necessary to have all of the furniture in a room made of the same wood. It would be difficult to help you with your refurnishing without knowing what you have on hand to be added to. Do write again and be a little more specific. The general rule in hanging landscapes is to have the horizon line of the picture on a level with the eye.

* *

MISS A C.: Tan linen would be nice for both your table and sideboard. Hemstitch it and embroider the ends in cross stitch. Select a Wilton velvet in small diapered pattern in blue two tone or blue and tan for your living room.

* *

M. A. J.: Could you not use lattice work on your porch? Tan side walls would go well with your brown rugs.

* *

MRS. D. D. T.: Allow your two rooms to remain furnished as they are, but gain variety by changing the curtains. Have old blue velours in the dining room and heavy certonne in large Jacobean figures of Burgundy and evergreen and brown, on an ecru ground, in the living room.

* *

MRS. M. G. G.: No, I should not have a yellow border, but soft linenized cretonne curtains in gray corn color and mignonette green. Have in your room one vase or other small article of deep heliotrope. Let the window cushions be lighter duller heliotrope. Repeat the drapery fabric in your dresser scarf and lay a glass cover over it. Make a day cover for your bed, of heliotrope, like the window cushions. It will be better than the fussy things you have in mind. Let me know how your scheme works out.

* *

MRS. A. H.: Yes, a looking glass would be nice in your hall. If you can, place a narrow shelf or a small table beneath it. Something printed in a small pattern of dull green and tan would be good to make into lambrequins for your windows and mantel shelf. Make them alike, with a scalloped edge trimmed with a narrow mixed braid or narrow fringe. Under the window lambrequins use plain voile curtains, in deep cream color. Your place needs a touch of brilliant rose. Could you have a bright red flowering plant or a lamp with a strawberry silk shade?

* *

M. D. B.: You would gain a better effect of space by having your draperies correspond with your side walls. A striped damask or all over pattern repeating in two tones the side wall color would be best. Shir silk gauze the color of your draperies, to your French door. Place the first rod just at the lower edge of the first row of small panes. Have lambrequins, made on buckrum or wooden frames, trim them with fringe, mix a little blue in your fringe. Let the curtains draw back and forth on rods and rings.

* *

MRS. P. J. A.: Yes, brown mahogany and red mahogany are frequently used together. Use silk gauze draperies in sand color in your living room. Yes, it would be quite correct to repeat the cretonne that you have in your sun room draperies, using some for the seats of chairs. Use small gold color silk shades on the candle lights. The same for the table lamp. In your dining room you might use printed linen in Adam design in shades of blue and ivory. Keep the tints of gold for your shades throughout.

* *

E. S.: A pale russet color would be pretty in the room you describe. A two toned taupe and delicate yellow wall paper could be used to good effect in your dining room with the oak woodwork.

* *

MISS ANNA M. F.: Since your rooms are small the figuring that is done in the decoration should be small. Center lights tend to diminish the size of a room, so if you can dispense with them and use lamps and side lights the room will appear larger. Use rose color for your floor lamp shade. Thussah silks is a good material. Inner draperies are popular. These are made clear to the ground and the glass curtains come only to the sill. Archways are sometimes finished with draperies made on fitted frames. The material is the same as that used for the curtains. The drapery material might also be repeated for your divan cover. I prefer cream to white for window curtains. Sunfast, chintz, cretonne, or silk are all equally popular for drapery.

* *

MR. E. S.: The only objection I see to carrying out your plan is that a set of chairs such as you describe lacks comfort. If you interject into this room several chairs that are really comfortable it will seem more like a living room. Too, some of the rush bottom chairs could be used in some other part of the house and brought back when required to your dining table.

* *

MRS. R. E. S.: Yes, use oyster gray with brown. I think French gray would be nice in your sun room. Have a black ground in the upholstered fabric, but use light sunfast or silk for the draperies with it. Avoid too much black in your sun room.

* *

MRS. R. W. H.: For window draperies with the furniture you describe nothing would be better than some blue gray and white printed linen in Adam design over simple glass curtains of transparent material. No, plate rails are not approved by the best decorators.

* *

MISS A. M.: For your oval library table have a table scarf of brocade and a pair of table lamps. You might use a statue of "Winged Victory" on your book case. Try to match your candlestick for a pair instead of one on the desk. The mantel decoration that you speak of for your drawing room would be utterly impossible. It would be so lacking in dignity that you would certainly come to detest it within a week. A good clock and a pair of vases would be in very much better taste. Generally speaking, a miscellaneous lot of small ornamental objects is undesirable. Select a few and see that these few are really good.

* *

WINTER: Just what do you mean by gold draperies? Do you mean cloth of gold or gold color? Gold tissue would certainly not accord well with mission furniture, whereas gold colored rough silk, or, better yet, heavy linen, would go with it excellently well. A piece of good upholstered cloth bound with galloon would be nice for your library table. Yes, inside draperies could be used in your bedroom. Chintz would be pretty, repeating in the pattern some other color that is used in the side wall. Use bayberry candles in your living room.

* *

G. E. M.: Use taupe for your rug. Let your draperies correspond with your side walls in color. Yes, use a silk shade in place of the glass dome. A light parchment color would be good for your side walls.

* *

MRS. MINNIE S.: No, I should not put a stained window in the living room. If the room is quite dark, this would not help matters. Instead, put in a window of leaded glass. Use casement curtains with it. You did not mention the shape of your piano. A breadth of brocade lined and trimmed with a huge tassel at each corner is being used on pianos by good decorators. Yes, I should dispense with the plate rail in the dining room. Have some light neutral tint throughout for your side walls. Fawn color would be good. A large Axminster rug in deep blue or olive would be a good color for your dining room.

* *

MRS. F. H.: The best effect that you can attain of height in your low ceiling room would be by having it papered in striped paper. If you panel the side walls, see that the panels are long and narrow. Use old ivory enamel for your woodwork. It is the fashion to enamel the stairs and the spindles of the banister old ivory, having the railing and treads stained or painted dark. If you wish to keep to your green scheme, use a light green and tan striped for your living room and verdure pattern in your dining room. Use ecru voile for your curtains in both rooms with dull green crinkled silk for inside draperies.

* *

MISS W.: Use cottage furniture in your bedroom. If possible put a day bed in the sewing room so you could use it as a guest bed in case of emergency. Have a few small windsor chairs and a gate leg table, also a comfortable davenport in your living room, together with one good upholstered chair. Decide upon a triad of some neutral colors and let those be used throughout. Be careful in buying not to overdo. Select as few things as you possibly can get along with and have all of good quality, rather than a lot of cheap things. Turquoise blue, sand color, and olive green would be a good triad of colors. Let the blue be rather pronounced in the bedroom, not using it on the walls, however. Sand color in the living room and olive in the dining room.

* *

MISS ROSE M. E.: I should think that the sample you inclosed would go nicely with the woodwork you describe and don't see why you are discontented with it, and if your floor is in a soft olive shade of green it should be nice, too. I should advise you to leave the woodwork as it is. I think perhaps your trouble lies solely in the shade of green you have chosen for your floor. See that it is properly dulled and I believe you will be satisfied. Green paint is dulled by mixing a little red paint in with it.

Marion Harland's Helping Hand

By Marion Harland

For Invalids and Cripples.

"MY chief reason for writing you is to ask for a couple of names and to say that I will gladly send silk and calico pieces to two or three shut-ins or little cripples if you will please send me their addresses. Also I have about five pairs of infants' white hose which I will gladly send to any one who may need them. I certainly enjoy reading the Corner and my only wish is that I could do more. May the good work go on forever! I have three families here that I care for and they surely appreciate it, and it is a pleasure to me, you may be sure. MRS. J. C. L."

These offers are sure to be accepted promptly and in writing for the address of this correspondent I must repeat the often reiterated request that a stamped, addressed envelope may be sent with the clipping. We are grateful for the kindly things said about the Corner and glad to know of the good work done by Mrs. J. C. L. The names she asked were sent to her by mail.

Dull Evenings for These Boys.

"I have been reading the Corner for some time and am much interested in it. I am writing now to find out if readers may not have some books and magazines for boys and some toys, games, or anything else amusing and entertaining for them. I have three boys, 11, 9, and 2 years of age respectively. We are poor people and the two older boys have to work every day when the weather is good. They plow and hoe and cultivate and pull weeds. They have nothing with which to amuse themselves in the evening when their work is done or on rainy days and I cannot afford to buy them anything. I could not even pay the charges on such articles as any one might be good enough to send, but I would be deeply grateful to any one who could send them something. I think that maybe there will be some one who will care.

"MRS. W. F. W."

I should think there ought to be some one who would care—more fortunate boys or the fathers or mothers of lads who do not have to give up their lives to work. I shall hope earnestly to receive applications for the address of this mother.

* *

Cheer for Invalid Boy.

"Will you please give me the address I desire of the 16 year old boy mentioned in your Corner who is a shut-in? I think I can give him all the cheering he needs, as I am a photographer and I am sure I can send him as many pictures (scenes) as he wishes. RALPH H. C."

The address of the shut-in boy was promptly sent and I am glad to put this manly letter here in the hope that the writer may find other boy correspondents he wishes.

* *

Filling a Hope Chest.

"I am a girl of limited means and am trying to fill a hope box against the time when I shall have a little home of my own to make attractive. Will not some one of the kind Corner sisters send me something to help out? Embroidery or crochet or tatting or anything to help fill up my box would be greatly appreciated. V. S."

I print this because, on the presumption of the truth of the old saying that "Every one loves a lover," it may be that some of our friends will like to contribute to the collection this young woman is making "against the time" of her marriage. But I think we would all have been more interested if she had given us a few details as to when the wedding is likely to take place and what are the circumstances that lead her to ask complete strangers to help her with her outfit. She must be in a good deal of need to make her turn to them in the conditions and I am sure we should all like to know anything she may care to tell us. If there are those who wish to send her some trifles without waiting for further data I shall be glad to supply her name to those who write for it and accompany the inquiry with a stamped, addresed envelope.

* *

Lonely and Poor.

"Will some of the Cornerites who have old house dresses or underwear they no longer need send them to me, a poor, lonely widow, and receive in exchange some nice new quilt tops? I would be so glad to send them in return for the articles I cannot afford to buy for myself. I would also like the address of Mrs. F. G. B., who has two Bibles to give away. Mrs. E. C."

We wish that this exchange might be made and that the friends who have such raiment as they can no longer use and which might be of service to this correspondent would write for her name, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope. The two Bibles offered have already been given away, but some other friend may have a Bible to offer to this lonely woman.

* *

Run Through the Grinder.

"I notice in a recent issue that Mrs. A. M. says to mash the berries with the hand in making jam. An easier and more satisfactory way is to run them through a small grinder. I always have one screwed to the kitchen table to use for crackers, bread crumbs, apple sauce, etc. Any kind of fruit that needs to be cooked to pieces may be run through this grinder and thus shorten the length of time required for cooking. I see that an old woman of 60, M. S., wishes quilt pieces, either cotton or woolen. I have some of both I could send if I had her address. MRS. S. C. D."

I have no doubt that other housekeepers, like myself, will be glad to know of this plan for crushing fruit that is usually boiled to pieces. Those who cook by gas are especially glad to learn of it. M. S., who asked for pieces, has already been supplied, and so I pass on the kindly offer to any one else who cares to accept it.

Years Ago on the Farm.

"I wrote to you some time ago, asking the address of a sick person who said she was in the mountains for her health. I cannot express to you the real joy I have had in corresponding with her and in sending her cheer that I hope she can enjoy. Helping those who can use me is the joy of my life. I am a busy old lady of 63, and I have spent my life in hard work since I was a child of 8, but I take what blessed few minutes I can to write and do what I can.

"I have always led a busy life. I was raised in the fields on a farm and among stock. I bound and pitched wheat, planted corn and covered it later with a hoe, planted potatoes and hilled them several feet apart, dug them when they were ripe, and piled them in heaps and covered them. Then when we could get the team we would lift the potatoes into the wagon. It was no little task for children.

"We used to wheel weeds in a wheelbarrow to feed the hogs all summer and in the fall until the frost killed the weeds. Then later we would wheel pumpkins over half a mile along a fence over rough ground. Even when I was a small child I had to learn how to handle such things. There were two of us girls who did such work. We pitched hay and used it to top wheat stacks and sheds, and it took some strength to lift it, let alone throwing it onto some of the sheds. We worked early and late and had many chores to do. We used to be able to carry a two bushel sack of ear corn on our shoulders and step over a stake and rider fence without putting down the bag. I doubt if I could move such a sack from the ground now, let alone lifting it and tossing it on my shoulder!

"My younger sister and myself were determined to attain some education and we surely worked hard for it. My mother was opposed to it, as she knew if we accomplished what we set out to do she would lose her field hands, so the odds were against us. But we succeeded and had about forty-eight months of schooling by which we won a second grade certificate. I was never in school until I was 13, and those months were scattered over a period of years that ended when I was 25. Some years we would not have as much as three months schooling in the year, but we studied in the winter evenings. We were too late in the fields and at chores to be able to do studying in summer.

"We were a hardy family and, although sometimes we did not get enough of even plain food, we never had a doctor for the children. I am old and well worn now, yet I take care of a good sized house, do all my own work, including laundry, and do all my sewing, not buying any ready made clothes. I make garments for my grandchildren besides, but it keeps me busy! E. G."

I regret this letter is so long and space so limited that I have had to cut out a good deal of it. It gives an interesting picture of what farm life was forty or fifty years ago and of how work was then taken for granted that one would think it impossible to accomplish now. Evidently the writer of the letter does not feel she is any the worse for it, if one may judge by her present efficiency and her ability to manage her home and her employments now.

Donates Fancy Work Magazines.

"I have some more needlework magazines I shall be happy to send to any one who cares enough for them to pay the postage. R. S."

This offer comes from a good Cornerite who has given welcome help before. It will be accepted quickly, for such magazines are always in demand.

* *

Invalid Wants Bible.

"In a recent issue a Bible was offered by a kind Cornerite. Will you try to get a Roman Catholic Bible for an invalid whose greatest enjoyment is reading? She is the eldest member of a large family and desires a Bible to instruct herself and the other members of the household. If you will help the little patient to lighten her burden by giving her the knowledge she craves, I will pass the good word to her nurse.

"M. G."

We have Cornerites who hold all forms of belief, and I trust there may be among them a Roman Catholic who can supply the authorized translation of that church to the little sufferer. I know no one to whom the word of God is of more comfort than to the invalid and the shut-in, and I trust that her craving may soon be satisfied.

* *

All Gone Up in Smoke.

"This is my first letter to the Corner, and I wish to send my mother's way of drying snap beans. Prepare them as for cooking, then string them together with a needle and thread, using white thread, and hang them on nails to dry in the shade. When they are thoroughly dry take them off the thread and put away in a flour sack until needed in the winter. Soak them then in water for five or six hours and cook as you would green beans. If you use young and tender beans for drying, you will have a better result than in using those that are entirely ripe. They are fine dried in this way. Be sure never to let them dry in the sun.

"I am writing to the Helping Hand not only to send this recipe, but in the faith that they will help some young friends of mine who were married last spring. They began farming and of course until they had everything they wanted they did not stop spending money and now it has all gone up in smoke. Everything they owned except what they had on their backs was burned. They were not at home at the time and so did not succeed in saving anything. As most farmers don't get any money until fall, they are in a bad fix. They had a four room house nicely furnished, a parlor organ that cost $70, a marble top bedroom suite—everything of the best, and without a cent of insurance on it.

"If any one can help them I know how much it will be appreciated. They need everything and would be glad of anything. I am sending them a cook stove, but that is all I am able to do. The wife's signature is Mrs. F. H. I do hope some one can help them.

"MRS. A. S."

This letter is interesting. In the first place we are glad to get a proven recipe for drying beans. So much is said of this work this year and we are all making so many efforts to conserve food for use next winter that any instructions in this line are more welcome than ever before. We are also much concerned for the young people who have met with such reverses at the beginning of their married life. The Cornerites will be eager to help them, and I shall be more than glad to receive letters asking for the address. I hope at least some of the losses may be repaired. In writing for the address please do not fail to inclose the clipping and a stamped, addressed envelope.

Girl Asks Camera.

"I am a girl of 15 and I have not much means of enjoying myself, as I work and the little salary I earn goes to help my mother, who is a widow. I would like much to have a camera, but I cannot afford to buy one. Would one of your more fortunate readers who may have a discarded camera send it to me? You cannot imagine how happy it would make me feel! ROSE."

Sometimes there is a "run" of requests for cameras, but lately there have been fewer of these pleas and this encourages me to hope that the desire of Rose may be gratified. A young girl who has to work and who is sufficiently dutiful to turn her salary over to her widowed mother instead of expending it upon personal pleasures certainly deserves any happiness that can be thrown in her way. I hope one of our "more fortunate readers" may have the camera asked for and may write to me soon for Rose's address, sending the clipping and a stamped, addressed envelope for reply.

* *

Needs Artificial Leg.

"I am a boy 14 years old and have been wearing an artificial leg for six years. It is now broken, so I need a new one badly. As I cannot afford to get one and need it so much I wish you would assist me by publishing this in your Corner and tell your readers how thankful I would be for help. F. H."

Here is a case to appeal to all of us who are interested in growing boys. As a matter of course we do not print appeals for money through the Corner, but it may be that some one is in a position, by means of some connection with charitable organizations, to put the boy in the way either of getting the artificial leg free of cost or of securing it at so great a reduction that he may be able to manage the payment for it himself. Whatever may be the means of helping him will be decided by circumstances, but I hope most sincerely that some method may present itself or be devised by some of our lovers of young people who are eager to help this lad. It is bad enough to be crippled in childhood; it is worse when one is handicapped by poverty and unable to make one's own way without aid. Please inclose a stamped, addressed envelope when sending for the address of F. H. And pray bear in mind that he who gives quickly gives twice, according to the old proverb.

* *

Would Help the Sick.

"Should any readers of the Helping Hand have a graphophone and new or used records they would like to pass on where sunshine would be given in the gift I would like to suggest sending such to our county hospital. I was told by a physician that this would be an inestimable help to the patients. To facilitate matters he would gladly call for such an instrument. Surely we should not forget these poor within our gates. AN OBSERVER."

Many are the calls for graphophones and other musical instruments of this sort from private persons and for the benefit of organizations, etc. I agree with "Observer" that we should not forget the poor within our gates and I shall be glad to give the name of the doctor on receipt of the request for this, accompanied by a stamped, addressed envelope. These lonely and forlorn have a claim upon us which we cannot for our own sakes as well as for theirs afford to ignore.

* *

No Acknowledgment of Gift.

"I sent to Mrs. L. H. three balls of crochet thread, and have not even heard if she ever received it. I even sent her a stamped envelope with my address on it and have had no word from her.

"MRS. M. E. N."

Accidents of this sort will occur occasionally and I am always sorry for them. It is quite possible that either the package or the acknowledgment went astray and I hope that the appearance of this mention may help to clear the matter up. I am loath to believe that one of our constituency would be guilty of such discourtesy as is indicated. Sometimes illness or absence accounts for delay.

* *

Asks for a Large Bible.

"I see in the Corner that some one has offered two large Bibles and I write to you in the hope that I may be able to get one of them. I would be sure to appreciate it and I would be glad to pay the postage. I have a real small Bible and am just crazy about having a larger one and cannot afford to get it. So will you please help me to win one through the Corner? I hope there may be such a Bible for me that is owned by some one more fortunate than I. MRS. M. C. G."

I am sorry to say that both the large Bibles offered had been given away to others before this application was received. But is there not some one else who can spare a Bible to this correspondent? In most Bible reading households there are likely to be several copies of the book of books and surely no better use could be made of an extra copy than to send it to one who has such a desire for it as is voiced by Mrs. M. C. G. There are organizations which supply religious reading to those unable to purchase it, and I hope that through one of these means or the kindness of some individual Cornerite this wish soon may be granted.

GIRLS! BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR WITH 'DANDERINE'

Get a 25 Cent Bottle! Freshen Your Scalp! Stop Falling Hair! Remove Dandruff! Grow Lots of Wavy, Glossy, Beautiful Hair—You Can!

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you can not have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?—Advertisement.

LATE CANNING.

SINCE canning, and the easier kinds, is now going on, and since the experiences as reported ought to bring home to us many lessons, it is our duty to call attention to them, though newer subjects might be found to write about.

Once during the summer just past, a national canning demonstrator, in talking to a few of us, began by saying that he had just come from following in another state in the wake of twenty-seven different demonstrators. A little droll emphasis put on the statement made us see the picture and smile at what we saw.

For reasons not entirely disinterested some demonstrators, influential and uninfluential alike, are still working to defeat the fundamental principle the Benson school of canners has tried to build up, a single standard, instead of so many and confused methods. In some cases it is mere egotism on the part of demonstrators that keeps them clinging to practices not consistent with this standard.

When Mr. Benson began his work with the boys and girls, there were about as many different methods of canning as there were women in the United States. I heard him that first year, and I know how like a giant he has worked to establish a standard or single and effective method. It happens to be the method which the real scientists in the great commercial canning laboratories have worked out, for food manufacturers do employ men of the highest scientific training in order to perfect their product.

We can but consider it unfortunate that in a later canning bulletin than [illegible], both the old household method of intermittent sterilizing, so overcooking, and that of sterilizing without completely covering with water, are both indorsed. It is a little unfortunate that our food teachers are some of them specializing so far that they neglect to acquire that overlapping knowledge that would make their work more sound. Of course, others assume to know everything. There is a middle ground. Sometimes a knowledge of the thing nearest related to what we are doing is most fundamental to the best work in our specialty.

* *

Two people prominent in the older school of cookery are not lending their aid to the standardizing and simplifying of household canning. It is uncharitable to say they do not do it because some of what they have printed would then be obsolete. Let us just say they are "set" in their ways. I heard one the other day hedging between the two methods, seeming to identify herself with the new, but showing where she was unconverted, so as on the whole to leave but a muddled impression of what was best. This is what the Benson method is working against—muddled ideas.

So much about trouble makers. Now as to troubles. I have been somewhat of a trouble forum this season, and have also heard much from others in the same position. All evidences seem to indicate that the canning of green beans has been the thing that the amateur canner has most frequently failed with, and greens come next. As city markets are now constituted these are both things that we might almost any day in the year, for the sake of perfecting ourselves in canning, though it might often be expedient, from the expense standpoint, to do so. However, success is easier in cool weather, hot weather being most favorable to the growth of millions of kinds of invisible living things which are difficult to destroy, while being most destructive to foods.

Right now we may profitably can Swiss chard, and right here might be incorporated a sermon on that eternal theme of cleanliness. Every step in canning is really a cleanliness step. The first, or the removal of visible and gross dirt, is the easiest thing to do, but failure in canning is often due, I think, because this is not thoroughly done. It was rather clean people who used to say that we had to eat a peck of dirt in our lives anyway, so a little here and there did not matter. We hold different views today. No one ever claimed that visible dirt is beneficial, and now we know that that invisible dirt may be most harmful, and that it may come even from a fly's foot.

* *

Some of us are planning food storage in city basements, and the most complicating fact is that rats and mice too often abound even in the basements of high class buildings. They carry infection, or a terrible form of dirt, on their feet and fur, which is less visible generally than the results of their hunger depredations. The fur of a country mouse may be clean, but—well, you know.

In order to be able to write in the most careful way about the washing of greens, I spent the time to prepare a large bunch of Swiss chard the other day, though I seldom feel that I can spend the time to prepare this delicious green, the delicacy of which is spoiled by any bit of dirt. I give my results below, but it can be remembered that market chard, like market carrots, is no end dirtier than that in the well cared for home garden, watered with a hose. The surface of green beans is often much dirtier than most people seem to realize. They can have a coating of dust without its being visible to the untrained eye. I bought my beans in the cleanest of places and had no failures.

I have one other conclusion that should be mentioned. It is based on the facts about failures that have come to me, looking on at a canning world that has at times seemed as confused as the Russia of today, and partly because of so many dictators. Here is a sentence from a late article on Russia that amateur canners might apply to themselves and take to heart. The article begins thus: "A skillful beginner at the game of international politics is just as rare as a skillful beginner at the game of bridge whist."

Too many women without the most commonplace knowledge about foods have thought they could do cold pack canning skillfully, after seeing a demonstration or two or after reading, superficially, a bulletin on the subject. I am sorry to say that some of the government demonstrators have encouraged their hearers to believe that cold pack canning is that easy. If they could give a crystal clear demonstration, to crystal clear minds, endowed with perfect memories, as some unincumbered minded children have, this might be. But I am sure that there are many people who discredit cold pack canning because they have not the habit or ability to blame themselves for anything, and have no sense of what skill means.

Preparing Swiss Chard.

Probably the best way to cook Swiss chard is to treat the stem and leaves separately, the stem being put up like asparagus, and the leaves like spinach. Cut off each stem, trim off any defacement, and wash each separately as in cleaning celery, using a knife to scrape off the dirt, if necessary. Also wash each leaf separately, but on each side. A great deal of dirt collects around the veins of the under side of the leaf, therefore each individual leaf needs attention on that side. Everybody knows that dust and water make mud, and the dirt on chard is mainly that.

The leaves of chard may be cooked as we cook spinach, with no more water than clings to them, but the stems must be cooked in enough water to cover. The latter, like the center of a young dandelion, and a few other less well known things, if daintily prepared, are a sort of vegetable lobster. All of the twenty-eight greens, beginning with Swiss chard, listed in farmers' bulletin [illegible], are blanched for fifteen minutes and cooked for two hours in a hot water bath.

In cold dipping it is well to separate the mass with the hand, so that it will be cooled to the center, since if it stands for a short time at a tepid temperature "flat sour" flavor results. If greens are cooked too long they shrink too much, but the time of cooking can only be shortened when the first part of the process has been of the cleanest and most thorough.

Eating Canned Greens.

Cold Swiss chard in particular may be heated so as to be like a deliciously prepared French vegetable, if first drained of all liquid, chopped, and even after that rubbed through a course sieve and then heated up gently in a tablespoon or two of butter, using according to taste or affluence. Twist the white pepper mill once or twice over the greens to give them life, or the Dutch way would be to grate a little nutmeg over them. Serve plain or for elegance a Hollandaise sauce may be used.

Canning Tomatoes.

Because of their acid content tomatoes can be more safely canned by the open kettle method than can any other of the vegetables, but if you want them whole the cold pack method is the only one to use, and around the whole tomatoes may be poured, instead of water, a little cooked tomato. The time for sterilizing a quart is twenty minutes. For a pint less time by two or three minutes is undoubtedly safe, and cooking overtime impairs the flavor of tomatoes. Open kettle canned tomatoes, if dark instead of a brilliant light shade, have been overcooked. If tomatoes are ripe one minute of scalding to remove skin is all they will stand, but those firm or not fully ripe need three minutes. The partly ripe tomatoes canned make a vegetable soup of unusually fine flavor.

Sirups for Drying.

There are other fruits besides cherries which are fine if cooked first in a sirup, or perhaps it would be best to say second in a sirup, because the citron melon, quinces, pumpkin, etc., should always be cooked in plain water first, as a sirup of any density used first causes them to shrink, as it does pineapple. A government formula for a sirup for dried fruits has one part of water to sixteen of sugar, but account must always be taken of the amount of water in the fruit which will cook out into the sirup. This is all right for cherries, but I have not proved it with other things.

A CHILD DOESN'T LAUGH AND PLAY IF CONSTIPATED

Look, Mother! Is tongue coated, breath feverish and stomach sour?

"California Syrup of Figs" can't harm tender stomach, liver, bowels.

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish; stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is ofttimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."—Advertisement.

The Indoor Season Is Here

These Earlier Twilights and Longer Nights are Reminders that Another Winter is Coming—that Home Comforts are Again the Order of the Day

DO the young people gather about your home fireside these long evenings? Home's attractions are largely a matter of comfortable, inviting homefurnishings. The lure of outdoors is waning—you will spend more time at home as it grows colder. Create a real home for yourself and your children—furnish it in such a manner that it will be a constant source of satisfaction and pleasure to all the family. Remember, these days, good furniture is not a matter of cost, but of selection! Let Hartman's, the world's greatest homefurnishing organization, show you how to efficiently combine quality, style, service and true economy.

News and Views of the Theaters

By Percy Hammond.

ANOTHER Little theater burgeons at the Fine Arts building in the nook from which Maurice Browne recently retreated. Its title, "The Philistine," is said to be symbolic of its intention to entertain the dramatic middle class with sane, simple, and appealing items from a copious repertory of one acters. To emphasize the sanity and simplicity of the institution a charge of 99 cents will be made for each of the ninety seats. An even dollar, it appears, would be insane and artificial. The impresarios are Helen and Elijah Cook, whose endeavors here with the Playshop players have been obscure, though of good repute. They seem reasonably sure of their ability to entertain. "If you have ever been bored by toy theater performances," they write, "drop in some evening at 8:15 and see the difference."

* * *

Similar promises have been made by similar enterprises ever since Bottom and his Attic amateurs founded the first Little theater. Mr. Walker and his company and the Washington Square players have proved, however, that fulfillment is not impossible and Mr. and Mrs. Cook may therefore be dropped in on with a reasonable degree of hope. The initial bill is "Pierrot and the War," by Louis Ellsworth Allen Jr.; "The Egg and the Hen," by Kenneth Sawyer Goodman and Ben Hecht; "Cabined," by Florence Kiper Frank, and "The Dead Eyes," by H. H. Ewers. The last item, described in the prospectus as "the greatest short drama of the decade," will have its first American performance on Monday evening.

* * *

Bayard Vieller, author of "The 13th Chair," promises THE TRIBUNE that in an early issue he will enlighten its show-critic on certain incredulities, skepticisms, perplexities, misgivings, unbeliefs, and distrusts expressed concerning the play's structure. These, it will not be recalled, had to do with the supernatural conduct of the doors and windows in the death chamber, the unique actions of the murderer's knife, and other confusing items of the story.

* * *

Frederic Hatton mildly resents the indignant charge of the New York critics that he has calumniated the Long Island bourgeoisie in "Upstairs and Down." He says that he has attended insular house parties that he and Mrs. Hatton might have written themselves. "In fact," he maintains, "we didn't tell half the truth." Also Mr. Hatton found the "baby vampire" in real life, where there are a lot more of her. "One in particular," states Mr. Hatton, who steps about a bit, "has upset Chicago. She's almost too well known in social circles and she went east a while ago and caused a prominent New Yorker a lot of worry."

* * *

The "baby vampire" and Miss Ethel Stannard, who plays it, recall how fecund an incubator for actresses the old La Salle chorus used to be. Among its ornaments in the Singer days were Miss Stannard, Miss Leonore Ulrich, Miss Peggy O'Neill and Miss May Thompson, all of them now important figures in entertainment and the drama.

* * *

Miss Ulrich has left the film ateliers to appear for a time under Mr. Belasco's ægis in "Tiger Rose," beginning in New York last week. In this she performs as the wild flower of a Hudson bay trading post, in love with a Young Engineer who is unjustly accused of murder.

* * *

Otis Skinner, departing from his customary decorum, will break the Sabbath this evening by playing "Mister Antonio" at Powers'. This infraction of good behavior is undertaken for the benefit of those baseball visitors who wish to blend art with their athletics.

* * *

When Lew Fields arrived at the Century theater, New York, for rehearsal the other day, he found his 18 year old son, Herbert, among the actors. "I wanted you to be a bank president," protested Mr. Fields, "and you turn out to be a mummer!" "It's in the blood, pop," said the boy—or at least he is said to have said so.

* * *

"The Land of the Free," a dramatization of Fannie Hurst's fairy stories of the busy basements, is pronounced an entertainment in New York. Miss Florence Nash impersonates a Russian-Jewish immigrant who turns into a resourceful business woman with great rapidity.

* * *

The hair of Miss Nora Bayes will be the subject of this week's deep thinking by New York vaudeville patrons. Audiences at the Palace theater will be provided with slips of paper upon which to write, if possible, what color they prefer Miss Bayes' tresses to be—their natural gray or a hue more theatrical.

* * *

Walter Catlett, who was assigned to succeed the splendid and spectacular Mr. Lowell Sherman in "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," declined to do so for the reason that, with Miss Florence Moore and John Cumberland in the cast, the play had enough comedians. To paraphrase a story of the late Sir Herbert Tree, he was afraid that too many cooks would spoil the brothel.

* * *

A brash, fresh youth, reeking of the vigor and vivacity of the middle west is among the characters of Booth Tarkington's "The Country Cousin." Members of Mr. Tarkington's set in New York say that he had ex-Senator Beveridge in mind when he wrote the rôle.

* * *

Lieut. Sousa desires to instruct the benighted youth of the middle west in other things besides wood-winds and brasses. While the Great Lakes band is in the east he will give it a clambake, and he aims, it seems, to make the festival academic rather than alimentary. Here are his orders to the cooks:

"I want to show my men a real lobster and a clam that is actually in the shell. Hitherto they have seen them only in cans. It is a fact that of my 200 musicians not one of them has ever smelled salt water. They are middle and far westerners and their experience on the high seas has been confined to the Mississippi river and the lakes of Wisconsin and Minnesota.

"While in Chicago they have tasted the waters of Lake Michigan, but not one of them has ever seen the surf, or a lobster in his native state. They think they are a fruit, because when taken from a can there is no evidence of a shell. Our cornetist asked me if they grew on a bush. So I want the finest clambake I can get for them. If it is too late for watermelon and green corn, get more clams and some roast oysters."

* * *

Dr. James Prendergast is the name of William Hodges' next reincarnation. The doctor is the proprietor of a sanitarium in the Blue Ridge mountains of Virginia, the only American locality, it is said, about which no song has been written. "A Cure for Curables" is still the title of the drama, and the authors are Earl Derr Bigger and Lawrence Whitman, under which pseudonym Mr. Hodge writes his own stuff.

* * *

Harry Lauder, now on the sea en route to America, will start westward from New York on Oct. 25. When the location of the mobilizing centers permits Mr. Lauder on his tour will visit the camps and tell the soldiers of his son, Capt. John Lauder, who fell at Arras.

* * *

Miss Eleanor Painter, a prima donna of musical comedy, has renounced song for drama and will soon appear in "Art and Opportunity." It is by Harold Chapin, the young American poet, who was killed in action at Loos.

* * *

The plans of Messrs. Cohan and Harris to organize a Chicago company for "A Tailormade Man" are hindered by difficulties in finding a substitute for Grant Mitchell. William Collier, who played Mr. Mitchell's rôle in the No. 2 company of "Never Say Die," might, under Mr. Cohan's instruction, manage to act the part pretty well.

* * *

In Henry Arthur Jones' "The Pacifists" the leading character is a bully. He is the village butcher, who beats women and is otherwise untractable. His neighbors hire a reputable pugilist to beat him up, and the ensuing fisticuffs are regarded as emblematic of the present Armageddon.

* * *

As Clara Kummer's "The Rescuing Angel," Miss Billie Burke marries a dull millionaire, then grows tired of him and at the end learns to love him after he has proved that he has pep. "The Rescuing Angel" is in New York tomorrow night.

* * *

Miss Florence Holbrook, once of Lean and Holbrook, is to come out of the twilight in "Baby Face," a comedy by Howard McKeat Barnes, author of "Her Unborn Child."

* * *

Mr. Lean's whereabouts are reported to be the Century theater, New York, where, with the current Mrs. Lean, Miss Cleo Mayfield, he will perform in "Miss 1917" for Messrs. Dillingham and Ziegfeld.

* * *

From Sir Arthur Pinero, Percy Burton learns that Mme. Bernhardt once planned to play "Iris," whose American actor was Miss Virginia Harned. "You are adding to your wonderful experiences," writes Sir Arthur to Mr. Burton, "by serving that amazing woman, Mme. Bernhardt. Please present my humble duty to madame, should opportunity present itself. She rehearsed a play of mine once—'Iris'—and then never acted it; and I suffer from the disappointment—tell her—to this day!"

* * *

Conrad Nagel, who acts the role of the ardent dipsomaniac in "The Man Who Came Back," made his first appearance in the role at the Princess theater opening. Before joining Mr. Brady's evangelical travelogue he was of the Little theaters, writing for and playing in them. Gregory Kelly of "Seventeen" used to be in vaudeville with Gus Edwards' "School Days," arriving at the reticule drama via Ben Greet, Mrs. Fiske, Otis Skinner, and Joseph Jefferson.

* * *

Editorial of the Day as spoken in "Out There" by Miss Laurette Taylor, as a cockney nurse, haranguing a London multitude from the foot of Nelson's statua:

"O' course, we got conscription, but I want t' talk t' them conshi-henshus hobjectors an' pacissyfists as says they don' believe in war.

"W'at do it matter if they don' b'lieve in war? Bli me! 'oo does aatside o' the 'uns?

"Don' b'lieve in it?

"'Ere it is!

"Y' carn't tell Gawd y' don't b'lieve in death an' expec' t' live f'r hever jus' because y' said it.

"Y' know, the 'ole world carn't be wrong abaat the 'uns. Look at America! Wasn't she tolerant? Germany said: 'She won' come in! She's too busy caantin' 'er money!' But America has come in—wiv both 'an's—an' both feet—and hairaplanes!

"D' you know w' a Hamerican general said about hairaplanes? 'E said as 'ow a fleet of hairaplanes was the proper brood o' the Hamerican heagle. An' I 'opes as the heagle proves a rabbit at it!

"Pacissyfists! An' conshi-henshus hobjectors! W't kind o' fellers are they? Jest as we're lickin' the henemy, an' lickin' 'em good, they stan's up an' says: ''Ere! W't re y' doin'? I want peace!' 'E wants peace! So do hi! So do we all! But we don' want no 'alf peace, an' then 'ave t' go through it all over again as soon as the henemy's 'ad time t' git 'is bloomin hefficiency workin'. This 'as got t' be the hend o' war. An', t' make it so, we got t' beat the fellers as thinks nothin', does nothin', an' schemes nothin' but war!

"I tell y' boys, them fellers 'as got t' be licked, an' licked good, until the very word war maikes 'em sick to 'ear it.

"So come along, pacissyfists an' conshi-henshus hobjectors, be reasonable! Y' know, you're silly, talkin' peace wiv the 'Un insultin' y' all 'e knows 'aa. It's no use a-goin' t' meet the henemy wiv on'y peace an' goodwill in y'r 'an's. 'Ave peace an' goodwill in y'r 'earts, but f'r Gawd's saike 'ave some s'rapnel in y'r 'ans. Give the 'Un the on'y sort o' fightin' e' understan's. Put a gun on y'r shoulder, an' advarnce singin' the song o' 'ate because 'e knows it's true—our 'Song of 'Ate!'

"We stopped you at the Marne,
An' we beat you on the Aisne;
We gave you 'ell at Neuve Chapelle,
An' 'ere we are, yes, 'ere we are again.

"The French stopped you at Verdun,
An' y' carn' fergit E-pree;
An' naa Hamerica's 'ere to 'elp us, so
It's up the pole with Germany."

Madame Bernhardt's Hymn of Hate

"A Prayer for Our Enemies," which, written by a French soldier, is recited by Madame Sarah in "Du Theatre au Champ d'Honneur," is translated by Charles Henry Meltzer thus:

Thou who, they say, rewardest sacrifice,
Thou who dost weigh and judge all men's ideals,
Liege Lord and Master of the whole wide world,
Buckler and Shield of innocents who suffer—
Thou before whom the pride of evil bows;
When the dread hour of justice shall be tolled
For us and for the foes 'gainst whom we strive—
Thou, Lord, who fathomest their inmost soul,
Do not forgive them—they know what they do!

They have drenched the book of history with blood,
Tearing up treaties and betraying oaths,
By them the nations have been swiftly swept
Back to the very brink of darkest night!
And when, by an effort of heroic will,
One nation had welcomed death before dishonor,
They nailed it to the cross without a tremor.
Thou, Lord, who fathomest their inmost soul,
Do not forgive them—they know what they do!

O, Thou, whom they have dared to call their Leader,
Thou, unto whom they do not fear to pray,
Lord, in Thy Day of Wrath, which soon shall dawn,
Let loose against them all Thy winds and storms!
Though they repent, heed not their penitent words,
Let not Thy mercy blossom when they sorrow.
For them heap shame on shame, renew disaster!
Thou, Lord, who fathomest their inmost soul,
Do not forgive them—they know what they do!

Let hunger torture them; O, let them know
The uttermost anguish of the Avenging Law!
Their hearts aflame with hatred and revolt,
Let them see Peace forever shun their shores;
And may they know the day, as we have known it,
When ruthless warriors of the Power of Night,
Their temples shall lay waste and maim their babes,
And violate the dear women whom they love.
Thou, Lord, who fathomest their inmost soul,
Do not forgive them—they know what they do.

Drown them in tears. Let nothing they may do
Wipe out the horror of their inhuman crime.
May they pay doubly for the pain we suffer.
Smite them, O Lord, with thy relentless hand,
Until the day when, to redeem our race,
Thy vengeance, in its sure and even course,
Shall efface them from the world of men forever!
Thou, Lord who fathomest their inmost soul,
Do not forgive them—they know what they do!

MATTERS of MUSIC

A Piece, Not in the Routine, Concerning the First Orchestra

By Frederick Donaghey.

THIS is about the First Orchestra—the Chicago Orchestra, that is—and about Mr. Stock. To write about either or both for today is indicated as a duty in the routine: it is the Sunday before the season opens. A piece about the Orchestra is the rubber-stamp thing to do, like one about the thinning lines of veterans for Memorial Day, or on the disadvantages of fulminatory patriotism for the Fourth. Most of the expected things have, of course, been said on the corresponding Sunday in other years—said, verbally varied, over and over. See files.

It would be easy to say some or all of them again—as easy as copying out of back-numbers; and to do so would be just as sincere and beneficent as it would be enterprising, and, I suspect, no more. My sought point is that most of what is written, this year and next, in the let's-do-something-for-the-Orchestra mood is of the precise evangelical value of a column of stuff explaining that the lake rolls east of the city's Chemin des Dames. The lake does. The Orchestra annually goes through a schedule; and its doing so is, in the let's-do-something fervors, viewed as if it were a process of nature, like the lake's rolling, or something not to be avoided, as the bad paving in Sheridan road.

That the Orchestra is Chicago's best æsthetic asset has been blandly admitted—because, perhaps, it could not with facility be disputed: one of George Ade's best Fables was written to point the moral that any fellow may win when there is no competition. So, in this easy and casual regard, one season of the Orchestra has been just like another, as if it performed a harmless, amiable function automatically, happy in having survived its period of mendicancy and experiment, and asking only that it should not be overlooked in the listing of the city's decorative possessions. That it is, and that it has for some years been, the First Orchestra has not, I believe, been so much as intimated; and there has been like continence as to the notion that Mr. Stock is [although not necessarily by that token] the First Conductor. Yet, it is: and he is.

A new-comer ten years ago, the catalogue of my inquiries contained one as to the identity of Theodore Thomas' successor; the reply was that none had yet been chosen. Somebody, I was certain, must be in direction. "Oh, yes—one of the viola-players: his name's Stock—Fred Stock." Pursuit of the subject elicited the information that he was in charge for the time being—the directors, I ought to know, could not offhand arrange for just the right man. "They'll get one of the big fellows from the other side, of course—Weingartner, or maybe Nikisch." Later, after a concert or two, I cautiously, timidly, gave words to the belief that it was a good orchestra; and I was restored to my proper place with this—I seem to be certain of the quotation:

"It is, because that's the kind of an orchestra Mr. Thomas left: it's going along on what he taught. You couldn't very well expect men who learned under him to go to pieces as soon as he was dead."

That was early in 1907. One of the viola-players is still in charge for the time being: the big men remain on the other side, or, if imported, are employed in communities other than Chicago. Meanwhile, the Orchestra has achieved primacy when considered with all other orchestras in the world. It may be that it has been whipped and lashed and urged on the Via Dolorosa to this supremacy by the spirit of its founder: that the Thomas impetus is so formidable an energy in the belief of the musical gentleman who gave corrective answers to the foolish questions of my Chicago immigrancy, remains potent after thirteen years. I don't believe in the theory; and I do believe in the viola-player in charge for the time being.

The theory, itself, persists; or, which is the same thing, it is given underlined expression when apposite. It was aired airily in the foyer of the Auditorium on the nights when Mr. Stock was doing better than any other conductor of the generation could have done with Mahler's massive symphony. No Friday-afternoon or Saturday-night intermission is properly observed unless it is given voice. Earnest, emotional beings are they who hold it—men and women whose eyes glow and whose nostrils quivver; and they hate those who do not believe as Hoover hates a fat man.

I should be happy if able to impart to what I say of the Orchestra and of Mr. Stock something of the quality of fiat: to know that my saying so made it so beyond demonstration. For demonstration in matters of the kind is not easy. A process were to have all other orchestras come to Chicago; another, to send the First to all other cities with orchestras regarded as competitive in quality. Neither way is likely to be taken for the mere purpose suggested. Even the one ensemble to which Mr. Stock's is, in the estimation of many honest persons, second, the Boston Orchestra, is, through a booking mix-up, unable to find Chicago refuge for an afternoon. With that here for the comparison, the others could with perfect fairness be eliminated.

Any tourney of the kind would, I am nearly beyond adding, have value only for those who wish to know—for the missourians of the neighborhood: they may be trusted to discern the woods when the obtruding trees are taken away.

Notes.

The music-store ask nine dollars for a copy of the vocal score of Puccini's new opera, "La Rondine." A dozen excellent golf-balls cost just that sum. Besides, the opera is out of the Metropolitan's schedule for the season, for reasons which are vague as worded by the management. Behind them appears to be the charge, noted some time ago in THE TRIBUNE, that Puccini is in Allied disfavor with respect to this opera because of the belief that its libretto is Boche-made.

Victor Herbert is the legally-appointed umpire in the litigation based on a Seattle lady's charge that she wrote the tune of "A Long Way to Tipperary" to words celebrating the glory of apples grown in her neighborhood.

Margaret Namara, who has been in light opera, seeks recognition and reward as a recital-singer. She is, off-stage, the wife of Guy Bolton, librettist of "Oh! Boy!" and numerous other pieces high in favor. She is of the belief that to be advertised as just Namara is piquant.

Miss Carolina Lazzari

She is one of the new contraltos listed by Campanini, and is scheduled for a role in the first-night opera, Mascagni's "Isabeau," as yet unknown in the United States.

This is the way Mr. Campanini's reasons for omitting German opera were expressed in the New York City newspapers:

"This is in deference to sentiments of the American public. We have always given German music as liberal representation as French or Italian in this institution. However, we realize that even the most fair-minded American who has a friend or relative facing destruction Over There cannot sit and listen with equanimity to music created in the enemy country."

Marie Kaiser, who sang in this year's Evanston festival, is now, in the billing, Marie de Kizer: she explains that is the way her forebears in Holland spelled it.

Jenny Dufau is listed for a recital in the afternoon of the 28th instant in Orchestra Hall.

Josef Urban is to take part in the resuscitation of "Faust" by the Metropolitan Opera: it has been gone for a long, long time from the répertoire there. He is to paint the backgrounds against which Farrar, Martinelli, and Amato will sing.

The Apollo Club's schedule for the season lists "The Messiah," December 28 and 30; "The Veil" and "The Swan and the Skylark," in February; and Verdi's Te-Deum and Berlioz' Requiem in April.

The Week's Music

THE twenty-seventh season of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra will be opened Friday afternoon and Saturday night, in Orchestra Hall. Mr. Stock's program for the first pair of concerts is made up of the overture to Wagner's "Rienzi," Beethoven's fourth [the "Pastoral"] symphony, Chadwick's ballade called "Tam-o'-Shanter," Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun," Delius' Dance-Rhapsody, and Casella's rhapsody called "Italia."

Flotow's "Martha" will be revived tomorrow night for the second week of the Boston English Opera Company in the Strand Theater, and will be continued until and including Sunday night. Joseph Sheehan and Hazel Eden will be vis-à-vis in the first performance.

3:00 Today—First public performance by Arthur Dunham's new orchestra, the Philharmonic, in a series of fifteen Sunday-afternoon concerts: Rita Fornia, a mezzo of the Metropolitan Opera, will be today's soloist. Illinois Theater.

3:00 and 4:15 Today—Chicago Concert Ensemble, under George Dasch, in the first of the eighth season's series of Sunday-afternoon concerts. Fullerton Hall, Art Institute.

3:00 Today—Marie Sundelius, Edna Gunnar Peterson, Amy Emerson Neill, Gustaf Holmquest, and Edgar Nelson in concert for the benefit of the Swedish Societies' Old People's Home Association. Orchestra Hall.

3:30 Today—Maximilian Pilzer, violinist, in recital. Opening of Mrs. Levy's season. The Playhouse.

4:00 Today—First of a series of Sunday musicales under Esther Mullin Palmquist. Edgewater Beach Hotel.

11:00 Wednesday—Burton Thatcher, basso-cantante, in recital: Ziegfeld Theater.

4:30 Thursday—Organ-recital by Eric DeLamarter: no fee. Fourth Presbyterian Church.

8:15 Friday—Chicago Concert Ensemble, with Grant Kimbell, tenor, and Isaac Van Grove, pianist, in concert. Community Hall, Oak Park.

Miss Lillian Ross in "SEVENTEEN"

Lillian Ross, whose playing of the terrible 10 year old Jane in "Seventeen" is a notable feature of the delightful performance at the Playhouse, confesses to 18 years of age, and when offstage looks not more than 14. She is remarkable among the actresses of child rôles, not only for her skill, but for her legs, which are remarkably true to pinafore character.

She is a daughter of the theater in the fullest sense of the term, for she began to toddle about on the stage when an infant and has been at it ever since. She cannot remember her first rôle, but her first recollection of the footlights is Annie Russell's production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," in which, at the age of 6, she played the fairy named Cowslip. She, with a brother and sister slightly older and who have now grown to adult stature, while she remains at 5 feet of height, appeared in numerous plays of the last ten years.

Right off the Reel

THAT BALL GAME.

By Mae Tinée.

THAT Douglas Fairbanks-Billy Sunday ball game at Los Angeles must have been some game! Hadn't you heard about it? Well, it was given for the benefit of the soldiers. In order to relieve your suspense Mr. Fairbanks won and Mr. Sunday died on third. However, here's all about it. Among the 10,000 people present were "Bull" Montana, he of the pleistocene neck; "Strangler" Lewis, the giant wrestler; Tom Kennedy, one time pugilist, and "Spike" Robinson, all of whom were attired in Fairbanks baseball uniforms. The three baseballs bearing the signature of President Wilson were ushered onto the grounds by W. E. Bush, master of ceremonies, who auctioned off one of these for $275 to W. H. Frank. The others were given to Fairbanks and Sunday for mementoes. The proceeds of the game, which amounted to over $5,000, will provide baseball and athletic equipment for the soldiers in camp.

In the near future those who did not have the opportunity of viewing "Intolerance" at the Colonial will be able to see it at representative neighborhood houses, under arrangements made with Mr. Griffith by Ascher Bros. and Jones, Linick & Schaefer.

It is said that "The Adventurer," in which Mr. Chaplin will next be seen, cost $250,000 to produce. Twenty thousand feet of film were shot in the process.

And soon, we fear, it will be the Theda Bara wink, for they do say that she's a bara at the left eye exercise and proves it in "Camille."

Ora Carew never goes to a picture theater to see her own pictures. She says she simply "can't stand to see herself on the screen"! Well, if it's that hard for her, think——

HOW TO FILL OUT AN APPLICATION BLANK FOR THE MOVIES—ACTRESSES.
BY DICK WILLIS.

Stage name? Sweet Pretty Lovely Darling.
Real Name? Polly McGinty.
Address? Sharp Flats (until Saturday).
Telephone? The woman next door will call me. I forget her name; it's in the book.
Age? None of your business.
Color of eyes? Heavenly blue.
Color of hair? Varies.
Height? Up to Bob's shoulder.
Experience? O, my, yes.
Good wardrobe? Sure, and lots in it.
Married? Was.
How long have you been in the movies? O, ever so long.
With what companies? The Fly by Night, the Moonshine, and the Bunco Fillums.
Your line of business? Leads, of course.
Name your principal parts. Seventh lead in "Some Day," eleventh ingenue lead in "The Chorus," fifth character lead in "Where Is the Little Girl Next Door?" Supported Cleopatra's tent. Lead in "Resting." I can't tell you how many other leads.
Have you been on the stage? Yes, indeed; I lived in a mining camp.
Salary? A thousand a week or five a day.
Any further information? I love violets, "The Duchess," Phillips, Miss Braddon, and other literature; my bathing suit is a dream; I prefer to be a star, but will take anything going—I need the coin; I got a classy dancing frock and sing swell.

"You should be ashamed to let your younger brother drive an ice wagon." This was the substance of a letter recently received by Alice Joyce. Frenzied inquiry by Miss Joyce, whose younger brother happened to be living with her at the time, divulged the fact that an imposter having suffered a fall had impersonated himself as her brother in order to get returns. Well, it's all in the day's work of a movie star!

Tom Forman, who enlisted in the coast artillery federal reserve of California, is expected to soon receive a commission as second lieutenant. Girls, can't you just see him in his uniform!

For "Mrs. Dane's Defense" Pauline Frederick recently tried on 200 gowns in one morning, her enraptured p. a. says.

Louise Lovely has acquired a new pet—a baby seal. Name? Anna.

D'ju know, Fatty Arbuckle never wears a waistcoat?

Ask Me! Ask Me!

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

BETINA: No, you don't? You are as pleased as Punch that I provided you with the conversational tidbit you mention. A good scout? Well——? Thanks for your letter, Betina.

MINA: Mary Miles Minter is about 15 years old. Mary Pickford is in her early 20s. Wallace Reid is 27, according to statistics. I think your handwriting is swell. No trouble at all.

RUTH: Lillian and Dorothy Gish have been to Europe with D. W. Griffith taking scenes in a world war picture he is to produce.

LOVE: Address Vivian Martin, care of the Oliver Morosco company, Los Angeles, Cal.

S. T. P.: I can't tell you. As soon as I find out I'll let you know.

EXPERT: If you think you can, why don't you come on and try?

IRENE: I have an article on how to become a photoplayer which I shall take great pleasure in mailing you, if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

M. K.: Yes, sir! Firm, kind, and magnetic. [Sounds like the qualifications of a rubber in a Turkish bath!]

MISS SWEET: No, Mr. Hart's middle name is not Sweet, Miss Sweet. Yes, I agree with you, her are.

R. S. H.: Address Carmel Myers care of the Triangle Film company, Culver City, Cal. Yes, she's dark.

WEAR THE COMPLETE FRONT LACE CORSET

"La Camille"
Reg. Trade Mark, U. S. Pat. Office.

It contains the Ventilo back and the Ventilo front features, which add immeasurably to the comfort of the wearer.

The Ventilo back prevents pressure on the spine, permits ventilation and prevents the staining of the corset by perspiration. The Ventilo front shield allows greater range of adjustment and prevents lacers from scoring the flesh. No front lace corset without these features is complete.

No two stout women have figures exactly alike. It is not enough to classify them as stout tall or stout short; the distinction is far too subtle for that.

4504C (illustrated) is intended for the stout figure with extreme bust and back development. Made of fine strong Coutil; 9½ inch clasp. White only.......... $7

Simplifying Household Machinery One Way to Solve Waste Problem.

By Mme. X.

IT'S coming home—the world that used to amuse itself—it's coming home to confront many problems, such as opening houses that have lain for months under the silent penetration of the city dust; reorganizing domestic service in face of an increasing scarcity of such labor; constructing winter wardrobes in accord with the growing realization that this is no time for display of taste or wealth. In short, a complete reshaping of ideals and standards is the order of the day, a wholesome movement towards simplicity and self-denial.

There is nothing more in need of modernization along lines of efficient, business-like coöperation than the present method of running the machinery of our homes. In these days of conservation and concentration the unnecessary wastefulness of modern housekeeping in the homes of the well to do is a problem worthy of immediate attention.

It is the description of our well known Chicago artist, Frederic C. Bartlett's new abode in New York which brings the subject of housekeeping to the fore just now. He has taken an apartment in a recently built, quite sumptuous building east of Central park and just off Fifth avenue. He has a fine large studio, a library, two or three bedrooms, a dining room, and butler's pantry. The latter connects by dumb waiter with an up to date restaurant on the first floor, a restaurant with a French chef. Each apartment in the house has such a dumb waiter. The house furnishes service and shoulders the burden daily of cleaning and setting in order, or the tenant can have his or her own valet, butler, or maid. The building was designed and put up by a group of artists who aimed at simplifying the machinery of life without abating a jot of its comfort.

How much better such coördination of effort in the one department of the kitchen is than our old fashioned wastefulness of labor which necessitates such a condition as is found in one large apartment building on the north side, where there are twenty cooks for the twenty families that average a little over two members to a family! At West Point five cooks provide three meals a day for 600 cadets, and excellent meals they are said to be. Compare this with twenty cooks for fifty people under one roof. Isn't the latter an absurd waste?

Casino Club Open for Winter Season.

Harbinger of winter's social season is the reopening of the chic little Casino club in East Delaware place. All a-glitter with polishing, cleaning, and renovating within and with a soft pink blush suffusing its stucco exterior, it is ready for the luncheons, teas, and dinners that have made it the rendezvous for several seasons for an important contingent of society folk.

In other years it has had two club evenings a week when dancing was to the fore. But the war has changed all this. Many of the younger men are gone into the service of the country. The older ones are, as a rule, so seriously preoccupied that even a jaz band would fail to evoke much response from them. For bridge players there will be weekly bridge dinners, while in November those pleasant Sunday afternoon musicales will again bring the clans together for tea and music.

The club's president, Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, went east last Tuesday with her husband to be gone until November. She and Mrs. Arthur Ryerson and Mrs. R. T. Crane are a committee of three, with Mrs. Crane as chairman, to promote the sale of season boxes for the opera. The opera is to be better than ever before, say Maestro Campanini and Mr. Johnson. It is the one diversion which is quite suitable for our present state of mind provided it is divorced from the display of costumes and jewels which usually escorts grand opera. As one of the Chicago opera's regular subscribers and boxholders said, "I shall enjoy the opera more than ever this winter; it is a time when music means more than heretofore, and I'll take a box if I don't have to make a function of going, if we can go without bothering about full dress and so forth." Many people feel this disinclination to display so strongly that they propose to take seats this season instead of the boxes they usually occupy, quite oblivious of the fact that unless the boxes are sold the opera will be a failure.

By the way, let me correct a rather widespread misapprehension. In my account last week of the rehabilitation of the Auditorium I omitted to explain that, beautiful as Mrs. John Carpenter's gold and crimson decorations are, they are far from being costly. She combines great artistic taste with unusual practical, business ability, and achieves her stunning effects with a minimum expense. The item of $23,000 for the scaffolding was an affair of the contractor's; to him the lumber belongs. This explanation is made in answer to several protests addressed to me by those who thought this was not the time to indulge in extravagance. When these objectors realize that the delightful new interior, which will warm the cockles of every heart and rest every eye, cost hardly any more than the annual cleaning and renovating always applied to our old shrine of music, they will rest easier.

Mrs. Carpenter and Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank are in New York together just now savoring the joys of the metropolis, which, even in war times, seem alluring. Mrs. Carpenter, whose talents are as much appreciated in New York as here, is deep in preparations for a pageant there for some war relief work—one of those splendid spectacles for which that city is famous and in which all the artists, actors, actresses, and leaders of fashion take part.

The Gothamites went us one better in Red Cross work last summer when they ran a flourishing Red Cross shop in the Grand Central station, where they made thousands of dollars. You tap in a great railway station like this one thousands of people of every kind and description, many of whom are not get-at-able by any other agency. Also there are a great number of women who have to spend sometimes hours in these stations waiting to make train connections. To these unoccupied, bored travelers the opportunity to chat a little and do knitting or some other work for a great national cause comes as a godsend. Mrs. Arthur Ryerson's sister, Miss Sophie Borie of New York and Philadelphia, was one of the most faithful workers at this Red Cross shop during the warm season and, as the Grand Central station is the stamping ground for many of our Chicagoans who go east, she was hailed frequently by a lot of our fellow citizens and held a sort of impromptu court there as trains came in and went out.

What changes these stressful days make in even the smallest details of life! The presiding genius of a little circulating library said that she found a marked diminution in custom owing to the fact that so many women who used to read novels now spent their time knitting.

Make Record Aiding Soldiers.

The women in charge of the comforts and literature committee for the One Hundred and Forty-ninth field artillery—our Illinois regiment that numbers so many Chicagoans besides Col. Reilly, Maj. Noble B. Judah Jr., and Lieut. J. M. Patterson—have certainly made a record for themselves and set a pace for similar committees for other regiments. Under the energetic leadership of Mrs. Arthur Rogers of Evanston (whose four sons are all in Uncle Sam's service) every one of the 1,500 men of this regiment is provided with a hand knit sweater, and many of them with rifle mittens, wristlets, socks, and helmets—3,698 knit articles altogether. The Colonial Dames donated $300 worth of wool to this purpose, while other donations of wool helped out the little army of knitters organized by Mrs. Rogers.

Mrs. W. D. Washburn of Evanston fitted the men out with the most complete comfort kits ever devised, which fill the other regiments of the Rainbow division at Camp Mills with envy. A junior auxiliary of girls (from 8 to 15 years of age) made many of the knitted things and laundry bags with which the men are furnished, while Mrs. George Higginson organized committees among the young girls of Lake Forest, Winnetka, Kenilworth, and other north shore communities to provide books, periodicals, and newspapers for the One Hundred and Forty-ninth.

Mrs. Francis C. Farwell is chairman of this war relief committee, which includes, besides those already mentioned, Mesdames J. M. Patterson, Tiffany Blake, A. H. Wolf, Charles H. Schweppe, Horace Martin, and Miss Costello. The men's committee for this regiment, of which Jacob M. Dickinson is chairman, gave a rising vote of thanks to the women on hearing their report of work already accomplished.

Every regiment should be backed at home by such sustaining committees of men and women to look after the interests of the men and their families. These committees of the One Hundred and Forty-ninth field artillery are working with the hearty coöperation of the Red Cross, which has contributed a splendid shipment of socks among other things.

"Why doesn't the war department equip the men with enough warm clothes to protect them?" you ask. Put the question to Secretaries Baker and Daniels, but don't wait for an answer, because we are facing facts, not theories, and it will be time enough to get responses to such inquiries when our soldiers and sailors are provided with what they need.

Benefit to Wide Field.

Mrs. Richard Fox's bridge party on Sept. 26 at Mrs. Potter Palmer's was a great success. It brought in over $4,000. Five hundred people came and very ornamental they were in fine feathers and furs as they sat about the card tables in the big picture gallery and the Louis Quinze drawing room.

The house interested some of the guests as much as bridge. A few of them wandered away from the games and explored the historic mansion. Two or three were discovered lying on Mrs. Palmer's bed to see if it really were softer, more luxurious than any other couch in Chicago. Others peered into her mirror and gazed at her toilet table. Others tried to picture banquets in the richly paneled dining room. Imaginations were much fired by the afternoon's opportunities.

Mrs. Fox gave, as the fruits of the entertainment, $1,500 to the national surgical dressing unit, $1,000 to the signal corps (which includes aviation service), $500 to Col. Ryan for the families of enlisted men in the regular army, $500 to Camp Grant, and $500 to the war circulating library, a good distribution over a wide field of service.

Waiting for Change.

It happened in one of the double decker busses as it pulled up for passengers at the Virginia hotel. She was young and good looking and had a smart, but bulky, dress suit case which she placed in the narrow aisle. She handed the conductor a $10 bill and said, "Please get this changed for me. I have to get off at Randolph street and get the train there." He took it in a dazed fashion and went with it into the hotel.

It took him some time to get the bill changed. The other passengers—there must have been over twenty of them upstairs and down—sat and fumed and champed the bit and pawed the ground. The following bus drew up and inquired if it were trouble with the motor that stalled the first bus, and then, as there is a rule on the line that no bus can pass its predecessor, it, too, waited with its twenty or thirty more passengers. Over fifty people were thus kept waiting for the change for that $10 bill.

The only undisturbed person was the young woman with the big dress suit case, who calmly counted the change when it came and paid her dime. To keep an important engagement one of the passengers had to get out and take a passing taxi. She regretted afterward that she had not asked the young woman the name of her nerve tonic; it must be powerful and of a grandly sustaining quality.

Where to Learn What to Do in Home War Work

By Virginia Chandler.

THE information committee of the woman's committee of the council of national defense, Illinois division, is trying to do its part to make each woman assume her share of responsibility. We must not only see to it that our armies lack for nothing; we must make and keep our cities fair and clean to receive the men when they return.

England, Canada, and France have much to tell us. The information committee has turned to them for guidance and is collecting reports of the various phases of women's war work in those countries. In this way many valuable suggestions can at once be put to test in Illinois and many pitfalls avoided. The individual states are attacking many of the same problems we are, and it is to our advantage to know just what methods are being employed and how successfully. This material is carefully catalogued and card indexed and available for the use of the standing committees, the speakers, and any interested man or woman. Indeed, the material is far more accessible than the office, which is tucked away in a quiet corner of the C. N. D. building in Chicago. The hunt for it sometimes appears to be a good sporting proposition. Once you reach there the material is on hand; if it is not it will be procured if humanly possible. The aim is, above all else, to be of service.

There is much to be said of the busy little group that works there, as it is a happy combination of trained volunteers and professionals. The fact that material collected is handled by an experienced librarian has justified the librarians of some of the big libraries of the city, and, to a less extent, those of the state and the country, in giving most generous assistance to the committee. Furthermore, no body has the right to ask busy organizations for valuable reports unless they are prepared to see that such reports are properly catalogued, properly indexed, and broadly used.

On file are United States and European government documents, association reports, informal mimeographed reports of war work, clippings from the newspapers of the country, a few books and card references to material in other libraries. These cover such subjects as allied relief, food production, health, and sanitation, recreation for soldiers, recreation and education for girls, home relief, Red Cross, registration, thrift and conservation, war finance, women and children in industry, and general topics.

Many channels are being planned that this interesting data may reach as many people as possible. The information committee firmly believes that if women understand the need of conserving they will conserve; if they understand that bandages are needed in great quantities they will make them in great quantities, and if they understand the danger we face from German intrigue they will fight that battle, too, and do their share to end it.

KOEHNE PHOTO

Miss Virginia Chandler, chairman of the information committee of the woman's committee of the Council of National Defense, Illinois division, has just returned from New York and Washington, where she has been conferring with defense workers on latest methods of coordination.

WOMEN IN WAR WORK.

Mrs. Lambert O. Wile, chairman of the lecture extension bureau of the woman's committee of the council of national defense, announces that, in addition to the regular speakers, there will be a short talk by a soldier who has returned from the front and who will tell of his experiences, and also tell how the women at home can make things easier for the men at the front. These lectures are at 11 o'clock each day in the library of the Defense building, and are open to the public. Speakers this week will be:

MONDAY.

Miss Harriet Vittum on "Organization."
Miss Virginia Chandler on "Information."
Mrs. Roy Dickey on "Registration."
Mrs. Jacob Baur on "Liberty Loan."
Lieut. E. G. Waller, Second Canadian infantry battalion.

TUESDAY.

Miss Alice Thompson on the work of women in rural districts.
Discussion of the opportunities of women in clerical positions during war time, taken from the public school educational standpoint, by William Bachrach, Mrs. W. S. Hefferan, and Miss C. N. Smith.
Sergt. Maj. G. McKay, Second Canadian infantry battalion.

WEDNESDAY.

Dr. Rachel O. Watkins on "Food Conservation."
Sergt. R. Grant, First brigade, Canadian field artillery.

THURSDAY.

Miss Annie Hinrichsen, executive secretary public welfare commission of Illinois, on "The Needs of Women in Wartime."
Gunner Depew, an American who served in the French army in France, was wounded, and taken prisoner by the Germans on his way home.

FRIDAY.

Miss Ina Taft, chairman of the committee on refugee clothing of the Red Cross, who will tell of the work of her committee.
Aviator Crayford of the American aviation corps, on "The Advisability of Women Learning to be Aviators."

Mrs. Robert J. Witt

Mrs. Robert J. Witt, 817 Galt avenue, will assist Mrs. Marshall A. Roe, president of the Home Makers' guild, in her special day in the tea garden at the food exposition, which will open Oct. 24 and continue through Oct. 31.

"The Price of Victory," a patriotic pageant under the auspices of the Young People's Civic league, will be given this afternoon at 3 o'clock in the concert hall at the Municipal pier. The story of the prolongation of the war is told in the form of a dramatic pageant, in which soldiers, sailors, and Boy Scouts participate. Between the acts Miss Harriet Vittum, director of the Illinois woman's committee of the council of national defense, and Miss Irene Warren, vice chairman of the registration committee of the woman's committee, will speak. Henry Rathbone, ex-president of the Hamilton club, will also give a patriotic address.

The Gladstone chapter, Daughters of the British Empire, will give a silver tea at the home of Mrs. C. M. Clark, 10414 Longwood drive, tomorrow at 2 o'clock to buy materials for the British war relief ship.

The civilians' war school—the lecture extension bureau of the woman's committee, council of national defense—has opened its second semester in the library of 120 West Adams street. The three big things the women of the committee are trying to get all to concentrate specially upon during the next few weeks were discussed by Miss Harriet Vittum.

"The three big drives," she said, "are the Liberty loan drive, Oct. 1 to 27; the new Hoover pledge card, and the women's registration, starting Nov. 5. We want, through our work on these things, to put Illinois on the map as it has never been put before. I hear women say that the registration card is too complicated; but then war is a complicated matter. When our soldiers on the other side stand for days at a time knee deep in slush without a word of complaint, do we women dare to say that the few little things asked of us are too much trouble?"

More than 2,000 Red Cross nurses are now engaged in active nursing service, according to the announcement by the national committee on nursing of the American Red Cross. Another 2,000 are engaged in teaching and in committee work. Nine thousand more stand ready to serve at once, and the number of trained nurses volunteering for service with the Red Cross now averages 1,000 a month.

A primer class in finance has been started by Mrs. Jacob Bauer. As chairman of the Chicago committee for the Liberty loan her plan is to see that "The A B C of Finance" is given to every woman in Chicago, so that not one can say she's afraid to buy a bond because she "doesn't know anything about business." Every woman must know, before she finishes the primer, what a bond is, what a security is, what kinds of Liberty bonds there are, how far they are exempt from taxation, how to buy them, and a number of other useful things.

The central division of the American Red Cross, under Bruce Smith, is established in its new quarters on the top floor of the Le Moyne building, Wabash avenue and Lake street. The Chicago chapter headquarters is on the fifth floor of the Garland building, in which also are the American Fund for French Wounded, on the third floor, and the Red Cross registration bureau, formerly at 66 East Washington street, which has moved to 62.

Mrs. William G. Hibbard has been accorded the honor of housing the Red Cross field kitchen which will be used to give cheer and comfort to the soldiers in the vicinity of Chicago. The kitchen, which will be in use first will be housed in her spacious garage, and it is there that the corps of active canteen workers will meet. The other two Red Cross kitchens, which have just arrived, have been sheltered by the Illinois Central railroad, whose depot will be used as reserve headquarters for the canteen service.

Mrs. George McKinlock, head of this branch of the Red Cross, has announced the personnel of her own corps, fifteen Chicago women, ready to do backbreaking tasks for the good of the service. They are: Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, Miss Margaret Conover, Miss Cornelia Conger, Mrs. Joseph T. Ryerson, Mrs. David P. Thompson, Mrs. DeKoven Bowen, Mrs. Stanley Keith, Miss Sarah Granger Farwell, Mrs. Orville Babcock, Mrs. William Paul Martin, Mrs. George D. McLaughlin, Mrs. Frank Hibbard, Mrs. Paul Gardner, Mrs. Laurance Armour, and Mrs. Morris L. Johnston. There will be other companies organized, but Mrs. McKinlock's is the first to get together.

Miss Agnes Foreman has received a check for $100 from Mrs. Leonard Busby to be used to purchase yarn for knitted sweaters, helmets, etc., for the men of the Second Illinois Field artillery.

The Red Cross is making an appeal for Christmas bags for the boys in the trenches. Nothing with the label "made in Germany" is desired.

Mrs. Leonard A. Brundage is chairman of a committee organized in the Twenty-fourth ward to provide knitted articles for the 700 men called to the colors from that district. The families of the men are consulted, so that each man may get what he really needs and wants. Meetings are held every Friday at 1123 Fullerton avenue.

Battery F of Col. Foreman's regiment, the Second Illinois Field artillery, is to benefit by the proceeds of a card party and luncheon to be given at the Hotel La Salle on Saturday. Mrs. Louise M. Tousey of the adult probation office and Mrs. Thomas Harrington are two of the women in charge of arrangements. Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, Mrs. Bertha Baur, Miss Harriet Vittum, and Mrs. William S. Munroe will speak at the luncheon.

The committee on courses of instruction of the Illinois woman's committee, C. N. D., of which Mrs. W. S. Hefferan is chairman, is anxious to interest intelligent women in nursing as a field of work offering extraordinary opportunities for patriotic service in this time of war and constructive far reaching work in times of peace.

There are a few vacancies in the stenography class which meets at the Chicago College club Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays at 4 o'clock. Any one interested may apply to Mrs. O. C. Foster, 1714 North La Salle street. Phone Diversey 8516.

The St. Ambrose auxiliary of the Red Cross will be in its new quarters, 919 East Forty-seventh street, this week.

At the South Shore Country club the Red Cross auxiliary is busy every day from 10 until 4 o'clock except Saturdays and Sundays. Any one who wishes to work for the Red Cross is welcome. Mrs. Augustus D. Curtis is in charge of the work and she is assisted by a committee of sixty-four women, which includes twenty graduate supervisors. Mrs. William F. Bode is chairman of the garments and has secured electric sewing machines to work with. Mrs. Robert Peacock has donated a knitting machine to the auxiliary. Mrs. Clarence Norwood is chairman of the knitting.

Tomorrow will be an all day meeting at the Homemakers' guild, 155 North Clark street. The members and their friends will bring their knitting and other patriotic work so that they may lose no time while they are discussing the food problems of the home. From every part of the city are thus brought together the local prices that are being charged for the different foods, each woman telling her experience on conservation. The committee in charge tomorrow is Mrs. Frederick H. Knapp, Mrs. M. Jackson, and Mrs. B. C. Braun. Luncheon will be served to members at noon. After the luncheon Samuel E. Smith will give a demonstration on the dehydration of foods and the methods that are now in use. Mrs. T. Vernette Morse will announce the plans for the vocational art and industrial federation which is to be held on homemakers' day at the Hotel La Salle. The arrangements for the convention are in charge of the Chicago chapter of the Homemakers' guild. Committees will be announced at the meeting tomorrow.

The working day of the war work of the central committee of Rogers Park has been changed from Tuesday to Wednesday. The committee is composed of twenty-six organizations, including women's clubs, churches, boy scouts, and fraternal organizations. Work has been carried on during the summer for the French shop, the Navy league, and the surgical dressings committee of the Red Cross. The officers of the committee are: President, Mrs. Samuel Horner; vice president, Mrs. George Brennan; secretary, Mrs. Charles F. Crane; treasurer, Mrs. W. K. Pattison, and the honor roll committee, Mrs. Paul Hullhorst and Miss Grace Roberts. The honor roll committee traces missing soldiers.

Reception to Open Season of Ohio Women's Society

THE Chicago Society of Ohio Women will open its fourth year on Thursday with a reception to its founder, Mrs. D. Harry Hammer, and its present president, Mme. Genevra Johnstone Bishop. The reception will be held at 2 p. m. in the Francis First room of the Congress hotel. Mrs. Miriam Fell Hart of Marietta, O., will be among the distinguished guests. Assisting the president in receiving will be the officers: Mrs. F. D. Palmer, Mrs. Joshua N. Hobbs, Mrs. Robert McCall, Mrs. Charles Gano, Mrs. William M. Morton, Mrs. William Dow Cashner, Mrs. George E. Sevey, Mrs. W. A. Boatman, and Mrs. John Burns.

There are 200 members on the roll of the Chicago Society of Ohio Women. Only native daughters of Ohio are eligible to membership. The aim of the club is to stimulate loyalty toward Ohio and to honor distinguished visitors from the state. Among the guests which the society will entertain this season are Gov. Cox and the late ambassador to France, Myron T. Herrick.

Each year on Feb. 19 the society has a luncheon celebrating the admission of Ohio into the union. Meetings are held the first Thursday of each month at the Congress hotel.

A new emergency war work has been undertaken by the society and has been most successful. A shop in the Marquette building was started six weeks ago. The room was donated, the equipment was loaned, and the Red Cross furnishes the materials. There are three departments of the work, the garments, the knitting, and the surgical dressings. Already 100 garments have been made, mostly flannelette pajamas. The knitting department is only three weeks old, and there are twenty volunteer workers in the department. The surgical dressings department started only last week. The shop is open on Tuesdays and Thursday from 10 o'clock until 4, when the shop officially closes and tea is served.

The officers of the Red Cross Auxiliary of the Society of Ohio Women are Mrs. Joshua N. Hobbs, chairman; Mrs. Taylor Murphy, vice chairman, and Mrs. Allen Smart, secretary and treasurer.

DOWNTOWN CLUBS

Mme. Victor Horta, an authorized representative of King Albert of Belgium, will address the members of the Chicago Woman's club on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock in Recital hall on "Belgium Before the War and Now." Each member may invite one guest. F. L. Salisbury will also speak at this meeting. His subject will be "Fine Prevention." On Wednesday morning at 10:30 o'clock the literary study class meets to hear Dr. Percy H. Boynton of the University of Chicago lecture on "American Speech and American Culture," and at 1 o'clock the Contagious Disease hospital committee will meet in the clubrooms; Mrs. William R. Cubbins, chairman, will preside. On Tuesday at 12:30 the committee for bathing beaches and swimming pools, with Mrs. G. A. Soden as chairman, will meet in the clubrooms. On Friday morning at 10:30 o'clock there will be a meeting of the drama study class, at which an American comedy will be read by various members of the class, and at 12:30 o'clock the philanthropy department will have a luncheon to welcome its new members. On Saturday at noon the education department will have a luncheon and business meeting, at which reports will be given by the committee for the conservation of children under the club's unit for patriotic service.

The public institutions committee of the Woman's City club, with Mrs. Joseph S. Meyer as chairman, will meet at the clubrooms tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. At 11 a. m. Miss Mary E. McDowell will preside at a meeting at the clubrooms to discuss the increase in price of milk. The regular monthly luncheon of the ward leaders will be held tomorrow at the College club, 18 North Wabash avenue, at 1 p. m. On Tuesday at 12:30 p. m. the chairmen of the civic committee will meet at luncheon at the College club. The First ward branch, of which Miss Gwendolyn Williams is leader, will meet at the clubrooms at 3:30 p. m. On Friday at 3:30 p. m., the child welfare committee, of which Dr. A. L. Lindsay-Wynekoop is chairman, will meet at the clubrooms.

At the College club on Friday from 4 to 5 o'clock tea will be served in honor of the officers of the club—Mrs. Annie P. Kenny, Mrs. Harry H. Lobdell, and Miss Dorothy I. Smith. Presiding at the tea tables will be Mrs. A. O. Coddington and Mrs. Susan W. Peabody. On Saturday at 11 a. m. Milan Lusk of Wilmette, who was in Austria at the outbreak of the war, will tell of his experiences.

On Friday the local board of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs will meet at 1:30 o'clock at the Hotel Sherman. Further plans will be made for the state meeting to be held in Chicago Nov. 12 to 15. The board includes: Mrs. Frederick A. Dow, Mrs. Harlan Ward Cooley, Mrs. Benjamin Auerbach, Mrs. Ima Clarke, Mrs. Walter H. Buhlig, Mrs. Edgar A. Hall, Mrs. H. H. Baldwin, Mrs. William G. Cook.

The Chicago Political Equality league education department, with Mrs. Martin Kent Northam as chairman, will hold the first of this season's meetings in the Florentine room of the Congress hotel on Saturday at 2 p. m. Mrs. Helen M. Hefferan will speak on "Fields of Work Open to Women in War Time." Mme. Aino Malmberg, a member of the Finnish diet, will speak on "Big Wars and Little Nations."

Prof. Bertram Nelson's class in public speaking under the auspices of the Chicago Political Equality league will begin a ten weeks' course on Tuesday at 4 p. m. in the green room of the Congress hotel.

The Bryn Mawr Woman's club will hold its first business meeting tomorrow. It will be Red Cross day in charge of Mrs. Frank Morgan. Mrs. H. F. Heath will act as social chairman.

The Renaissance, of which Mrs. Joseph P. Birren is president, will open the club year at Fullerton hall, Art institute, on Oct. 15. Mrs. Katherine Von Ficht will lecture on "Woman the Flagmaker."

Mrs. Charles E. Herrick, state president of the United States Daughters of 1812, will entertain the national president, Mrs. Robert Hall Wiles, and the national and state executive board members at a 1 o'clock luncheon at the College club on Friday.

"Patriotism; What Can We Do for Our Country in Its Hour of Need?" will be the theme for discussion by the Midwest chapter, Alden Kindred of America, at its monthly meeting at the Alexandria hotel, Rush and Ohio streets, on Tuesday.

On Saturday at 2 p. m. the Prince of Wales chapter, Daughters of the British Empire, will meet at the War Relief shop, 1202 Stevens building. Maj. Donald Guthrie, who has seen active service in the war and is now connected with the British-Canadian recruiting mission, will be the speaker.

The opening reception of the woman's organization of the Chicago Retail Druggists' association will be held on Tuesday at 2:30 p. m. in the east room of the Hotel La Salle.

Members of the P. E. O. society wishing to attend the supreme convention to be held in Omaha, Neb., Oct. 16 to 19 will be welcome on the Illinois special car leaving Chicago Oct. 15 at 6:15 p. m. via the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad.

The New York colony of the Illinois Colony club will meet on Friday at the Hotel La Salle for luncheon at 12:30 o'clock.

The Central Eleanor club, 16 North Wabash avenue, will be at home to all young women of the city from 4 to 6 o'clock today.

The Woman's club of the Allied Drug Trade will give a reception to the president on Wednesday at the Hotel Sherman. The reception will be held at 12 o'clock and the luncheon at 12:30. In the afternoon the club will attend a matinée.

A card and lotto party will be given by the Emanuel Frauen Verein for the benefit of the charity-memorial fund on Tuesday, Oct. 16, at 2 p. m. at Mandel Bros.' tearoom. Mrs. Helen G. Abrahamson, chairman, will be assisted by Mrs. Annie Weil and Miss Rose H. Abrahamson.

A meeting of the board of directors of the Woman's Protection association will be held on Friday in room 722 county building at 3:30 o'clock, when plans for the fall work will be discussed. Miss Nellie Carlin, public guardian of Cook county, is president of the association.

GOSSARD CORSET
for YOU

Model 572
at your favorite store

That unequaled skill in designing that has famed Gossard Corsets the world over has now fashioned for you a new $5 model. This model 572 anticipates, in the most minute detail, the demand of the new fashion for the silhouette with the smaller waist, accenting the delicate bust line, and the flat back and hip lines.

Developed in a fine, pink or white batiste that clings to the body like silk—modeled to give that health-assuring abdominal support only to be found in a Gossard—scientifically boned with the most careful regard for every hygienic requirement, designed so it is impossible for it to ever "ride up" on the body and yet give comfortably with your slightest movement, this model offers you the joy of complete corset comfort.

Gossards have ever been famed for their durability, and in this Gossard you will find a wearing service that will gratify and surprise you.

Acknowledging the radical advance in price of all merchandise, the discriminating buyer cannot but be impressed with the remarkable values offered in these unusual corsets.

Burns Mantle's New York Letter

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—William Faversham has produced, though he is not acting in, Bernard Shaw's "Misalliance" at the new Broadhurst theater in Forty-fourth street—"Broadhurst" because that playwright has leased the house from the Messrs. Shubert, who built it, and purposes later supplying it with plays of his own authorship. It is the first of the thirteen or fourteen new theaters now being built in New York to be opened this season.

"Misalliance" is not a new play, as few of the Shaw dramas are by the time they reach the stage in America, but it is new to this public. It was written about seven years ago, tried briefly in London, and put aside as undramatic and suited only to the more rabid of the Shavians.

Three years ago it was published, and is familiar to the admirers of "the keenest mind in England." It is one of the satirist's wordiest dramatic discussions, written to justify or excuse an equally lengthy preface devoted to the relations of "Parents and Children," in which the brilliant one holds a brief for the child suing to establish its inalienable rights as an individual.

Of course, it rambles, wandering in and out of all manner of discussions dear to the heart of its author, but so effectively has it been cast by Mr. Faversham, and so intelligently rehearsed, that it has revealed surprising values as an acted play. After a slow start it becomes a lively and richly amusing Shavian romp.

So far as it has a thread of plot it concerns the three hour experience of a group of persons gathered at the home of one of England's self-made, self-educated manufacturers—Tarleton of Tarleton's underwear—from whom Shaw loves to extract his samples of middle class philosophy.

In the Tarleton family circle is a daughter, wearied to a state of hysteria by the endless "cackle" of her parents, bored to the point of extinction by the conventional respectability of her home, and praying that something, anything, may happen. There is her mother, who worked in Tarleton's mills before her marriage and the Tarleton money gave her a position among the upper middle classes that she strives assiduously to decorate and live up to; and her brother, a sort of intellectual mongrel, a "stupidly overeducated" young man, as someone has classified a German kulturist.

With the family group certain guests are introduced. The overbred fiancé of the daughter, a hollowy chested, thin shanked youth standing as a living physical reproach to his aristocratic line; a soapbox Socialist, bent on killing Tarleton to avenge an affair the underwear merchant had with his mother, and finally an upstanding youth who drops through the skylight of the conservatory from his aeroplane and brings with him a passenger, a Polish lady athlete, who stands as a sample of the thoroughly independent woman, and who finally literally picks up and carries off the emaciated artistocrat.

Verbal fireworks sputter and flash with this group doing the talking—and when they, by their own confession, are talked out the play is ended. No conclusions are definitely drawn, save in the case of the protesting daughter. Fastening her hungry eyes on the stalwart "ace" of the aeroplane, she throws over her aristocrat and pursues him as Ann pursued John Tanner—and captures him finally. "Papa," buy the brute for me," she pleads when the flyer admits he could not support a wife on the beggardly thousand a year that is his portion. And papa buys.

There is much in the reviews of the excessive talkiness of this Shaw play, as usual; but there is much joy in the hearts of those who listen play after play in New York to hear a line spoken that is worth the speakiing, or an idea projected that is worth projection. And so it will doubtless continue the dramatic success of the early season.

Maclyn Arbuckle has scored the hit of his recent career as Tarleton, Elizabeth Risdon plays the daughter, and Katherine Kaelred the lady athlete.

Continuing their metropolitan researches of last season, when they uncovered a rowdy polo playing society set on Long Island and put it into "Upstairs and Down," Fannie and Frederick Hatton this season offer "Lombardi Ltd." as a frank observation of life among the man dressmakers of Fifth avenue and the mistresses of Broadway.

The result is a rather smart comedy of the upper Tenderloin that is quite likely to tickle a share of the natives and all the visitors who come to New York to see the skyline and then forget to look at it. It is not a play, I should say, that the Woman's club of Ashtabula, O., will indorse, nor Carthage, Mo., approve.

Still, I was pleased to note a drift of honesty in the writing of "Lombardi," even though it is entirely conventional and quite commonplace stage honesty. Because a hero should preferably be sinless, the authors have made Lombardi, who is one of those dressmakers, a good man, as full of wholesome advice for his mannequins as he is of spaghetti dialect.

When the novice of his establishment, educated in the moving picture theaters, demands to know, as did the Sabine women, when the ravishing is to begin, he reads her a fatherly lecture that she can understand without knowing a word of Leo Carillo's dialect, and when another of his girls frankly admits that the gift of a sable cape, a trunk filled with Lombardi gowns, and a trip to California has turned her away from the narrow path and directly into a waiting limousine, he is so grieved his genius for designing gowns completely deserts him for the better part of a quarter hour.

And finally he agrees to marry Janet Dunbar. Any man who does that, be his environment ever so wicked, is fairly sure of a clean bill of health in these parts, where Janet frequently stands for the old fashioned ingénue sweetheart of sound morals.

The humor of this play is the snappy humor of Longacre square, concerning perfect thirty-sixes and the impossible forty-eights, who try to look like the lingerie models of a Marshall Field catalogue. "What's the use of havin' a perfect shape if you can't take it out to eat?" sighs the chief of models, now forced to diet. "Hush!" commands Lombardi; "every time you open your mouth you make an indecent exposure of your mind."

Leo Carillo, advanced, first, from vaudeville, and now from the usual dialect bit to a full length, featured part, plays Lombardi amusingly and rather convincingly. Never having employed a man dressmaker, I cannot vouch for the authenticity of his characterization. But he is neither falsetto nor precise, and his dialect, though exaggerated, is often neatly comic. The bustle gown is a feature of the play's display. Despite its name, it appears to have been designed to conserve cloth and force nature to make its own displays.

"The Riviera Girl" is another of those gorgeously mounted musical comedies the Messrs. Klaw & Erlanger delight in staging at the New Amsterdam. Its music, by Kalman, is less tinkly than that of the modern, or intimate, play of similar nature and its humor, though written by the popular Wodehouse and Bolton, stubs a careless toe occasionally and falls flat. Josef Urban has quite spread himself on the decorations, which are as colorful as those of the Russian ballet, and much more costly. Wilda Bennett, too, singing the principal rôle, blossoms forth as a dainty and most attractive prima donna of the Julia Sanderson order. Paul Gantvoort is the lucky barytone and Sam Hardy the comedian.

"Here Comes the Bride" is lively and noisy and well played—being a farce about a young lawyer who is paid $100,000 to marry a veiled lady and for two acts can't explain why he did it to the girl of his choice, who has come to elope with him. The rest of the cast, also being kept from the secret, think he has eloped with the girl, and insist on treating them as honeymooners. Otto Kruger and Francine Larrimore are the mixed bride and groom, but it is Maude Eburne as the veiled lady who earns most of the laughs.

"Mother Carey's Chickens" are a fluttering brood who have nothing in common with the New York variety. Perhaps that is one reason New York does not rise to them as enthusiastically as it might. Being accustomed to the old home brand, the natives refuse to take any other.

This rustic comedy, extracted from the Kate Douglas Wiggin book by Rachel Crothers, came quietly into town last week. It is an optimistic comedy of sweetness and light illustrating the adventures of the widow Carey and her five offspring, left fatherless but not discouraged in a certain New England village.

There they settle down—the sweet-souled mother with the gentle voice; the manly brother who is willing to work; the competent older sister, who rather manages things for mother, and the three younger members, who say cute things, and help out with the group pictures.

Gradually all the crabbed and cross and hateful people of the immediate neighborhood are brought to look at life from the Carey angle, and find it pleasant. Then they have a barn dance. Edith Taliaferro, playing the competent daughter, agrees to marry Tom Carrigan, who really owns the Carey house, and all is well both sides of the footlights.

Broadway loves to hoot at rustic comedy, and usually does so effectively. This is not a particularly good rustic comedy, so there is some doubt as to its success.

DISSOLVE YOUR SUPERFLUOUS HAIR

The new way of removing superfluous hair is by dissolving them away. This makes the removal absolute—every hair, no matter how thick, disappears leaving the skin entirely free from the least suggestion of hair growth. This wonderful method is accomplished by

Sulfo Solution

You simply moisten the hairs with it and in a few moments the hairs dissolve and vanish. There is no disagreeable odor, no trouble, no irritation or burning sensation. Sulfo Solution can be used on the most delicate skin with perfect success. It beautifies the skin wherever applied. Use it under the arms, on the face, shoulders, arms, etc., and see how almost magically it acts. Never cut hairs, or use pastes to burn off hairs. Use Sulfo Solution. Sold by all drug and department stores, $1.00 a bottle, or sent direct on receipt of price by the makers, Cooper Pharmacal Co., Thompson Building, Chicago, Ill.

FUTURE EVENTS

Festivities at the Cordon will begin this week with the opening reception of the season, to be held on Friday afternoon from 4 until 6 o'clock. The nonresident members of the club will be guests of honor. Mrs. Elia W. Peattie is president. The club tea room opened a few weeks ago after being closed for the summer.

A reception will be held at the Art Institute on Tuesday evening to mark the opening of the sixteenth annual exhibition of applied arts and the annual exhibition of the Chicago Ceramic Art association.

Mrs. Howard Fenton of 5725 Woodlawn avenue will give a bridge tea on Wednesday afternoon for the benefit of the Margaret Etter crèche.

Those interested in the Children's South Side Free dispensary will hold the seventeenth annual party tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Edwin A. Graff of 4907 Kimbark avenue. There will be a business meeting in the morning, which will be followed by the luncheon and later the guests will play cards. Every one who comes is expected to show the right birthday spirit and bring something for the dispensary, either money or some piece of work which may be sold for the benefit of the cause. The dispensary is located at 705 West Forty-seventh street.

The first of a series of Sunday afternoon musicals to be given at the Edgewater Beach hotel will be given there this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The regular weekly card party given Tuesday afternoons at the Chicago College club for the benefit of the ambulance fund of the club will be presided over this week by Miss Marjorie Lane and Mrs. John H. Dingle. All college women and their friends are welcome.

The Hinsdale Golf club will hold a harvest home dinner-dance on Saturday evening at the club. The same evening the Indian Hill Country club will give an Indian feast at the club to mark the close of the summer season.

A new angle of the war will be presented at the South Shore Country club this evening when Private Ivan Rossiter, a returned Canadian soldier, straight from a year in German prison camps, will tell of his experiences after being wounded at the battle of Sanctuary Woods, captured by the enemy, and sent for diplomatic reasons from one end of the Teutonic empire to another. Next Sunday movies will again be on the schedule in the form of a six reel drama, "The Burglar," adapted from the Augustus Thomas play of the same name. There will be two regular parties this week on Thursday and Saturday evenings with another bridge tournament session tomorrow afternoon with Friday as guest day. The old casino of the club has been fitted up for Red Cross work and many busy hands are now steadily employed from 10 to 4 each day except Saturday and Sunday turning out surgical supplies, knitted articles, and other comforts for the soldiers.

Mr. and Mrs. Winfield Scott Brainerd, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Dewes, Mr. and Mrs. Erich Gerstenberg, Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Leight, Mr. and Mrs. William Juergens, and Mr. and Mrs. Emil Eitel are among the patrons and patronesses of a musical and reading to be given on Tuesday evening at Marthe hall, 2734 Hampden court.

The women's auxiliary of St. Anne's hospital will give a card party on Wednesday afternoon at the Garfield park refectory. The proceeds will go to the hospital fund. Mrs. T. G. Tyrrell is chairman of arrangements.

Chicago day, which comes on Tuesday, will be celebrated at the municipal pier with an international allied patriotic concert and military ball, to be given afternoon and evening under the direction of the National Veterans' Reserve corps and the Daughters of the Republic. The proceeds will go to the soldiers and sailors. Many society women are acting as patronesses of the affair.

The tenth graduation exercises of the Deborah Sabbath school, one of the council religious schools, will be held on Tuesday evening at 7:30 at the Chicago Hebrew institute assembly hall, at Taylor and Lytle streets.

The Chicago College club will give a tea on Friday afternoon from 4 until 5 o'clock for the officers, who are Mrs. Annie P. Kenny, president; Mrs. Harry H. Lobdell, treasurer; and Miss Dorothy I. Smith, secretary. Mrs. A. O. Coddington and Miss Susan W. Peabody will preside at the tea tables. On Saturday morning at 11 o'clock there will be a violin recital by Milan Lusk at the club.

Mrs. William Truesdell and Mrs. Frederick Holmes will entertain the I Will club at a card party to be given at the home of Mrs. Truesdell, 3000 Flournoy street, on Tuesday. The Round Table of this club will meet at the residence of Mrs. Frederick Mills of 6634 Winchester avenue on Thursday at 2 o'clock.

A benefit card party will be given on Tuesday evening at the Gladstone hotel, Kenwood avenue and East Sixty-second street. The women of the hotel are arranging the affair in order to raise money to buy wool for their war knitting.

The Mothers' Aid of the Chicago Lying-In hospital and dispensary will meet at Sinai temple on Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Mrs. Carrie Hirschman Kohnstamm and Mr. and Mrs. Bruno Steindel will give the program.

Congregational National Council Meets This Week

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

THE national council of the Congregational churches will open next Wednesday in Columbus, O., continuing in session until Oct. 17. The national council meets every other year. This year's meeting was to have been held in Los Angeles, Cal., last June, but was postponed to October and to a more central city because of war conditions.

A national meeting will be held next Sunday evening in Memorial hall, the largest auditorium in Columbus. A flag will be presented to the national council by occupants of the Congregational house, Boston. Addresses will be made by the Rev. Francis J. Van Horn of Oakland, Cal., on "The Upbuilding of Our Nation's Power," and by Gov. J. A. A. Burnquist of Minnesota on "The Creation of National Unity from Diverse Races and Tongues."

On Sunday afternoon in Memorial hall social service will be discussed. The Rev. Washington Gladden will be chairman and the speakers will be the Rev. Sidney Strong of Seattle, formerly of Oak Park, Ill., and John P. Frey of Cincinnati, O.

A meeting in the interests of the coming three hundredth anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrim fathers at Plymouth, Mass., will be held on Friday. Sayings from the writings of the Pilgrims will form the subjects of the addresses. Two of these subjects are: "'We ought to defend our lawful possessions if we are able,' the ministers of Boston, 1635," discussed by the Rev. Frank L. Moore of Denver, Colo., and "'The foundation of authority is laid in the free consent of the people,' Thomas Hooker, 1638," discussed by the Rev. Dan F. Bradley of Cleveland, O.

Chicagoans who will speak on the regular program are: The Rev. William E. Barton, the Rev. W. H. Spence, the Rev. Graham Taylor, the Rev. F. W. Gunsaulus, the Rev. R. W. Gammon, the Rev. Ozora S. Davis, and Frank Kimball. Delegates will be present from all parts of the United States. Following the meeting of the national council, the American board of foreign missions will meet in Columbus.

The Rev. J. B. Haslam, who has been appointed field secretary of the social service commission of the Episcopal diocese of Chicago, brings to his work an experience both practical and theoretical, gained on the west side of the city where he was in charge of the Cathedral of SS. Peter and Paul; and also at Nashotah House, Wisconsin, where for five years he was lecturer on sociology. For the last three years he has been rector of Christ church, Streator, Ill. He is a member, as well as field secretary of the commission.

The social service commission consists of twelve members, clerical and lay, appointed annually by Bishop Anderson. Its duty is to coördinate the activities of the various organizations existing in the diocese in the interest of social service and to keep in touch with local social, industrial and civic needs and conditions for the information of the bishop and clergy and for the benefit of the community. Its office is in room 1814 Heyworth building.

The Hinsdale Congregational church, a description of which was given in this column several weeks ago, will be dedicated Oct. 21. The Rev. W. H. Spence, the pastor, will be assisted in the dedicatory ceremonies by the Rev. Dr. Herring, general secretary of the national council of Congregational churches, and others.

The Rev. William J. Stephenson C.S.V.

POWELL PHOTO

The Rev. William J. Stephenson, C. S. V., is priest in charge of the Catholic work at Camp Custer, Battle Creek, Mich. He is a graduate of St. Viator's college, Bourbonnais, Ill., and was for eleven years a teacher there. He was ordained in Holy Angels' church, Chicago. He was for a time president of Columbus college, Chamberlain, S. D.

Father Stephenson has the distinction of being the only priest who has served in the ranks of the regular army of the United States. His experience in the army had much to do with his appointment to the religious work in the army camp.

He was born in Davenport, England. His father served in the British navy and met death by drowning. This calamity led the future priest to come to America at the age of 14.

"Never was there a happier boy than I was when I landed in Boston and no one is more grateful for the privilege of American citizenship," said Father Stephenson in recalling his early days.

He made his own way in the world, serving three years in the regular army and one year as a volunteer in the First Massachusetts regiment.

He will have three buildings at Camp Custer erected by the Knights of Columbus, in which to carry on religious and social work. They are to be dedicated soon, Bishop Edward Kelley of Detroit and several priests officiating. Previous to the opening of the Knights of Columbus buildings, Father Stephenson said mass and preached in the buildings of the Young Men's Christian association. The most cordial relations exist between the religious leaders of all denominations in the camp, Catholic, Protestant, and Jewish.

James E. Sanford, a young man engaged in the real estate business in Detroit, a graduate of Notre Dame university, Indiana, is secretary of the Knights of Columbus work at the camp.

The choir of the Ravenswood Methodist Episcopal church will give its first Sunday evening musical festival tonight at 8 o'clock. The choir of fifty will be assisted by Arthur Ranous, baritone.

A religious canvass of the community surrounding the Parkside Baptist church is being conducted. Today will be fellowship Sunday, when it is expected a hundred members of the Parkside church will carry greetings to the homes of the neighborhood. The Rev. Ingram E. Bill is pastor.

The Rev. J. L. Albritton, pastor of the Wicker Park Methodist Episcopal church, has recently passed his 70th birthday and the fiftieth anniversary of his entrance into the ministry. He is a veteran of the civil war.

The contest of the pupils of the Sunday schools of Chicago and within a radius of fifty miles, in writing the story of the life of Jesus, is now being conducted by the Chicago Church federation. Pupils must present their stories in their own handwriting, not in typewriting, and the statement of the age of the pupil must be given. The stories are to be handed to the Sunday school superintendents Nov. 4 and to the headquarters of the Church Federation by Thanksgiving day. The awards of gold, silver, and bronze medals are to be ready so that the winners may be announced at the Christmas exercises in each of the churches. No pupils over 16 years of age can compete. Inquiries are answered if sent to the Chicago Church federation, 19 South La Salle street.

The Albany Park Presbyterian church, of which the Rev. A. S. Nickless is pastor, will celebrate the third anniversary of its organization Oct. 18. Money is being gathered to erect a new church edifice.

The Rev. Everett L. Jones of Stockton, Cal., has been called to the pastorate of the Millard Avenue Presbyterian church as successor to the Rev. Bertram G. Jackson.

The Trinity Methodist Episcopal church, Thirtieth street and Prairie avenue, has secured as director of religious education H. W. Blashfield, who has studied at Lawrence college, Appleton, Wis.; the University of Wisconsin, and the University of Chicago, and as a field worker in community groups Miss Marie G. Miller, a graduate of Washburn college, Topeka, Kas., and the Chicago Training School for City, Home, and Foreign Missions.

The first meeting and dinner of the men's club of the Plymouth Congregational church, 935 East Fiftieth street, will be held Tuesday evening. Prof. James H. Tufts of the University of Chicago will speak on "The Social Attitude Toward Church Life." The Rev. Reginald I. Raymond is pastor.

The Chicago Christian Missionary society will hold its annual meeting in Jackson Boulevard Christian church, Jackson boulevard and Western avenue, tomorrow evening. The society will have dinner at the church. Annual reports and election of officers will follow. Out of town guests will be the Rev. H. H. Peters, state secretary of the Illinois Christian Missionary society, Bloomington; the Rev. F. A. Burnham, president of the American Christian Missionary society, Cincinnati; the Rev. Grant K. Lewis, secretary of the American Christian Missionary society, and others. The Rev. W. G. Winn is secretary of the Chicago Christian Missionary society and Dr. P. L. Prentis of the federal immigration service is president.

The Chicago Christian Endeavorers, numbering 800 societies, will hold a Liberty convention Oct. 19 and 20 in the Moody church. There will be thirty conferences on various phases of young people's church and civic work.

A men's choral union under the auspices of the Cook County Sunday School association, Edward Clissold, director, has for its officers: H. S. W. Foreman, president; L. S. Ingeman, vice president; Arthur O. Procho, secretary; and E. J. Claussen, treasurer.

Your Autumn Corset

Third Floor—Center

This is a word of warning to the woman about to buy her corset for Autumn—a warning to choose her corset with the greatest care, for only a corset carefully chosen can be worth while—the care will pay for itself time and time again every day you wear the corset, by the added comfort, the added poise and the added gracefulness of figure that only a properly fitted corset can bring. Nowhere else are corsetieres quite as qualified by experience and training to assist you to select a corset that will give you complete corset satisfaction. Why not take advantage of this service when you are in need of a new corset? No charge is made for the fittings.

We feature Bon Ton and Royal Worcester corsets because they reflect everything latest in corsetry, all the fashionable models in low, medium and high busts for all types of figures. Why force your figure into lines never intended for it? Here you'll find so wide a variety of models that it is wholly unnecessary. When this error is committed there are steels or bones that press where they shouldn't, restriction where freedom should exist, and lack of support where the body calls for it.

It costs no more to corset you correctly than to allow you to wear a corset that would have an injurious effect. That is why we lay so much stress on the proper fitting of the corset.

The Bon Ton Corset, as illustrated, for the average figure; the low bust that requires the fullness over diaphragm controlled, skirt medium length, wide graduated front clasp, will take care of quite a plump figure, featured in a dainty pink brocade, sizes to 36, at 5.00

Royal Worcester Corset, for the average stout figure, requiring a medium high bust, extra well boned, long skirt, admirably controlling the flesh, sizes to 36, at 2.50

Bon Ton Corsets $3.00 and 5.00

Royal Worcester Corsets, $1.00 to 2.50

Autumn's Footwear Fashions were never prettier

Never more attractive—how much they interest the particular woman is evidenced by the number of women one always sees in our Red Cross Footwear Section, for the new Red Cross shoes for autumn are charming.

Most women want to try them on, once they see them. The moment you put your feet into a pair, and they are fastened snugly, you'll be surprised, no doubt, to find that your feet feel the way they look—splendid.

Red Cross shoes combine correct style with wonderful comfort. Women who are in the habit of wearing high grade footwear, invariably say that Red Cross shoes are priced very moderately, indeed, when one considers style and quality.

Red Cross Shoe

The Children's Shoes

Fourth Floor—State Street

There is no shoe for the children featured in Chicago that compares in popularity with Billiken shoes. You'll best understand why after your child has worn a pair—when you see how splendidly they wear, how they always keep their shape, how they train the foot to grow properly, how soft and comfortable they are, then you'll understand why folks prefer them over all others—made of the fine soft, pliable calfskin, patent leathers and kidskins with specially tanned genuine Flintstone oak soles.

The Dominance of Satins Is Reflected in the October Sale of Silks

Main Floor—State Street

All the world seems to be intent upon having at least one satin gown, and so satins are in such demand as no one ever thought possible before—with the resultant shortage at most every other store—the Annual October Sale of Silks, towering as it does far above every similar event in all America, offers you, tomorrow, choice of satins, in variety practically without end, satins for every one of the uses Fashion has found for them this season. Satins in all the wanted weaves, satins in colorings that rival the rainbow—and still priced at low figures, that have all the past week evoked the greatest buying in years—the strength of any Sale is to offer exactly what most folks want most of, underprice—that is what the October Sale does always, as well as offering every other silk that there is the least possible demand for at equal savings—so there is small wonder that most every woman in or around Chicago says: "For Silks, the Boston Store."

40-inch Nouveau satin, a new dress silk this season and much in vogue for street and evening gowns. Soft, souple, rich, brilliant finish; wears splendidly; will not ruff up. All the new colors—street and evening shades, Monday at, yard, 2.29 and...... 1.98

NEW YORK SOCIETY by MME

Military Weddings Chief Events on Autumn Schedule

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—It is generally admitted that whatever else society does the coming season it will not dance a great deal. There will be an increasing number of military weddings because all the really patriotic girls prefer sending their men away as husbands rather than as sweethearts. And there will be charity affairs without number. But there will not be much dancing.

"In the first place," said the debutante who was explaining the situation to me, "it doesn't seem right to be dancing and having gay parties with so many of the boys away, and in the second place——"

She hesitated and blushed and stammered and looked past me at a shop window display.

"In the second place?" I prompted.

"Well, it sounds horrid—but in the second place no girl likes to be a wall flower. And with the boys away—all the best boys, anyway—she is lucky if she gets half her card filled. Of course, you understand, we wouldn't think of giving up dancing just on that account, but——"

"I understand," I said, and she was much relieved.

Cassatt Wedding Postponed.

Newport is in the throes of indecision. Less than a fortnight ago each and every cottager was emphatically proclaiming a determination to remain in Rhode Island "until after Halloween, at least." A score or more society leaders announced prospective Thanksgiving dinners. There was every surface reason to believe that the season would last until Dec. 1 and then——

The most important nuptial event scheduled for the fall season was unexpectedly postponed. I refer to the wedding that was to be of Miss Lois Buchanan Cassatt to Capt. John B. Thayer of the United States reserves. I wrote several weeks ago of the announcement of Miss Cassatt's engagement and of the speculation that centered upon the possible scene of the ceremony. It was toss and draw whether it would be a church affair, formal and elaborate to the last degree, or a simple, family and intimate friends function at "Mid-Cliff," the home of Mrs. Alexander J. Cassatt, grandmother of the bride.

Miss Cassatt has been one of the most popular members of Newport's younger set and you can imagine the social consternation that followed her unexpected departure from Newport last week, accompanied by her grandmother, and with not so much as a word vouchsafed as to her future plans. "Mid-Cliff," so ran the brief report given out by Mrs. Cassatt, is closed for the season. This in itself proved something of a jolt to the cottagers, but the day after Miss Cassatt's abrupt departure with her grandmother, a tiny placard was posted on the gates of "Mid-Cliff" announcing that the place was for sale.

* *

Closing Summer Homes.

The next day Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs closed "Rose-cliff" and left for New York, telling a few intimate friends that she had changed her mind about remaining in Newport until after Thanksgiving.

The result, more or less, to be expected, was the immediate departure of several more families for their town houses and announcements that many more families were "considering" a change in their plans for the fall season.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene S. Reynal have elected to remain in Rhode Island until the first of November, but then they have taken a Park avenue apartment for the winter and as it will not be ready for them for several weeks their decision is not without its reason. Mr. and Mrs. W. Averell Harriman have gone to Arden, N. Y., for a brief stay, after which they will take up their winter residence in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Carhart came into New York for a few days, gave two dinner parties at the Ritz, and have gone on to their place at Carhart, S. C.

Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Aldrich, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Shearson, Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Hatch, and Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Eddy have returned to New York and have taken apartments at the Ritz for the winter.

The Rev. Herbert Shipman and Mrs. Shipman have returned to New York from Newport and have opened their town house in Madison avenue for the season.

* *

Miss Peary a Bride.

Coincident with the return to town of many members of the social set have come announcements of "set forward" military weddings and from now until the opening of the opera season these affairs will claim the interest of both matron and debutante.

By the time this is read one of the most interesting weddings of the fall season will have taken place. I refer to the marriage of Miss Marie Anighito Peary, daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Robert E. Peary, to Edward Stafford, son of Justice Stafford of the District of Columbia. The ceremony is scheduled for Saturday, Oct. 6. Miss Peary is the "Snow Baby" of twenty years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick S. Converse have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mary Tudor Converse, to Lieut. George A. McCook of the United States reserves, son of Gen. and Mrs. Anson G. McCook. Lieut. McCook received his officer's commission at the Plattsburg training camp and is now stationed at Camp Upton, the army cantonment at Yaphank, L. I. The bride to be is a sister of Mrs. Junius S. Morgan Jr., daughter-in-law of J. Pierpont Morgan.

Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Sr., by the way, have returned to their town house after a summer spent in Bar Harbor, Lenox, and Bretton Woods.

Wall street interests are likewise linked up in the forthcoming marriage of Miss Alta Cary Guernsey, daughter of Mrs. John M. Guernsey of Peoria, Ill., to Rene A. De Russy, son of Thomas M. De Russy of Park avenue, New York. Mr. De Russy is a prominent member of the New York stock exchange. He is a member of the New York national guard and of the New York Yacht and Athletic clubs. He is secretary of the Military Order of Foreign Wars and belongs to the Society of Colonial Wars.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Guinness, who, at the beginning of the war, also turned over their London residence to the British war office for hospital purposes, have returned to New York after a summer spent in California.

Mrs. Ralph Orson McGraw

The wedding of Miss Louise Schoolcraft, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Schoolcraft of 1907 Montrose boulevard, and Ralph Orson McGraw took place recently. Mr. and Mrs. McGraw will be at home after Nov. 1 in St. Louis.

LONDON SOCIETY by LADY MARY

Dancing Ban for Soldiers on Leave May Be Lifted

LONDON.—[Special Correspondence.]—American naval and military officers abound in London just now. When they first arrived, a few weeks ago, people used to point them out and feel rather excited at seeing them. Gradually, however, the novelty has worn off and they are no more strange to encounter them than are the Australians, the New Zealanders, the Canadians, and the various other colonials who are continually passing to and fro through London.

There is an agitation afoot to try and induce Lieut Gen. Sir Francis Lloyd, who commands the London area, to rescind his stern decree concerning dancing by officers and men in uniform at hotels and public places. I am told that it is being seriously considered by the military authorities and that by Christmast time "dancing in moderation" may be permitted once more to the boys on leave.

It certainly seems a foolish and arbitrary act to have stopped altogether this healthy and innocent form of enjoyment. From my own personal knowledge I know that Canadians and Australians who come to London, either on leave from France or from distant camps in the north of England, earnestly desire to be able to "shuffle their feet" a bit when they are acting as cavaliers to the sisters, cousins and aunts whom they delight to honor as guests and companions in their various efforts at festivity.

I have also heard a whisper that should these changes come to pass one of the first dances in London will be given at the wonderful Y. M. C. A. hut for the American soldiers in Aldwych. This has become one of the show places in wartime London. I looked in there the other afternoon and found a large party of interested visitors under the guidance of Lady Ward (who used to be Miss Jean Reid, Whitelaw Reid's daughter) having tea with a group of American soldiers. Lady Ward was looking particularly pretty and graceful in a long straight coat frock of palest beige, with a broad satin hat of the same shade that was quite untrimmed except for a vivid line of bright colored embroidery encircling the crown. She was pouring tea from a big brown earthenware pot and seemed to be thoroughly enjoying the novelty of the situation.

* *

Of course, the chief subject of conversation is the attack on London by the Hun raiders. It is rather interesting to listen to the various views expressed by women on the subject of the birds of prey. Also, it is astonishing to note how steady are the nerves of London women when they really come to the point of actual contact with definite danger.

People talk a good deal about the irresponsible frivolity of the twentieth century woman, but it seems to me that they talk without knowledge, and certainly without observation. English women, as a mass, are behaving magnificently, often in difficult circumstances, and it is the sort of behavior that has no separate evidence or influence of caste. It is just the national reply to the need for a steady heart and strong control.

In Mayfair there is no less danger than in Whitechapel, and women's nerves are built pretty well on the same principle, no matter where they live. But I hear of acts of sheer courage on the part of women and girls at both ends of the social ladder that make one feel, after all, just a little proud to be a woman.

* *

A good many of the big mansions in the west end of London have huge and strongly built and protected cellars and strong rooms. Many of these, in the event of a raid, are now thrown open to the public, and people from the streets are invited to enter the houses and take shelter until danger is past. The Duchess of Marlborough was one of the first to set an example in this direction. She has huge underground accommodations in the way of wine cellars, coal cellars, storerooms, and various other quarters at Sunderland house, which stands alone in its own solid block of masonry in Curzon street. There are a great many small, old, ramshackle houses quite close to it, and lots of people took advantage of the duchess' wide open door during one of the recent night attacks.

Another big house with ample cellar accommodation is that of the Duke and Duchess of Somerset, in Grosvenor square, where again the door of the tradesmen's entrance was flung wide open at the first warning of approaching enemy airplanes.

STEPHENS Salient Six

Beauty • Power • • $1385.00

A mechanically perfect car—distinctive without being conspicuous—conservative without being obscured by its similarity to other cars.

The one car that burns all the gas. A perfected overhead-valve, six cylinder engine. All the gas is vaporized to a superlative degree. It is all utilized in every cylinder and instantly expelled. Tremendous power—instantly responsive to the driver's need—yet the car can idle along through crowded traffic at a snail's pace when necessary.

Comfort and convenience have been the dominant thoughts in the minds of the designers. Modernity best describes the contour of the body, the fit of the top and windshield—the blending sweep of the fenders and running boards. It is a car any owner will be proud to possess.

The seating arrangement provides even more than the usual amount of room for driver and passengers. A demonstration will convince you it is the car for you. Call and see the 1918 models now on exhibition at our show rooms. Two models, $1385 f.o.b. factory. Catalogue free on request.

FORCEFUL SPEAKING

For Men and Women—Three Classes Started

The biggest men in the world today are "splendid talkers." Always in demand. The effective, fluent speaker commands the highest salary and position. The timid, shy, backward person never succeeds. He "puts off" and dreams about himself, and becomes a dismal failure in life. Learn to speak with self-confidence, will-power and poise, and to convince in business or at any gathering. It means leadership for you.

Our principal instructor, Dr. C. E. Rostell, Ph. D., of England, is one of the greatest teachers in the world of "Speech-Power." He trains you to be a "forceful, convincing talker." A personal interview with him will quickly convince you. Call or phone Randolph 2804 for appointment. Classes or private.

TOMORROW evening the "Four-Minute Men" will launch the most extraordinary speech making campaign ever held in this country. They plan to carry the verbal message of the second Liberty loan to the ears of every adult Chicagoan within three weeks. Chicago's most prominent men in every walk of life have enlisted for this whirlwind effort to assure the oversubscription of Chicago's quota in the new loan.

Speeches lasting four minutes each will be made during the intermissions in every legitimate and movie theater in the loop and in every movie theater from Evanston to South Chicago. A "flying squad" of prominent emergency speakers will be ready every night at the University club to answer the call of any organization in the city to address its members on the subject of the new loan.

The "Four-Minute Men" is an organization of prominent patriotic men who volunteered their services as speakers originally to stir the people to patriotism by four minute talks in movie theaters, before social organizations, and at street corners, on Germany's perfidy and upon the danger to the United States and to world democracy should Germany win.

When the new Liberty loan of $3,000,000,000 convertible gold bonds, bearing 4 per cent interest, were offered by the government the "Four-Minute Men" offered their services in giving the loan publicity. The offer was immediately accepted by the Chicago Liberty loan committee and warmly approved by President Wilson and Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, who recommended the organization of similar bodies of patriots in other cities.

Every speech will be preceded by a short introduction. More than 400 speeches are planned for the three weeks, before an audience estimated at 800,000 a week. It is believed that 20,000 persons a night in the loop will hear why the purchase of the new Liberty loan bonds is a paying investment as well as a patriotic service.

Among the speakers are men who will address the non-English speaking peoples in their native language. Speeches will be made in Yiddish, Polish, Dano-Norwegian, Slovak, Russian, Italian, Swedish, Greek, and various European dialects. Eminent lawyers, physicians, financiers, brokers, actors, bankers, theologians, jurists, labor leaders, and men prominent in municipal and state government are among the speakers.

Probably no more prominent or more representative group of men was ever gathered together for speech making than this. Every theater manager in the city has been enthusiastic in coöperating with the "Four-Minute Men" in making the campaign a success. Otis Skinner himself will launch the campaign tomorrow night with a speech during the first intermission of "Mister Antonio" at Powers' theater.

For tomorrow night the following speakers are engaged for the loop theaters:

Powers'—Otis Skinner.
Playhouse—Andrew R. Sheriff.
Illinois—Levy Mayer.
Blackstone—David R. Forgan.
Cohan's Grand—Judge Kenesaw M. Landis.
Auditorium—Charles S. Cutting.
Garrick—Former Mayor Carter H. Harrison.
Cort—Edgar B. Tolman.
Princess—Bishop Samuel Fallows.
Colonial—Horace Kent Tenney.
Olympic—Charles W. Folds.
La Salle—Carl Latham.
Majestic—Former Gov. Edward F. Dunne.
Palace — Former Gov. Charles S. Deneen.
McVicker's—Francis O'Shaughnessy.
Rialto—Roswell B. Mason.
Great Northern Hippodrome—State's Attorney Maclay Hoyne.
Columbia—James Todd.
Strand—Henry R. Rathbone.

Clarence Darrow and others prominent in labor circles will make nightly speeches.

Famous Wedgwood Collection Again Shown at Institute

THE Frank W. Gunsaulus collection of old Wedgwood is on exhibition again at the Art institute, this time in the galleries of the new annex on the main floor.

This collection, containing a fascinating assortment of plaques, medallions, vases, and figures, in colored jasper and basalt, was formed in the beginning for Arthur Sanderson in England and was exhibited in the Royal Scottish museum at Edinburgh and now belongs to the Art institute.

Several of the pieces to be seen here were made for kings and princes and celebrated collectors who came from many foreign countries to secure them. Indeed, the first patron of Josiah Wedgwood was the lavish Empress Catherine of Russia, for whom he made the grand table service decorated with views of English country seats, and his best patrons came in time to be the members of the court and aristocracy of France.

◆

Of Wedgwood and his work the words of Gladstone are perhaps the most vivid. He says:

> In my opinion he was the greatest man who ever, in any age or country, applied himself to the important work of uniting art with industry. He completely revolutionized the character of the fabrics made in England at the period. He recalled into existence the spirit of Greek art. Even industrially the development he brought about was wonderful, for he made England a great exporting country for his own wares.

You can understand, too, the enthusiasm of Gladstone when you stand before the cases which contain Wedgwood's work. For me the plaques, both the larger decorative ones and the miniature portrait plaques, are the most delightful of all the work shown. The decorative plaques, intended for mantel pieces, cabinet pictures, and other ornamental furnishings, include among their number the exquisite "Marriage of Cupid and Psyche," done in light blue jasper, from Russia; the "Judgment of Hercules" in darker blue jasper, from a mantel piece in Ireland; "Mercury Joining the Hands of Brittain and France," and "Priam Begging the Body of Hector from Achilles," in dark blue jasper and designed by Pacetti at Rome.

There is action and spirit in every line of these plaques and the drapery of the women and the strength and muscle of the men are shown in marvelous detail.

◆

As for the miniature portrait plaques they are of such subjects as the kings and queens of Asia Minor, of the various philosophers and warriors of the world, of the popes of Rome and the emperors and rulers of other nations and countries.

You can see some remarkably fine cameo portraits also. The one of the empress of Russia, Catherine the Second, with the ground of rich blue, is close to perfection in its finish and execution.

There are tea and coffee sets, some of solid jasper and others of jasper dip. Then there is a tea set with children at play on the cups and acanthus leaves on the saucers which are rarely beautiful. His flower pots are handsomely different from the general run of such articles, with the ornamental motives of foliage and blossoms, but so conceived that they in no way clash with the kind of plant to be put in the vessel.

◆

Besides the above there are chessmen, the design for the figures medieval rather than classical, in accord with the spirit of the game.

His portraits of great men are among the most interesting of his varieties of work to the vast majority of people. Whole periods of history are represented. We see the illustrious men of ancient and modern times, princes, statesmen, philosophers, and poets. And, of course, there is Shakespeare and Nero and most of the emperors and also the famous Greeks.

In the adjoining galleries there are other varieties of work. There is some German glassware of the eighteenth century presented by Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Sprague and some ancient glass found in Syria about the year 200 B. C. sent by Mrs. Ernest Dale Owen. One entire room is devoted to continental porcelain, the gift of Alfred Duane Pell.

◆

On Tuesday the Arts and Crafts' exhibit will open at the institute. At the same time the paintings of the western artists of note will be hung.

◆

The twenty paintings from the Municipal art gallery which hung at the institute last week have been removed, after much interested comment from the visiting public. These were purchased by the women's clubs affiliated with the Municipal Art league, and have hung at the Municipal pier during the summers of 1916 and 1917.

◆

In the Des Moines, Ia., library next month there will be the first exhibit of paintings by Chicago artists. Among those who will represent the city will be Charles Hauberg, the marine painter, whose canvases have been widely exhibited here, both at the Art institute and at the Swedish Art club.

◆

The extension department of the Art institute is now entering on its second year. Its first season it served fifteen cities and this year much more is expected of it. Already nearly twenty-five cities have been enrolled and arrangements are going on with other cities.

This extension plan is a coöperative scheme which the artists of the United States and those of the Chicago Art institute are conducting together. The Art institute takes the initiative and the artists and sculptors contribute their works. This year there is to be added attention paid to the lectures given on interior decoration and on the art of the garden.

THE BANQUET SEASON.

Here comes the banquet season,
  The melancholy nights,
Infested by toastmasters
  And other weary wights;
By after dinner speakers
  Diffusing poison gas.
Here comes the banquet season,
  O, let this chalice pass!

Here comes the banquet season,
  With feeds of hoover size,
And wives who are suspicious
  Of telephonic lies,
Of merry jest and whimsey
  And bun mots flashing free,
The sparkling Scotch and seltzer—
  The clever jeu d'spree.

Here comes the banquet season,
  The tankards and the tanked,
When many a noble feaster
  Goes down spurlos versenkt,
But hasten, O, my brothers,
  Let not our spirits sag,
For like the thirsty antelope
  We'll leap from jag to jag.

"Leave me alone."

"How much of a loan shall I leave you."

"You've got a terrible nerve."

"Yes, that's what is giving me toothache."

"You're some kidder."

"And you're some kid. Where you going?"

"I'm not going. I'm coming back."

"Where from?"

"Work."

"Is that your lunch box?"

"Why, no," sarcastically, "that's a piano I always lug around with me, so I can have music with my meals."

"Don't act fluffy, woman; have a care."

"I know where you can get a big one for a nickel."

"What's the matter with you, anyhow? I said have a care."

"My mistake; I thought you said 'have a beer.'"

"Honest, tell me where you're going, Mazie."

"How did you know my name is Mazie?"

"I guessed it."

"Well, then, guess where I'm going."

"Can I see you home?"

"You can if your eyesight is good."

"Gee, but the weather is frosty tonight."

"Say, who wished you on me, anyhow?"

"Don't you remember, I'm the fellow who held an umbrella over your head the other night?"

"That's all it was—an umbrella—not a mortgage."

"I don't think you're giving me a square deal."

"You've been flagging me every evening for a week. What's the game, anyhow?"

"There's no game; I just like to talk to you."

"My mother doesn't approve of my meeting young men on street corners."

"Your mother is right. After this we'll meet in the middle of the block."

"And, besides, we've never been properly introduced."

"I'm taking the same chances you are."

"Sir!"

"I'm the only son of a man who's made all kinds of money."

"Honest?"

"What's the difference as long as he's made it."

Actual Service Gives Leadership To Firestone SUPER CORD TIRES

WITH numerous makes of cord tires contesting, the past year has witnessed the sharpest rivalry for Tire Supremacy that motordom has ever known.

In this contest the Firestone Super Cord rightly came into its acknowledged leadership, rightly because of the construction which is designed to produce strength, durability and flexible action.

The body of the Firestone Super Cord Tire is built of walls of stout cord, each cord imbedded in pure gum, no two cords ever touching to cause friction. The cushion (which is under the tread to absorb shocks and protect the inner body) is a thick layer of pure gum; the tread is tough and thick. The beads which hold the tire in the rim are specially reinforced. The sidewall is also reinforced giving extra strength against rim-cut and raising the bending point of the tire safely high. More mileage at less cost. Users of Firestone Cord Tires are getting the highest average mileage enjoyed by car owners.

That motorists find extra values in Firestone Tires is proved by the fact that our sales increased 72 per cent this year up to September 1st. Our total business this year will exceed $60,000,000.

New Fabric Tire Features Suggested By Success Of Cord Construction

This cross section at your dealer's will show you the extra mileage in Firestone Fabric Tires

3½ inch actual size

Firestone FABRIC TIRES have benefited by every feature of cord tire construction which can be used to advantage. THICK, TOUGH TREAD gives longer surface wear. MORE RUBBER BETWEEN LAYERS. Added protection against internal friction and greater resiliency. THICK CUSHION STOCK. Still more resiliency, protection against tread separation and stone bruise. REINFORCEMENT IN SIDE WALL. Greater strength at the bead. Firestone dealers will show you a cross section of the newest output of FIRESTONE FABRIC TIRES, explaining the features that add more miles to Most Miles per Dollar.

SEPARATISM IN AMERICA.

For the separatism which has caused so much uneasiness and even alarm in this country since the war began the American people are themselves not without blame. Too often the newcomer's first experience here is with swindlers and unscrupulous land agents. Little is done to enlighten him as to the real spirit of America or to correct his misinterpretation of what he hears and sees. As a German-American has lately explained, he "reads of political scandals, attacks on the president and other prominent men, and comes quickly to the conclusion that all is humbug in this country, that there is no honesty among our officials. He despises our officials because they are not treated with the respect which would be their due in Germany; he is accustomed to pomp and ceremony, to rigid enforcement of every law. He does not understand our liberty, but considers it a kind of weakness."

Even after his naturalization Americans speak of him as a German and treat him as a German. This continues. When the war in Europe broke out Mr. Bryan said publicly that Americans of German extraction would disgrace themselves if they stood against Germany. No one has chided the Germans for founding Little Berlins in American cities, reading German language newspapers in America, perpetuating German customs in America. It was found quite charmingly picturesque and interesting. So far as sentiment went, it was on the whole encouraged.

Naturally enough this separatism has given the alien a strangely distorted view of American life. Homesick for the "old country" or recalling the good in it while forgetting things not so good, he sees little to admire in our ways of working, our family life, our institutions. To quote again from this German-American writer, "he continually draws comparisons between German and American conditions, and all these strengthen him in his belief in the superiority of Germany, even though a great many of these comparisons are outrageously unjust."

It is immensely difficult for a German to become an American. We assume that he comes here to escape tyranny at home. That was true once; after the upheaval of '48 malcontents flocked to America and took on our ways and ideas with the utmost enthusiasm. Carl Schurz, Butz, Brentano, and the German-Americans who fought for the Union were of that vintage. But later on it was not to escape tyranny that Germans emigrated; they were docile enough subjects of their emperor; they came here to make money. They were young. They little realized the seriousness of the step they were taking. Even now they resent the suggestion that they must cease to be Germans in order to become Americans. Many of them have only a vague notion of the political conditions they left behind. In Germany they were not readers of newspapers. Here they are worked upon by a German language press, the interest of which is to support separatist tendencies to a considerable extent.

Whether this press itself has been supported to any extent by pan-German aid or even by government aid we cannot say. The Philadelphia Tageblatt revelations seem to point that way, though we should be sorry to think many of the German-American newspapers lent themselves to pan-German conspiracy. However, we know that Berlin has used other means of promoting separatism among Germans in America, and remarkably effective means they have proved. Foreseeing the war—in fact, planning it, as we believe—the pan-Germanists realized that America must either be kept neutral or be split. Hence the adoption of a policy that would serve as well in one case as in the other. Prince Henry visited America. We wined him and dined him. That tended to stimulate American liking for Germany. At the same time, it aroused tremendous enthusiasm for Germany among Germans in America. The kaiser founded a Germanic museum at Harvard. It delighted Americans and at the same time filled Germans in America with enthusiasm for Germany. Exchange professorships had a like result. Meanwhile German literary societies, German singing societies, and German social organizations of various sorts were set going everywhere. Americans, with an eye for romance and the picturesque and none for consequences, failed to recognize that this revival of Germanism among German-Americans was preparing the very situation we now deplore.

Alien separatism is of course by no means confined to those of German blood. We have our little Italys, our little Bohemias, Polands, etc., etc. A good deal of this is inevitable, since people who do not speak English or share in American customs necessarily flock together. In time American life will absorb them all. But we object to the obstruction of this assimilation for selfish ends, and now that we have been wakened by the possibilities of division in war time, possibilities which are doubtless greatly exaggerated but which are not pleasant, we ought to see to it that separatist influences are vigorously and intelligently opposed.

It is especially important at this time and to this end to avoid the prejudice which does not differentiate between loyal Americans of German blood and the minority who either willfully or through the misguidance of German influence have failed to yield whole hearted allegiance and active support to the country in this war. The loyal American of German blood is one of the most valuable constituents of the American nation. He should not be punished for the sins of the German autocracy or the folly of disloyalists in this country. But he should help us to discriminate by repudiating his would-be representatives and making it clear to all his loyal American fellow citizens that they do not represent him.

"DICTATORS."

The Cologne Gazette acknowledges that "enemy diplomats" have persuaded a large section of the German people to hanker for democracy. Shocking! Monstrous! Imagine Germans listening to pleas for democracy from "such dictators as Wilson, Lloyd George, and Kerensky!"

A German official editor in a tight fix is certainly a genius. For purposes of sophistry Kerensky may pass as a dictator, though we have not noticed that the Russians are any too eager to mind him, but in Wilson's case and Lloyd George's you find a centralized authority essential to the conduct of a great war. Then what are President Wilson and Lloyd George but uncrowned kaisers?

Were we addressing the editor of the Cologne Gazette we might ask if he ever chanced to hear that our American "dictator" does not rule by divine right, that he is elected by the people, that he is not in office for life, that he cannot bequeath the "dictatorship" to his posterity, and that means are always at hand for his impeachment. We might ask if the learned editor has chanced to hear that the house of commons may at any moment force the British "dictator" to resign. Next morning, however, out would come the Cologne Gazette with new sophistries, new appeals to prejudice and rancor, new substitutions of heat for light.

Very ingenious, the argumentative wriggles of a press that thus cleverly serves the All Highest. But when "a large section of the German people" hankers for democracy we suspect that it is perhaps less in spite of that press than because of it. Pushed too far, humbug tends to undo its own work. Nota bene: There are Germans who can see through a grindstone.

OUR PRESENT DUTY.

It has been remarked that autumn seems to be the open season for peace talk. The recollection of an indecisive spring offensive and the prospect of winter, which is necessarily unproductive in military strategy, conspire in behalf of pacifist propaganda. And it is not only the pacifists who talk peace; many others speculate on a settlement "before Christmas." The kaiser probably prays for it every night before he goes to bed.

If this speculation were merely a harmless diversion, no one could take exception. Quite frequently it carries no more poison than arguments over the outcome of the world series. But we must not overlook the fact that it has possibilities of evil. If any large number of persons got the idea that war was likely to be over within six months the country would suffer from a very definite slackening in our war preparations.

No impartial observer would be willing to say that the developments in Europe or America give any promise of peace within six months. The president's note to the pope, asserting that we cannot negotiate with the present rulers of Germany, remains as the final official word of the allies on the subject, and you may search in vain for assurances that a diminution of the power of the Hohenzollerns is immediately forthcoming.

It should also be remembered the most vigorous prosecution of our war efforts is the surest and quickest road to the kind of peace we can accept. Speculation as to other mediums of achieving that result merely strengthen the enemy and weaken ourselves.

There is an excellent argument, moreover, that we in the United States have not as yet earned the right to talk peace. With a few technical exceptions we have not fired a single gun. We haven't got into the fight. Our allies have every justification to talk about premature settlements, but they are preparing to go right ahead. Under the circumstances we can do no less.

KILLING THE ENEMY.

The killing of the enemy is regarded as a necessary incident of war. The object of war being to impose national will upon an enemy the only fashion thus far discovered in human affairs to accomplish this is by weakening the enemy until he accepts terms. One method of weakening him is by killing his soldiers. It is not the only one, but it cannot be neglected and soldiers are taught to kill.

An army officer, talking of the training of young men, said that they had to be taught to be "dirty fighters." A euphemism would have saved him from considerable criticism. "They have to have the vicious look that shows a purpose to kill," he said.

Pacifism which can reconcile itself, in national emergency, to the theory of war, in anguish and agony, recoils in horror from the idea that the men sent out to make sacrifices for national purposes should be instructed effectively in the methods of carrying on these purposes.

The New York Evening Post is convinced that this officer is unfit to teach American soldiers. He would degrade American soldiers to "the level of Prussians by instruction of this kind." The Post hopes that Secretary Baker will not stand for such instruction for a single minute.

We fear Secretary Baker will be obliged to permit the instruction to continue. The Prussians would be glad to meet the young men of the Post school of war. When American troops leave their trenches they cannot, with personal safety or for the good of their nation, carry the aspect of men reluctant to inflict injury. Inflicting injury is a necessary part of the work in which they will be engaged.

The deliberate brutalizing of a soldiery is a thing apart from the hardening to need. Euphemisms may spare our sensibilities, but the men who must do the work must know how to do it. Otherwise it will be done upon them.

Editorial of the Day

AS IT WAS NOT WRITTEN.

[From the New York Sun.]

The Prussian reply to the vatican's peace message addressed to Cardinal Gasparri by "a member of the kaiser's entourage," would be more intelligible to the world if it read thus:

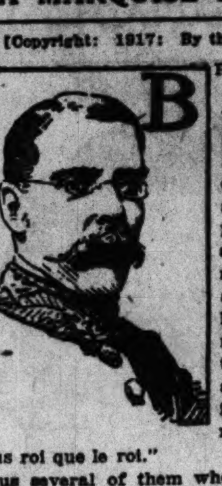
"Herr Cardinal: The kaiser-king has been following for a considerable time and with high respect and sincere gratitude the efforts of his holiness.

"My imperial master desires his holiness to know that, having failed to terrify the world by the invasion, at the outset of the war, of one of the most Catholic countries of his holiness; having failed with murder, rape, slavery, and sacrilege to break the spirit of that same Belgium; having failed not only in this but in all his other great attempts to compel the world to bow to Prussian frightfulness—the kaiser-king is glad to avail himself, in all hypocrisy, of any effort that his holiness may be willing to make to end temporarily a war that is as horrible as his majesty has been able to make it, yet not as horrible as he would have made it if he had known the stubborn courage of mankind; not as horrible as he will yet make it if he has a chance to rest and begin anew."

That would be the message of Wilhelm to the pope if by some miracle Wilhelm were deprived of the ability to lie.

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY

[Copyright: 1917: By the Brentwood company.]



BRITISH colonial governors, at any rate those who have spent the greater part of their existence in administering oversea dependencies, are apt to lose all sense of proportion and to become afflicted with megalomania. Some of them are so imbued with the knowledge that they represent the sovereign that they put forth the most absurd pretensions, and instead of being "plus royaliste que le roi" are "plus roi que le roi."

Thus several of them whose names I could mention, not content with having the national anthem played whenever they made their appearance at any public function, insisted on remaining seated with their hats on while its strains were in progress; whereas George V., like the late King Edward before him, invariably doffs his hat and stands while the royal anthem is being played or sung.

There was also the late Lord Stanmore, an uncle of Lord Aberdeen. He was a most charming, gifted, and handsome man. He spent the greater part of his life as Sir Arthur Gordon in administering colonies, with considerable success. But he was so imbued with the importance of his office that it was said that when he was governor of Ceylon he caused the chaplain to substitute in the litany the words "thy servant Arthur, our most gracious governor," for the phrase "thy servant Victoria, our most gracious queen."

This overweening sense of importance on the part of colonial governors is apt to lead them occasionally to adopt methods partaking of an autocratic Cæsar rather than of a constitutional monarch in dealing with the cabinet ministers and statesmen of the dependencies which they are supposed to rule and to indulge in displays of despotic authority which their own sovereign would never dream of venturing to adopt. As colonial statesmen lean strongly towards democracy and are disposed to regard the governor in the light of an ornament and as a mere decorative figurehead rather than as a public utility, quarrels frequently ensue, and in nine cases out of ten the crown finds it necessary to give right to the colonial ministers and to withdraw the governor, whose failure to maintain a proper understanding with the legislative heads of his colony is held to indicate that he is deficient in tact and official savoir faire.

* *

It is because Sir Gerald Strickland has been so glaringly lacking in tact, in sense of proportion, in savoir faire, and in powers of adaptability that he has, after a prolonged colonial career, been recalled from the governorship of New South Wales, a colony three times the size of the British isles, and has been superseded there by Sir Walter Davidson, hitherto governor of Newfoundland, and who, being an Irishman by birth, shines in those particular qualities in which Sir Gerald Strickland has shown himself so lamentably deficient. Sir Walter has been so great a success at Newfoundland that the premier and the legislature have protested against his leaving them and have placed themselves on record by presenting a request that he should be maintained in office; a request with which it was found impossible to comply. He is not unknown in the United States, and, a graduate of Christ college, Cambridge, is married to Miss Margaret Fielding, daughter of the late Gen. the Hon. Percy Fielding, younger brother of the late Earl of Denbigh.

Sir Gerald fortunately has an independent income, and is thus not so hardly hit as he otherwise would be by the loss of his Australian governorship, with its $25,000 a year salary, an equal amount in allowances, and official residences in Sydney, with its population of near a million, and in the country. Married to Lady Edeline Sackville, sister of the late Earl De La Warr, he has in addition to his English title, which he owes to his Grand Cross of the Order of St. Michael and St. George, the Maltese dignity of Count della Catena, which title he inherited from his maternal grand-uncle, and which he bears with the sanction of the English crown. It was created in 1745 by the grand master of the sovereign order of the Knights of Malta in favor of Peter di Bologna, with succession to the heir, under perpetual entail, to whom the estates of Peter di Bologna on the Island of Malta descend. These estates include the beautiful villa Bologna at Malta, now belonging to Sir Gerald.

* *

Sir Gerald is a member of the English bar, received his education at Oscott, the great Catholic school in England, and went from thence to Cambridge, where he succeeded in achieving the presidency of the Cambridge union. He is a thorough sportsman, has ridden the winner of the Grand National, and through his father, the late Capt. Walter Strickland of the royal navy, inherited Sizergh castle, in Westmoreland, which came to the Stricklands through the marriage of Sir Robert Strickland to the heiress of Sir Ralph Delincourt, in the reign of Henry III.

The Strickland family is one of the most ancient in England, and has for near a thousand years borne as its crest a bird which is described in old heraldic phraseology as "A turkey cock in its pride." It was settled in Westmoreland long before the Norman conquest.

A scion of the house, William Strickland, accompanied Sebastian Cabot on his voyage of discovery to the new world, and on becoming too old for a life of adventure settled down at Boynton hall, which has been in the possession of the family ever since, and is now owned by Sir Walter Strickland, ninth baronet of his line and head of the house.

His father, the late baronet, figures in "Tom Brown's School Days" as Martin, the principal chum of the hero of the story. He was a wonderful old character and spent his 90th birthday in the hunting field, following the hounds over hedges and ditches, ultimately succumbing to an attack of influenza, which he declared to be the first illness of his life. A Tory of the ancient school, he entertained the most profound contempt for present day politics: a contempt so pronounced that he would not even go to the polls; and when a Conservative agent wrote to him asking for his vote, he replied in a letter which was given out for publication, to the effect:

"I do not know who has been so impertinent as to put my name to any list of voters. I only hope that no one will ever imagine that the miserable and degraded house of commons, which has ceased to be a deliberative assembly, and in which no one can honestly express his opinion without being in danger of the gaga, in any way represents me."

A Sir Thomas Strickland bore the banner of St. George at the battle of Agincourt. A Walter Strickland enjoyed the favor of Oliver Cromwell, who summoned him to "the other house of parliament" as Lord Strickland.

How to Keep Well. By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Questions pertinent to hygiene, sanitation, and prevention of disease, if matters of general interest, will be answered in this column. Where space will not permit or the subject is not suitable, letters will be personally answered, subject to proper limitations and where a stamped, addressed envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases. Requests for such service cannot be answered.

NATIONAL HOUSING CONFERENCE HERE.

THE next national housing conference will be held in Chicago Oct. 15-17. The various city and state governments will send representatives to this meeting, for they know that some of the men and women of broadest experience will be there to counsel on the very questions which these governments have seen no way of solving.

The large city knows that it has a housing problem. The cost of land is so great that the people are necessarily crowded. The proportion of the family income consumed by rent is so large that congestion of ground space, overcrowding in rooms, boarders in already overcrowded quarters, and relay beds are found to be in evidence. Subdivision building has so much to commend it that practically every community has shut its eyes to the shortcomings and indirect harmful results from subdivision building.

The successive changes from slower to faster methods of transportation have blighted so many areas which, when built up under the prevailing method of transportation, seemed just right as to location and arrangement. The shifts of residential quarters from one section to another as the result of social whim or the desire of people to be with congenial neighbors, the growing up and changing of foreign speaking groups, the shifting of use of property from residences to retail stores, to wholesale stores, to factories.

All of these factors at work in every large city make it plain to even the most ostrich-like persons that large cities have their housing problems. The discovery of recent years is that small cities and even towns have theirs as well.

A few years ago Prof. Tufts went into the smaller cities and towns of Illinois and brought back an illustrated report showing that bad housing in a city is not a quality of size in that state. Then came the Springfield survey with its minute and detailed confirmation, so far as that city was concerned, of the findings by Prof. Tufts. If Springfield has as much bad housing in proportion to size as Chicago, so have Peoria, Decatur, Quincy, Alton, Paxton, and Peotone. Mrs. Bacon finds that Indiana has the same amount and the same kind of bad housing as Illinois, and if these two states offend, then it is certain that no state is without an acute housing problem.

I imagine that every well informed individual knows that there is bad housing all around him, but what he does not know is that the disease is acute. He has an idea that, like death, the housing problem of his community must be faced some day, but, as the case in his attitude toward death, he thinks the day is remote.

He has wondered why it was that some men drink to excess, some leave their families, some women grow slatternly, some children go to the bad, typhoid springs up from nowhere at times, when scarlet fever breaks out it seems impossible to stop it until the schools have been closed, a few children have died, and everybody is in debt to the doctors. He has noticed all these things and wondered at them, but it has never occurred to him that they were connected with housing and certainly not that they meant that bad housing in his neighborhood was an acute disease.

Charles Dickens wrote: "Reform of the habitations of the masses of the people must precede all other reforms and without it all other reforms must fail." One's first thought when reading this is that the situation is hopeless. It has been almost a century since Dickens, recognized by his generation as one of the closest observers and one of the cleanest thinkers of his day, wrote this opinion. That Dickens was influential in his time is evidenced by the number of reforms which he brought about. His statement was "without it all other reforms must fail."

This is the opinion of probably the most successful reformer of his day. But let us not suppose that housing has not reformed since Dickens' day. Bad housing as we know it is very much better than bad housing as Dickens knew it. And this in spite of the enormous growth of cities, the change in the methods of industry, and the increase in the value of lands.

Bacon asked: "Since things alter for the worse spontaneously, if they be never altered for the better designedly, how is the evil to stop?" The Los Angeles health department recently stated in its monthly bulletin: "Where you live, in what you live, and how you live mean sickness or health, loss or gain to you." Note that of the three factors in producing disease two relate rather directly to housing—"where you live" and "in what you live."

Charles B. Ball quotes a leading Detroit authority as saying: "The reforms that lack spectacular appeal, that necessarily are slow in showing returns, and give little opportunity for brilliant skirmishes with the opposition are the reforms invariably needed. The fight against tuberculosis is such a reform; the changes contemplated by the housing commission constitute another."

Housing tends spontaneously to run down. In many instances the growth of the city causes the price of land to run up as the condition of the house runs down. A progressive city must change its transportation system though it knows that each change blights a lot of housing. There are scores of influences constantly making for bad housing and, as we all know, few are willing to undertake the unpopular work of trying to alter things for the better designedly, of doing the things that are necessarily slow in showing returns and give little opportunity for brilliant skirmishes with the opposition.

In spite of this obvious tendency for housing to degenerate and this obvious indisposition of people to work for improvements there has been a great improvement in the housing of people since Dickens' day. And also may we not find confirmation of Dickens' judgment in the failure of certain reforms to produce what was expected of them. "Without it all other reforms must fail."

We are disappointed at times in the amount of health protection purchased by a dollar given the health department. I know that one explanation lies in bad housing. I know where several families use one toilet it is impossible to prevent a case of typhoid fever from infecting some of the other people in the group. I know that where a family consisting of parents and several children must live, sleep, cook, eat, and do the washing in one or two rooms diphtheria is bound to spread once it gets a foothold.

I know that the consumption rate is high wherever the people live or work in rooms where there is less than 400 cubic feet of air space or seven feet square of floor space or the window space is less than onetenth of the floor space or the air is dusty or sunlight does not enter. We are disappointed at times in the amount of protection purchased by a dollar given the police department. One explanation is the handicap to police work which results from bad housing.

Charles B. Ball says: "The crowded houses and the crowded streets of the city are fertile soil in which to bring the seeds of crime to maturity. They warp all life; and it is not to be wondered at that a prominent clergyman of New York recently in addressing a Chicago audience said: 'We of the east are nearly past inquiring what kind of a civilization will our cities have in the future. We are asking will our civilization endure?' Had we gone at reforms according to what Dickens told us was the 'right end to' such misanthropical inquiries would not have been asked, the permanent returns of reforms would have been greater."

Mr. Ball quotes a seventeenth century translation of the Bible as making the psalmist say, "I prevented the dawning of the morning." The meaning is that the man prevented the sun from rising and finding him in his house or on his couch by arising before sun up. The use made by Mr. Ball of the quotation is that just as the sun can be preceded but not stopped from rising many plans for the prevention of slums have been devised.

Some of them are in rather general use. Some of the work of prevention is capable of being put on a paying basis. Among such plans are model villages, industrial villages, various types of community building associations, carefully planned transportation, and even strictly enforced building and health ordinances. Another plan having many logical foundation stones is zoning.

The most effective part of most such plans is a provision that the cost of land shall not increase in value unduly and that the benefit of such increase as there is shall not go to individuals and above all not to speculative holders. While this is the most effective part of a program to prevent the development of slums, it is not the whole program. The stopping of slums or, to put it differently, the cure of bad housing can be accomplished, but it is an expensive process.

There are more people interested in curing the obvious than there are in preventing the yet to be. More governments are interested in learning what can be done with their slums than they are in the prevention of slums. The cleaning up of zones of bad housing has been accomplished in many places. In most instances it has only meant that the people in those districts have moved into other districts, while the old districts have blossomed into parks, playgrounds, or boulevards.

Such abortive efforts at cure have caused discouragement. But some of them have not been open to the same objection. Notably Liverpool followed a better plan. They bought up the property in certain districts where the housing was bad, registered all the people who were in the districts, had them move out, tore down the old houses, built new ones healthy and sanitary but not costly or showy, and then gave the former tenants the first opportunity to move into the nwely erected quarters. The rents were kept down to a proper figure, and in order to make this possible the general funds bore a part of the expense. Unfortunately the war came on before it was possible to judge of the success of this experiment.

Another experiment along the same line is known as excess condemnation. Under this method a community condemns property for a park, school, bath, or some other improvement which can be depended on to enhance the value of property and simultaneously condemns all adjoining property that is liable to be enhanced in value. When this property is sold back to purchasers the increase in sales price over purchase price creates a fund that can be used for housing or other improvements.

The shortcoming of most plans for the cure of bad housing is that they are not comprehensive enough. In many instances they necessitate great changes in the community methods, many of which may not be permitted under the existing charters. For examples, excess condemnation, ownership of dwelling houses, the conduct of a rental business. Even zoning requires more powers than most charters grant.

They are not comprehensive enough in that they do not recognize the necessity of changing some of the customs and habits of the people who live in the poor houses. Not much can be accomplished until these people are thoroughly in accord with the new policy. Until they are both willing and anxious to live in the new houses. And that means that their point of view must always be known and catered to in the building.

RAYNAUD'S DISEASE.

L. L. writes: "I have a pain in my right hand so severe as to waken me in the night. Occasionally pain extends to elbow. First noticed numbness in the two middle fingers and last winter when sewing would soon have to stop and drop hand to side. Sometimes inside of hand is white, at other times (after using) red and burning."

REPLY.

It seems to be probable that you have Raynaud's disease. In this disease, when it affects one or more fingers, there is pain in the arm and hand. The finger may be white and numb or it may tingle. It may be blue and swollen. Hot baths and massage usually give relief. Cushing relieves the attacks at times by placing a rubber band rather tightly around the arm for a few minutes and then releasing the pressure.

ELECTRIFICATION OF I. C.; 72D STREET PAVEMENT.

Chicago, Oct. 5.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Is East Seventy-second street to be resurfaced this year? When does the Illinois Central company expect to start on track elevation and do they intend to electrify the South Chicago branch? J. C. N.

We have no proceedings on our books for resurfacing East Seventy-second street. If the property owners on this street will petition the board of local improvements an investigation will be made, and if found necessary proceedings for this improvement will be instituted. The ordinance for the electrification and elevation of the South Chicago branch of the Illinois Central railroad tracks is before the committee on track elevation for consideration, and has not yet been recommended for passage by the city council. Until the ordinance is recommended we cannot say what the intention of the railroad company is in the matter of electrification.

F. S. MITCHELL,
Superintendent of Streets.

73D STREET PAVEMENT.

Chicago, Oct. 5.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Why is it that each year Seventy-third street between Stony Island and Kimbark avenues is torn up for one reason or another and left in an unfinished condition? W. K.

Some of the larger holes in this street were filled with stone and covered with screenings some time ago, and it was our intention to oil same at once. However, there was a delay in our oil shipments, and before we received the oil the contractors doing work for the city electrical department in connection with the extension of the street lighting system tore up the street. When these contractors have completed their work and sufficient time has elapsed for the settling of the trenches dug by them we will repair and oil this street.

Superintendent of Streets.

CALIFORNIA AVENUE CAR LINE.

Chicago, Oct. 5.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Is any extension of the California avenue car line contemplated at the present time which would bring a car line north on California to either Irving Park boulevard or Montrose avenue? If there is, about when will the work start? H. C. L.

Extension of the California avenue line is not at present contemplated.

JOHN P. GARNER,
Commissioner of Public Service.

ILLINOIS CORPORATION LAWS.

Chicago, Oct. 5.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—1. How often is it necessary to hold stockholders' meetings in an Illinois corporation?

2. Must same be advertised; if so, how long?

3. Is there any penalty for not holding stockholders' meetings, as required by law; if so, what is penalty?

4. If company is not properly managed, what procedure is necessary to have receiver appointed?

C. L. WHITE.

1. Depends on your by-laws and on what you mean by "necessary."

2. Not unless required by the by-laws, which is not probable.

3. No statutory penalty, but it is likely that a company which is not holding meetings is also failing to report annually to the secretary of state. The statute provides that such failure shall work a forfeiture of the charter, but on proper terms the corporation can be reinstated.

4. It would be necessary to employ an attorney.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

LANDLORD WITHIN HIS RIGHTS.

years. Oct. 1st B telephoned A to move of the People.]—A has a lease of flat owned by B, expiring Nov. 1. A pays rent promptly and has lived in flat some years. Oct. 4 B telephoned A to move Nov. 1, and said he had already rented the flat to another party. No written notice was served. Is that a legal notice, and if not what redress has A? INTERESTED.

Unless the lease contains a clause automatically renewing it in absence of notice to the contrary it will terminate at the end of the term without notice and the tenant has no right to stay. Apparently your landlord is acting within his rights.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

ARE THE TRANSACTIONS CONNECTED?

Chicago, Oct. 5.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—An Indiana farmer, owning a large farm, goes security on a note and later makes a joint deed with his wife. What is his liability on the same note? J. A. WEAVER.

You do not state whether the note and deed transactions are connected. If not his liability on the note remains the same as before the deed. The collection of a judgment may be affected.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

As but limited space can be given letters in this department, writers must confine themselves to 200 or 300 words. Unless they give us their full names and addresses their letters will not be considered. No manuscript will be returned unless the writer sends postage for that purpose.

THE JUVENILE COURT ACT.

Chicago, Oct. 2.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Several well founded and well supported indictments against the Juvenile court and its methods have appeared from time to time in your columns. May I be permitted to cite another example typical of the procedure in that court?

A complaint was filed some six months ago charging a young girl of 16 with delinquency. The girl, as sweet and innocent as one could find by long traveling, is one of nine children, all under 20, living with their parents, honest, hardworking, respectable people, in a north shore suburb. The girl duly appeared in court with her parents and counsel and repeatedly and insistently urged on the court a prompt hearing and a finding of guilty or not guilty.

Judge Arnold, presiding over that court, finally heard all the evidence for the prosecution, and finding nothing to sustain the charge, refused to waste time hearing evidence for the defense, and denied an urgent request by the defendant, who wished to submit testimony with a view to a prompt and more complete vindication. Was the case thereupon dismissed? By no means. It was continued for six months over the strenuous objections of the defendant. In the meantime the child and parents have been pestered and annoyed by various officious probation officers and investigators, who treat the case as though the girl were bad and had been adjudged delinquent.

At the end of six months the defendant appeared by her counsel and moved a dismissal of the case. The court said it was too busy with other matters and continued the case again sine die, thereby continuing also the cloud over the girl's reputation. Later the court said it would have an investigation made as to the conduct of the girl during the continuance. It was pointed out that investigations had already been made by officers of the court and that the reports of the same were in the files and that they were favorable.

It would appear under the Juvenile court act that it is immaterial that the defendant is not guilty of the offense charged, but if any indiscretion could be ferreted out the court could still punish the girl for an offense she is not charged with and happening subsequent to an arraignment. In the meantime there is no appealable order; the parents are poor; they can gnash their teeth in impotent indignation.

The court further asserts under this same act a paramount right to the care, custody, and control of children pending a final determination of the case, and that he has full power to deprive the parents of this natural right regardless of the guilt or innocence of the accused. In other words, in the present case Judge Arnold construes the Juvenile court act to authorize him to deprive a parent of his child by deferring trial until the child is 21, or three years longer than the parents can exercise legal control, and any rights whatever which the parents enjoy in the meantime are enjoyed solely by sufferance of the judge.

The extravagant expense of the Juvenile court is of minor importance in view of the evil it does in striking at the roots of society, assailing the family, and tending generally to produce criminals and anarchists.

It is not my purpose here to reflect on the judge of this court. It is reasonable to suppose, however, that he is well read in the charter act of his court and that his acts are in pursuance of a reasonable effort to carry out the intentions of the legislature as expressed in the statute. The court as now constituted being an instrument of oppression, does it not follow that it should be abolished or very material amendment made in its constitution?

RICHARD H. C. MILLER.

CROWDER'S STRANGE ORDER.

Chicago, Oct. 4.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Over a quarter of a million of our selected army joined the colors the other day. A splendid opportunity for some one in authority to say the proper word to cheer the boys, to arouse enthusiasm, to give the heart of hope to the soldiers before they march away to France to offer up their lives in defense of our country.

Only one of those in authority seemed to notice them—Gen. Crowder, the provost marshal general. Listen to his cheering words:

"Provost Marshal Gen. Crowder today issued this appeal to governors:

"'A large percentage of your population is about to leave home for the uncertainties of a soldier's life. While not an occasion for sorrow, it is a day for solemnity. It is especially inappropriate that it be marred by drunkenness. I therefore suggest you consider closing of saloons during such hours preceding entrainment.'"

What kind of a crowd does a mother, on reading this direct slap at the soldiers, think her son is going into? What kind of men does Crowder think compose the great army he has called together? What is George Creel, the censor, doing that he lets such stuff be sent out from Washington?

March forth, splendid men of the nation. You will do your duty, win victory, and be crowned with laurel wreaths.

ROBERT MANN WOODS.

Flushing, Mich., Oct. 3.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I want to thank you with my whole heart for the two editorials "For the American Future" and "Danger." They are perfect. Roosevelt is another grouch like La Follette because they cannot have their way.

MARY McCORMICK.

HOW AMERICA IS MAKING WAR

By Hamilton Fyfe

I HAVE seen Britain begin war, France begin war, Roumania begin war. I saw Russia in the early stages of the world upheaval. I saw Italy after the Italians had made up their minds they were in for a long struggle, not for the short campaign which was in the thoughts of most of them when they began. Now I have added to my memories that of the United States beginning war and I am not sure that, when in some future day I look back upon these memories and see all that has happened in its true perspective, I am not sure that I shall not then set down my American experiences as the most interesting of all.

Britain went to war in a hurry, France with a sigh of apprehension. Russia sang marching songs with a fierce joy in them and wondered what it was all about. Roumania light heartedly fancied that occupying Transylvania would be no harder than the taking of Jericho after its walls had been trumpeted down.

I found Americans neither up in the air nor down in the depths. They neither sighed nor sang. They had no illusions about the war being quickly finished off, nor were they in doubt as to the reasons for their entry into it. They were not hurrying. They were treating war as a matter of business and applying the ordinary rules of business to it.

The other allied nations made war like amateurs. The Americans make war like business men.

* *

THE allied nations which have been in the war from the beginning—I can say this because I belong to one of them and because I have had unusual opportunities to judge of their spirit and ideas—plunged into war as into an adventure. They ran to stop the ruffian who had determined to disturb the world's peace and the other ruffians who were persuaded to join in the ringleader's attempt to gain world dominating power. They ran because they saw that their homes and lives were in danger. They ran because they had no time to lose. France hoped to save herself from invasion. Britain hoped to save Belgium. Russia hoped to save Serbia. In spite of their running they were too late.

Of the allied nations which joined in later both Italy and Roumania found, also too late for the avoidance of bitter disappointment and heavy defeats, that they had not prepared as they ought to have prepared for meeting so dangerous and so desperate a foe as Germany. They had done more wisely to wait still longer until they could strike a heavier blow.

The United States did not run to war. This country has never cared for European entanglements and would have left the European nations to settle among themselves whatever strength should rule and not justice. For a long time it bore patiently with the insults and injuries of the Hun. Only when these became unbearable did the American people rise and, with the gesture of a man who only fights upon strong provocation, draw its sword and set to work to grind it, throwing the scabbard away. It would not begin before its weapon was edged and formidable.

War to this American people was no high adventure, no crusade, no rescue expedition. It was a business proposition. Just as much of a necessity, an unpleasant necessity, as clearing a farm of rattlesnakes or a ranch country of horse thieves. The American people wanted to live after its own fashion, not interfering, not being interfered with. Germany would not leave them alone. "This is our world," she said in effect. "You must do as we tell you or we shall hurt you." Then the patience of the United States was exhausted. "Very well, if you will have it so we will fight you," said the United States. And without hurry, at a steady marching pace, making preparation for a vast effort and for a long time ahead, the United States came into the war.

The other allied nations began like adventurers. The Americans began like business men.

* *

NOTHING businesslike about the uniforms of the French soldiers at the beginning. Recollect the red trousers which made the wearer a conspicuous target at long range? Lying out on a Somme battlefield and watching them I argued with a French friend on this topic in the first weeks of the war. "We shall never give them up," he cried. "They are our tradition, our inspiration, our panache." Of course they gave them up.

Amateurish the refusal of the British war office to speed up the provision of machine guns, when it was clear to every one who saw anything of the fighting that this was going to be a machine gun war. Worse and worse became the unbusinesslike conduct of Britain's war when the men sitting at desks in London missed the most important aspect of the change from open field fighting to trench fighting, and persisted in believing that earthworks could be destroyed by shrapnel, when from the front came the demand week after week in urgent terms for high explosive.

All unpreparedness, all lack of foresight, all scratching together of inadequate resources in the moment of peril, these are the marks of the amateur. These defects I was obliged to admit in England. I saw them paralyzing the efforts of France and Russia. The French army mobilized in the wrong place, and the German army entered France through Belgium, as all sound military opinion has held that it would. The Russians divided the responsibility for keeping their troops supplied with arms and munitions into compartments so completely separate from each other that headquarters did not know what the war office was doing, and the war office did not know what was the capacity of the munition factories, and the war minister kow-towed to a grand duke who was in charge of the artillery department, and the grand duke did nothing to spare that unhappy country the opening series of disasters which led directly to its present wretched state. All that was amateurish. So far as I can judge there will be none of this nerveless fumbling in the United States.

In four months this country has raised a very large army, has sent abroad many regiments which were partly trained already, and has begun to train the men who have never done any soldiering. For this purpose vast camps have been set up. The railways have had to study how to move nearly three-quarters of a million men. Most striking of all to me, when I recollect that not even Lloyd George dared to lay hands upon the liquor trade in England, is the forbidding of drinking in public by men or officers in uniform. At the camps all sellers of liquor within five miles are ordered to clear off. There are differences of opinion as to whether this is not too severe. But the point I want to make is this: whatever the government believes to be necessary it enforces. Other allied governments are afraid of this party or of that interest. The government of the United States does not seem to be afraid of anything or anybody. It is not thinking about politics. It is thinking about winning the war.

The other allied nations made war like politicians. The Americans are making war like business men.

* *

THE first act of the president after this country had declared war was to call for the assistance of its best known and most capable men of business. Numbers of them are giving their services, have been giving them for some time past. How long did it take us in England to see that it was essential to mobilize talent? Mr. Asquith did not want to introduce outsiders among the old gang of politicians. Lord Kitchener tried to do everything himself, would hardly let officers of ability and experience do anything to straighten out the muddle at the war office, let alone business men whom he distrusted and disliked. More than two years passed before this attitude was changed.

I have heard many grumbles about the slowness of Washington to seek out and set in order the measures needful for the success of the American arms and the security of the people who stay at home. Slowness! I should smile. Do these grumblers think that the measures in question are so simple, so clearly indicated, so easy to enforce? It is not difficult to put up a tall building. Architects and engineers can calculate accurately the strains and stresses, the quantity of material required, the rate at which work can be pushed on. You can speed up the manufacture of motor cars. You can, if need be, lay a railway in a hurry. In all these activities there is exact knowledge to go by. But who has calculated exactly the strains of war, who can point to the bases of any science of warfare?

All that the United States government can do is to guess at what will be needed, at the time the war will last, at the methods which will best aid in winning it. These matters cannot be known. The Germans thought the war would be settled under water by the U-boats. Some of us in the allied camp think it may be settled in the air. But nobody knows. Under these conditions it seems to me that this country has acted both with wisdom and with speed in doing so much as it has done within the short space of four months.

It is spending $16,000,000 a day and besides that lending every twenty-four hours $8,000,000 to the allies to keep them going. It has allotted $640,000,000 for the building of aeroplanes. It is going to build destroyers at a cost of $300,000,000 for the destruction of submarines. It will spend during the next twelve months upon new ships for commerce and for carrying to France all that the American troops will need there. One day I learn from the newspapers that a hundred thousand cylinders are being cast for aircraft at the rate of one thousand a day, and that this rate can be increased at will to five or even ten thousand. Another day I notice that six million flannel shirts have been ordered for delivery during the early part of the winter. Not a morning slips by without some announcement of this kind.

I saw the steady advance of famine in Russia and in Roumania. Simply for lack of foresight. I saw England hesitate and fumble over food control, even when hunger had begun to threaten her poor. Here the saving of food has been made an urgent duty already after four months of war. Coal is being "conserved."

Yes, the other allies made war like amateurs. The Americans are making war like business men.

THE SOAP-BOX.

"This, My Song, Is Made for Kerensky."

By Vachel Lindsay.

(From the October issue of Poetry, republished by permission.)

O market square, O slattern place,
Is glory in your slack disgrace?
Plump quack doctors sell their pills,
Gentle grafters sell brass watches,
Silly anarchists yell their ills.
Shall we be as weird as these—
In the breezes nod and wheeze?

Heaven's mass is sung,
Tomorrow's mass is sung
In a spirit tongue
By wind and dust and birds:
The high mass of liberty,
While wave the banners red,
Sung round the soapbox—
A mass for soldier dead.

When you leave your faction in the once-loved hall,
Like a true American tongue-lash them all;
Stand then on the corner under starry skies,
And get you a gang of the worn and the wise.
The soldiers of the Lord may be squeaky when they rally,
The soldiers of the Lord are a queer little army;
But the soldiers of the Lord, before the year is through,
Will gather the whole nation, recruit all creation,
To smite the hosts abhorred and all the heavens renew;
Enforcing with the bayonet the thing the ages teach—
Free speech!
Free speech!

Down with the Prussians, and all their works!
Down with the Turks!
Down with every army that fights against the soapbox—
The Pericles, Socrates, Diogenes soapbox,
The old-Elijah, Jeremiah, John-the-Baptist soapbox,
The Rousseau, Mirabeau, Danton soapbox,
The Karl-Marx, Henry-George, Woodrow-Wilson soapbox.
We will make the wide earth safe for the soapbox,
The everlasting foe of beastliness and tyranny,
Platform of liberty—Magna Charta liberty,
Andrew Jackson liberty, bleeding-Kansas liberty,
New-born Russian liberty:
Battleship of thought, the round world over,
Loved by the red-hearted,
Loved by the broken-hearted,
Fair young amazon or proud tough rover;
Loved by the lion,
Loved by the lion,
Loved by the lion!—
Feared by the fox.

Death at the bedstead of every kaiser knocks,
The Hohenzollern army shall be felled like the ox.
The fatal hour is striking in all the doomsday clocks;
The while, by freedom's alchemy,
Beauty is born.
Ring every sleigh-bell, ring every church bell,
Blow the clear trumpet and listen for the answer—
The blast from the sky of the Gabriel horn.
Hail the Russian picture around the little box:
Exiles,
Troops in files,
Generals in uniform,
Mujiks in their smocks,
And holy maiden soldiers who have cut away their locks.

All the people of the world, little folk and great,
Are tramping through the Russian soul as through a city gate,
As though it were a street of stars that paves the shadowy deep;
And mighty Tolstoi leads the van along the stairway steep.

But now the people shout:
"Hail to Kerensky—he hurled the tyrants out!"
And this my song is made for Kerensky,
Prophet of the world wide intolerable hope—
There on the soapbox, seasoned, dauntless,
There amid the Russian celestial kaleidoscope,
Flags of liberty, rags, and battlesmoke.

Moscow!—Chicago!
Come let us praise battling Kerensky!
Bravo! bravo!
Comrade Kerensky, thunderstorm and rainbow,
Comrade Kerensky, bravo, bravo!

IN FLANDERS FIELDS

By Lieut.-Col. John McCrae

The following poem is considered by some to be the finest poem of the war. Lieut. Col. McCrae is a Canadian. He was born at Guelph, Ont., and graduated in arts and medicine at Toronto university. At the outbreak of the war he was associate professor of pathology at McGill university. His brother is professor of medicine at the Jefferson Medical school, Philadelphia. When war was declared Lieut. Col. McCrae, who is a veteran of the South African war, was in England, and at once volunteered for the front. He was attached to an artillery unit of the service and saw all the heavy fighting. Later he was put in charge of a base hospital. The poem was originally published in Punch, London.

In Flanders Fields the poppies grow
Between the crosses, row on row,
That mark our place; while in the sky
The larks still bravely singing fly
Unheard amid the guns below.

We are the Dead! Short days ago
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset's glow,
Loved, and were loved; and now we lie
In Flanders Fields.

Take up our quarrel with the foe;
To you from failing hands we throw
The torch—be yours to hold it high!
If ye break faith with us who die,
We shall not sleep though poppies blow
In Flanders Fields.

IRELAND AND NEW JERSEY

By Lord Sydenham

NOW that America and the British empire are ranged side by side in this greatest cause for which men have fought, no shadow should be allowed to fall across their full mutual understanding. In the past the question of Ireland has frequently and inevitably stood between them, creating misconceptions on the one side and a certain soreness on the other.

When Irish sections are engaged in raising funds in America for their propaganda, it is quite natural that they should paint pictures which have left an impress on American minds and cannot easily be forgotten. The Germans, as we now realize, have for some years been eagerly striving to estrange the nations for their own purpose, and latterly they have displayed diabolical ingenuity in this particular base direction. Now and in years to come the wise man will guard his opinion carefully against the possibility of their having been inspired from Berlin.

The Irish question has provided opportunities of which the fullest advantage has been taken, and Americans, remembering the immense efforts which our common enemy has made to wreck this solidarity of the great republic, may perhaps feel inclined to revise impressions which the traitor nation of the world had an object in creating.

* *

THE treatment which England has meted out to Ireland in the past cannot be defended. Our forefathers made mistakes of many kinds. At the worst, they committed acts of harsh injustice; at the best they showed want of sympathy towards a high-spirited and idealistic people, whom they failed to understand. We cannot undo such errors, and at least Ireland has made us pay heavily for sins of omission and commission for which this generation and the last have not the smallest responsibility. For nearly fifty years England has been continuously striving to remove the grievance of Ireland, and had succeeded before this war in making her by far the most prosperous portion of the United Kingdom and one of the most prosperous countries in the world. I earnestly beg all Americans to recognize that pregnant fact. If our forefathers sinned, we have atoned.

The astonishing figures recently given by Prof. Crammond serve to show the happy economic position which Ireland occupied in 1914, when her exports amounted to £17 1s 6d and her imports to £16 4s 11d per head of population; the corresponding figures for the United Kingdom being only £9 5s 8d and £12 19s 1d, respectively. The prosperity of Ireland has been little affected by the war, which has added to the profits gained from food production, while the majority of the people declined to accept compulsory service or even to fill up the ranks of the gallant Irish regiments which have won bright laurels at the front.

* *

IN the throes of our struggle for existence, Irishmen were able to enter into relations with the enemies of civilization, and to make a dangerous rebellion involving murder on a large scale. In such circumstances, I am doubtful if any other people than the British would have set up a purely Irish convention in the hopes of reaching an agreement as to what Irishmen desire and would have released criminals in order to placate the authors of rebellion. I believe that the attitude of all the English and Scottish people towards the Irish question is one of complete willingness to accept any solution which Irishmen can suggest, with the only reservations that the security of the United Kingdom shall not be imperiled and that a strong minority shall not be coerced.

To Americans born and bred under a federal constitution, to which they are deeply attached, it may be difficult to realize our attitude and our position. May I be permitted to translate them into a parable? The state of New Jersey for 117 years has enjoyed a dominant position in congress, arising from representatives out of all proportion to its population. For at least forty years the great majority of the representatives of New Jersey have striven to take advantage of every turn of politics to further their own sectional objects and to create difficulties for the federal government

Having refused to bear their just share in the war and having chosen a period of intense national stress, a section of the citizens of the state entered into relations with the enemy, stirred up rebellion, and destroyed some of the finest buildings in Jersey City. These same citizens now demand either that the state of New Jersey should be converted into an independent republic, or that it should receive such a measure of home rule as is possessed by the dominions, which confer upon them complete control of their naval and military power, their harbors and shipping, and their entire fiscal policy.

I venture to ask what would be the attitude of Americans toward demands of this kind, complicated by the fact that a large minority of the people of New Jersey, including its most progressive citizens, passionately insist upon adherence to the American constitution and have shown that they will fight rather than be deprived of the protection of the federal government? Americans have faced all the horrors of a great civil war, and have borne immense sacrifices in defense of the union which they rightly regard as a most precious possession. Would they not say plainly to New Jersey, "You shall not create an independent republic on our eastern flank; we will guarantee you state rights and no more"? It is possible that some might even say, "You shall not have full state rights until you have shown that never again will you rebel or enter into treacherous relations with the enemies of the union."

* *

MY parable may be regarded as not strictly apt, because New Jersey is an integral part of American territory; but Dublin is much nearer to London than the capitals of most states of the union to Washington, and the dangers of an independent Ireland are greater than those of a separate republic in New Jersey.

I suppose that, in the fullness of time it is possible that Porto Rico may be admitted to the union. That will depend on the domestic conditions of the island; but it is certain that neither independence nor what we call colonial self-government will ever be conferred, although neither, in the geographical position of Porto Rico, would be dangerous to the commonwealth in the naval and military sense, as would either in the case of Ireland.

The American constitution most wisely recognizes the status of a territory as one of preparation for state rights, which are granted as soon as the congress decides that the period of probation has ended.

We might well maintain, as the Irish Unionists do maintain, that Ireland has proved herself unfit to receive state rights. I believe that, as I have said, state rights would now be given if the convention reaches an agreement on that basis. We cannot, however, accept the grave risks which some Irishmen desire to impose upon us, and I find it difficult to believe that any thoughtful American, who will put himself in our place and view our attitude in the light of my little parable, will say that we are wrong.

London, Aug. 25, 1917.

METAMORPHOSIS

By Corp. S. E. Hussey

Corporal Hussey, who gives here his impressions as a rookie, is with the newly created Eleventh Illinois infantry.

TO assemble, say, 1,200 men of various ages, diverse pursuits, and infinite differences of temperament, and presently to have welded them together as a unit in thought, direction, and purpose, this is a wonderful thing. It is a startling transformation in any case, but it is more impressively startling when these men are recruited from the large cities and are made to suffer the pains of this transition.

For there are attendant pains and agonies and heartaches. The pampered youth, subjected to sudden restriction, suppression of individuality, his debonair pretentions choked in their utterance, his fopperies of distinction turned back upon him in ridicule—here is a petty tragedy performed in miniature, while the greater drama is in the making.

All these traces of civilian habit and thought must be ruthlessly erased. The chap who stands enraptured under the spell of blaring brass and the cadence of marching feet sees only the rhythmic effect which has been attained through rigorous drill and the imposition of implacable discipline.

* *

NEVERTHELESS, all this is, well—it is excellent. We begin with what? With the undisciplined, the individualistic, the selfish, the capricious. And we finish with what? Impulse has given place to purpose, a thousand discords to a single harmony; but above all else we have achieved an ideal. The ideal is the regiment. The individual no longer thinks of himself; instead there is a fine concord of fellowship. Withdraw the individual, place him again in civilian life, who will say that this training has not been of inestimable benefit to himself and to the community? What was capricious in him before is now decision. He is alert, attentive, considerate, and there is more of the man in him than there would be otherwise.

I am speaking more especially of the volunteer. Here we have men ranging in ages from 16 to 45 years. They are commonly animated by motives of patriotic devotion. They are volunteers because they are enthusiasts. All this is admirable—it is inspiring. But because they are men of this type the process of military metamorphosis is of necessity the more irksome and tedious to them. They are men of spirit—it is more difficult to control them in the mass.

At first this spirit must be put under rigid restraint; it must be subdued, organized, and disciplined. In place of the individual, the regimental spirit must be developed.

Ludicrous things happen. To begin with, each man has a different notion as to how his equipment should be worn. This tendency, if not corrected, would result in a grotesque ensemble. (An ensemble, by the way, not so bad as civilians achieve with their clashing dissonances of garb.) And one can scarcely think how awkward and raw and incapable of rhythmic movement the average untrained man shows himself to be. His feet are given to eccentric and unpremeditated shufflings. His hands are rebels that defy the authority of his will. He executes right for left and left for right, and to march in cadence becomes a confusing complexity of steps that find him invariably at fault.

The rigors of drill correct these inconsistencies and bring grace to the awkward. What was at first a wavering line of writhing, wriggling, bobbing men in company front, struggling to align themselves, becomes at last a faultless stretch of impeccable plumb. The accomplishment of this formation with ease and an unhesitating rhythm is a veritable triumph compared with the early gyrations of the rookie line. These first attempts are more painful and uneasy than the faltering steps of a swaddled babe.

* *

THE recruit experiences his greatest hardship in getting used to mess, that indiscriminate service which takes no account of individual tastes. His complaints here are the more bitter, the more persistent, and the least availing. Those who have been used to strawberries in January (to reverse the phrase of a certain politician) are suddenly confronted with beans in June. This is nothing short of a dietary catastrophe, and produces alarm and dismay in those who have been accustomed to indulgences of the palate. Long and ardent are the discussions of mess shortcomings, but even this objection is in time obliterated and the prandial craving quieted by the subjection of self to a common undertaking.

Herein music, brassy, blatant, but thrilling, plays an indispensable part. The activities of the band begin with daybreak, and nothing is more exhilarating than the informal parade of the regimental musicians through the company streets before reveille, playing crisp marches and military measures. The drowsy rookie, half clad and disheveled, becomes in a moment alert and vibrant, and, rushing from his tent, joints in the crazy and delighted antics of his enthused fellows. Sufficient indeed is the reward of fervent acclaim that the band receives.

All these things are incidents descriptive of a transformation which is in itself and in its results inspiring. An unwieldy mob has been made mobile, pliant, and harmonious. Strangers have become devoted comrades. Patriotism, inchoate and unserviceable, has been given form and direction, the state has been strengthened, the nation enriched, and the individual taught those fundamentals of fellowship and unified action that cannot but serve him to good purpose in all the endeavors of his life. He who has experienced the benefits of military training will wish it to be the universal schooling of his fellow countrymen.

IT is planned to send to Italy ambulances named for our American poets. Already thirty-five have been sent, that is, the money for them has been collected in this country and cabled to Milan, and the ambulances are on their way to the front. It is Chicago's assignment to collect the money for two. They cost $1,600 each and the upkeep for a year is $400 each. That's $2,000 each, only $4,000 altogether. And the Chicago poets whom the ambulances are to be named for? Eugene Field and William Vaughn Moody.

If you've always loved "Little Boy Blue" you can shed a silver tear to his baby memory. If "The Great Divide" meant as much to you as it did to some of us, you now have a peculiarly potent way of honoring the memory of its author. All contributions sent in care of THE TRIBUNE will be acknowledged, and the money, as soon as it reaches the $2,000 mark, will be sent to the treasurer in New York, who will cable it immediately to Milan. You may say which ambulance you want to contribute to, if you wish. Checks are payable to the American Poets' Ambulance fund.

Since the national cantonments have been open the public library has distributed 26,000 books. Twelve thousand of them have gone to Rockford and 2,000 each have gone to Georgia, Mississippi, Louisiana, Alabama, and to three camps in Texas. The Soldiers and Sailors' library is just as eager to get books as it was two months ago. The books which the library sends out are to supplement the books bought by the Army Library fund, but until the fund has had time to do its work the books distributed by the library will be the only ones which the soldiers and sailors will have. Look over your books again and see if there aren't some that you could get along without. You'll be sure to find a few. Send them to the library for the Soldiers and Sailors' Traveling and Knapsack libraries.

I'm sorry, but I can't tell you whether "Christine" (Macmillan), is fact or fiction. I know that Alice Cholmondeley is not related to the novelist Chumleys, but nobody seems to know anything else about her. I should say that a book which might carry more weight if it were fact wouldn't be allowed by its publishers to be veiled in the possibility of its being fiction, but—I dunno. I asked about it when I was in New York, and the answer was, "Honestly, I don't know," and that was given by the editorial high person of Macmillan's. So, as they say in the amusement paradises, pay your money and take your choice.

The identity of the author of "Naval Occasions" was disclosed this week by a correspondent from London. "Bartimeus," he has been signing himself, and his constantly growing audience neither knew who he is or why he chose the name of the blind man as a pseudonym. "He is Assistant Paymaster L. de Costa Ricci. But for a hard blow from the flail of Destiny he probably by now would have attained a considerably more distinguished rank in the fighting department of his majesty's navy. His eyesight went back on him and while quite a young man he had to withdraw from active service. In one of his best and most pathetic little stories, 'That Which Remained,' he tells part of the tale why he chose the title of 'Bartimeus' when he began to write about the sailor men whom he knows so well."

Owen Johnson is spending his honeymoon working on his new novel, "Virtuous Wives." He is certainly a connoisseur in wives. This honeymoon is his third. He was married for the first time in 1900 a year after he graduated from Yale. Mrs. Johnson died in 1911. In 1912 he was married again, divorced five years later and that brings us to the present time, as we used to say in our English themes. The third Mrs. Johnson is a Frenchwoman who has been serving as a Red Cross nurse. She was married in the blue uniform of the organization. The Johnsons are at York Village, Me., or were a week or so ago.

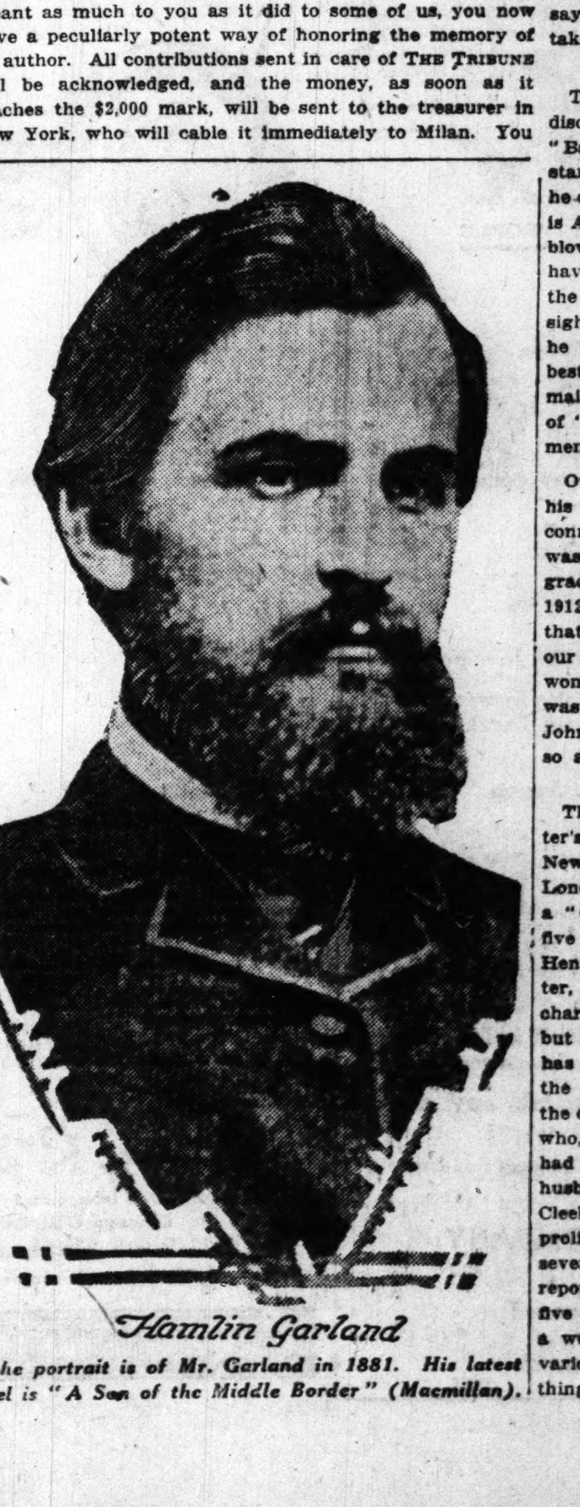
There was much comment last year when Sidney Porter's daughter assumed the pseudonym "Miss O. Henry." News of another unusual literary heritage comes from London in the announcement of "The Purple Emperor," a "Cleek" detective story to be published soon, written five years after the death of "Cleek's" creator. Mrs. Tom Henshaw, with some assistance from her youngest daughter, has literally taken over her husband's most popular character and she not only has written this new novel, but has completed tales left at her husband's death and has done it so cleverly that few, if any, could tell where the original left off and the continuation began. And the oddest thing about the situation is that Mrs. Henshaw, who, like her late husband, is an American (a St. Louisan), had never written any fiction whatever until after her husband's death. It was at her suggestion, though, that Cleek was originated. Mr. Henshaw was one of the most prolific writers of the last decade. He was forced to use several pseudonyms. You may remember that he was reported—erroneously—as the real "Bertha M. Clay." For five solid years he wrote Cleek stories at the rate of one a week. All of the stories are collected in volumes of various titles. The new Cleek book, it is said, is something new even for the jaded detective story reader.



Hamlin Garland

The portrait is of Mr. Garland in 1881. His latest novel is "A Son of the Middle Border" (Macmillan).

The TRIBUNE'S WEEKLY ALMANACK

OCTOBER

DAY breaks with slate sky and steady rain; the dried helianthus stalks, seed-bearing but stripped of brightness, bow to the wind and drip upon the withered bracken; maple leaves glisten in scarlet and yellow under foot, pressed into the wet soil, flattened on the walk.

Fox sparrows flutter the viburnum leaves; the ash is turned to wine and wild grapes fall from ripe clusters. Corn rustles its dried cerements; wild asters star the fields and golden rod nods to the requiem of the wind.

White oak keeps its vibrant green and a red dahlia looks down upon withered stalks; a yellow hollyhock is bright against the wall; black and white warblers are in the barberry; the rain drips from the eaves and blurs the west windows.

A rift in the slate roof and, with clearing sky, the October sun gives midday its mellow brightness; the spiced odors of seemly decay, of change esthetic in its process of destruction, arise from woods and field. A red sun in gray mists gives the west window its vesper colors, and early dusk shows the fire flashing against the panes of the casements.

The moon in its last quarter gives aisles of yellow light to the woods wherein the harvest fly sounds the last note of the summer choral. The song is dying. The wheel of the year turns to brown.

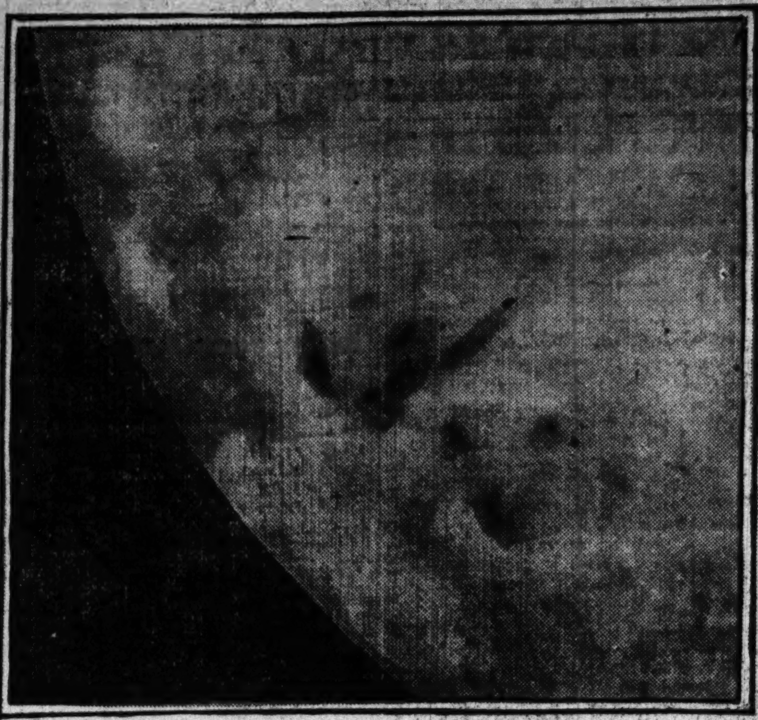
THE SUN



SUNSPOTS AND FACULAE. SEPT. 29, 1917
DRAWN BY S. F. MAXWELL

SUN SPOTS.

WHEN not obscured, the sun is so bright that the eye cannot look upon it without pain, and to look at it with an unprotected telescope would mean a burn and possibly blindness. Various methods exist, however, for examining the sun directly. Placing a piece of smoked glass between the telescope and the eye, the sun appears as a brownish yellow disc, slightly dusky about its edges, and more or less flecked with dark sunspots and bright faculæ.

The spectroscope shows that the sun is made entirely of glowing gases, each one emitting its particular color, while the aggregate appears to us as white light. The main gas of the solar atmosphere is hydrogen. The light radiating from this substance is scarlet, and forms the most spectacular feature of a total solar eclipse.

While the smoked glass screen serves well in a general way, there is another which will reveal the hydrogen on the sun to much better advantage. Two aniline dyes, aniline red and gentian violet, when used together, reveal hydrogen, even when mixed with many other flaming vapors. These two permit only a small amount of red light to pass, but of great purity, and what is all important, of exactly the hue of blazing hydrogen. The sun, as seen through a screen of this sort, is a dull scarlet ball on which the jets and prominences stand out like blood drops on a crimson cloth.

The whole surface of the sun is covered with indistinct mottlings. Here and there, and particularly in the neighborhood of spots, the faculæ are seen as splashes of the most intense red, while the spots themselves are revealed as great vortices, gray on their edges and black in their centers where they descend into the bowels of the sun. Spots usually run in groups, a large tornado preceding, followed by a procession of smaller spots which have been left behind by the leader, and brought up in the rear by a "trailer" spot. The faculæ, or jets of hot gas which spurt up before the advance of a spot, float high over the whirlpools. Sometimes they are blown outward by explosions the magnitude of which only astronomy knows, for two or three hundred thousand miles, and sometimes, if venturing too close, they are caught by the downrushing blasts of gases, and are sucked into the spots below.

A great sun spot system has just been observed. No one of the storms affects a smaller area than that of the earth, while the larger would hold all the planets of the solar system, like assorted balls in a plate. The rotation of the suns has carried many of the spots to the side opposite the earth, but by Wednesday of this week the first faculæ of the group will reappear, as the sun's motion once more brings them into view.

Gossip of the Auto Trade

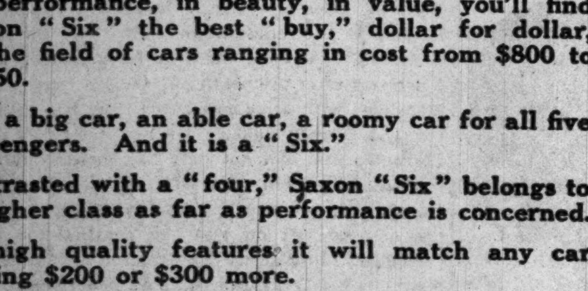
C. F. Redden, president and founder of the Redden Motor Truck company, resigned last week and withdrew entirely from the affairs of the concern. He announces that he will devote himself to the development of a sales organization which will market a popular priced farm tractor.

W. J. Evans, sales manager of the Centaur Motor company, is of the belief that inclosed cars are gaining rapidly in favor, interest in them having shown a particularly notable increase this fall. He bases his conclusions on the favor with which, he says, the Chicago public has met the new Nash sedan.

The Veeder-Simonson company, a newcomer on "motor row," has taken over the Chicago distribution of the Woods dual power car. The principal figures in the firm are George R. Veeder, formerly concerned with the sale of the Detroit electric, and William A. Simonson, at one time district sales manager of the Firestone Tire company. Both have been identified recently with the sales department of the Woods Motor Vehicle company.

The Bethlehem Motors corporation announces the production of a five ton tractor trailer of 120 inch wheelbase, built of standard units such as are used in the two and one-quarter ton Bethlehem truck. A fifth wheel, mounted over the rear axle, provides for rocking in each direction.

SAXON "SIX"
A BIG TOURING CAR FOR FIVE PEOPLE



"Bargain" Time in Automobile Buying

Today prices of all motor cars are at the low point.

Climbing costs of material and labor are inexorably drawing the time near when new and far higher prices must be set.

So the wise buyer will purchase his Saxon "Six" at $935 now.

In performance, in beauty, in value, you'll find Saxon "Six" the best "buy," dollar for dollar, in the field of cars ranging in cost from $800 to $1150.

It is a big car, an able car, a roomy car for all five passengers. And it is a "Six."

Contrasted with a "four," Saxon "Six" belongs to a higher class as far as performance is concerned.

In high quality features it will match any car costing $200 or $300 more.

Greater Convenience—Greater Service!

MOTORING has its proprieties just as does fashion.

That is why it has been necessary to have more than one type of car at your disposal.

Social occasions, business requirements and weather conditions have demanded it.

But—now that is no longer necessary.

The arrival of the new Cole Eight Four-Door Toursedan eliminates the necessity of owning more than one motor car.

Here in one unit you have all the advantages of an open touring model or the privacy and protection of a Sedan or Limousine

In each condition the car has all of the appearance of permanence. It is completely transformed from one type to another—not temporarily converted!

The appointments are faultless. If made to your personal order they could offer nothing more.

It is advisable to place orders for the Cole Eight Four-Door Toursedan at once to insure immediate delivery

Two Model Cars
Built in 19 Exclusive Styles
With Many Special Features

The Mitchell fall line embraces two sizes of Sixes. It includes 19 new-style bodies—the largest line of like class in motordom. It embodies 31 wanted features which are rarely found in cars, countless new touches and many exclusive designs. It offers a wealth of surprises.

Two Under-Prices

There are two sizes, two prices. And both prices are below other cars of their size and class.

Yet both cars are built to the standard of 100 per cent overstrength. That is twice our former margin of safety. Cars built under this standard have proved their ability to run 200,000 miles.

One has 31 extra features, and the other almost as many. That is, features, like a power tire pump, which nearly all cars omit.

These things are due to John W. Bate, the famous efficiency expert. This plant and equipment which he designed has cut labor cost in two. And all the vast savings go into these extra values.

19 New Designs

We have our own body-building plant, our own expert designers. So our styles are exclusive, and they include 19 new-day models. All the savings made in this new body plant go into added luxuries, and their number will delight you.

Year-'Round Cars

We specialize in Year-'Round types. That is, in Sedans and Coupes which are quickly changed from closed to open models. We build two types of Sedans and two of Coupes.

Even for summer, these, we believe, are the coming types. They protect from showers, from dust, from wind. In winter they form warm, luxurious cars.

In these latest Mitchells you will see all the known attractions. Some of them—like shock-absorbing springs—are found in no other car. Some are very rare. Come see them.

"War Tax Paid" Hallmark of New Advance in Price

HOW IT WORKS

The war tax on some representative makes of cars, at their present selling prices for open models, is as follows:

Ford	$ 10.80	Jordan	53.85
Maxwell	22.35	National	59.85
Overland	26.85	Franklin	61.50
Mitchell	37.50	Cadillac	77.70
Hudson	49.50	Packard	103.50

THAT familiar slogan of the automobile advertisements, "F. O. B. Detroit," may be expected to give way in the near future to a new line, nestling in the same reserved dignity of small type. The price of your car, the builders say, will be supplemented hereafter with the phrase, "War Tax Paid."

Manufacturers, distributors, and dealers found themselves running in circles last week, trying to get things adjusted overnight to the situation created by the war revenue law and its 3 per cent factory tax on motor vehicles.

Having induced the senate, months ago, to approve a license tax payable by owners, the automobile men washed their hands of the affair and put it down as settled. They woke up with a bang. When the revenue bill emerged from the conference committee the owners' tax, it was found, had been deftly and uncompromisingly thrown overboard. In its place was the 3 per cent levy imposed on "manufacturers, producers, and importers."

The first thing to happen was the dispatching of a battery of telegrams by many of the factory officials, notifying agents to expect an immediate increase in prices. The public will be told the worst as soon as the advertisements can be written. In many cases it will be the third and in some the fourth increase announced within the year, but we're getting used to it, and the manufacturers say it can't be helped.

Just how the car buyer is to be invited to pay is more of a problem. It is not a simple matter of addition, as might appear at first glance.

Assume that you build a car which sells for $1,500. Your 3 per cent war tax will then be $45 on each car. You hold a little straw vote with yourself and decide unanimously that your customer must pay the $45, his grocers' bills being presumably less drastic than yours for steel and tires.

So you announce, publicly, that your new price is $1,545—and the government promptly demands the tax not on $1,500 but on $1,545!

Many of the manufacturers who are planning an immediate price increase just large enough to cover the war tax have asked the federal officials to permit them to certify a fixed selling price to which, in advertised price lists, the amount of the tax will be added. The total will then be announced to the public as the selling price—"war tax paid."

This plan has already been decided upon in some cases, subject to a favorable ruling by the government.

There are, of course, many builders who were planning price increases before the factory tax provision of the revenue bill became known. These probably will include the amount of the tax in their raises without explaining the matter in detail.

How Are the Roads?

The following summary of road building work accomplished recently or now under way in Cook county has been prepared by Owen O'Malley, county commissioner and chairman of the Chicago Motor club's good roads committee. The list, comprising a total of 124¼ miles of new pavement, should be a valuable guide to Chicago motorists who are not familiar in detail with the condition of the various thoroughfares lying just outside the city limits.

They're to appear in Chicago's final motor race of the 1917 season—the Grand Prix contest next Saturday at the speedway in Broadview. For the fans interest centers largely in the return to the track of Gil Anderson, the 1915 champion, who has been out of the game since he was injured at Cincinnati on Memorial day of 1916. In the picture he is seen at the wheel of the new Miller special, which he will drive.

Anderson will face the competition of Gaston Chevrolet (a brother of the redoubtable Louis) and Ralph Mulford, both driving Frontenacs, and a field of seven other notables. The race will be divided into three events, of 20, 50, and 100 miles. Scoring will be by points.

My Motor Creed

By Errol E. Hart

IN THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE

SLOW or stop on entering the main auto highways.

A signal for every move to warn the man behind.

My downcast lights shall never dazzle any man or put him or me in peril.

If any car comes facing with blinding lights, slow down and warn of danger with hand and horn. He deserves worse.

Use the horn on the sharp curves, even if the cocksure person in the other car doesn't.

Help the perplexed in trouble.

Carry equipment on tour to get myself out of any ordinary difficulty.

Respect especially those signs which say "PLEASE drive slow through our town."

Give heed to the automobile speed rules of the little places, even if they can't afford a cycle cop.

Let the twin sixes go by when they hoot, and do it without fighting, for the speed honor's with them. 'S no use.

Give every car, big or little, its half of the roadbed.

Insist on staying on the road myself.

And——

SOME day I shall put an armored wheel on my left front, and then I'll BUMP some of these road hogs. Won't that surprise 'em?

Postal Trucks to Bring Food from Farms to Cities?

A NEW plan to connect the farm producer with the city consumer is embodied in a bill introduced in congress by John A. Moon and having the indorsement of the postoffice department. An appropriation is asked to establish experimental postal motor truck routes between the country and the city, and under its provisions farm produce fifty miles from the city center would be picked up and delivered to the urban home.

Much has been heard of the food that goes to waste on the farm for lack of a ready and economical outlet to market. The advocates of this measure contend that such motor truck routes would go far toward solving this problem. An extended adoption of the proposed system would open a new large field for motor trucks.

In a presentation of what the postoffice department deems to be the advantages of motor truck postal routes, Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Blakeslee said:

"This experimental legislation is intended to ascertain whether or not a system of collection and delivery of mail that does not exist today is practicable.

"If the experiment is a success it will provide a direct means of communication and conveyance between mailing patrons in cities and rural territory that it is not possible to provide at minimum cost to the postal service or to the patron at this time. It will assist in the effort to reduce the cost of living by eliminating useless and expensive operations in the postal means of communication between producer and consumer.

"Routes fifty miles in radius from the central postoffice rather than routes six miles in radius from the nearest substation of the central postoffice can be established. Thus the local parcel post zone rate of approximately one-half cent per pound will apply, whereas a charge of first zone rate, of 1 cent per pound, is now made within such radius.

"It will permit of a practical use of the highways upon which millions of dollars for improvements have been expended and for which nearly $85,000,000 of federal funds have been appropriated. The establishment of regular schedules, giving time of arrival at points where produce may appear for transmission, producer to suppply containers for protection pending arrival of carrier, is a part of the plan."

For Trucks Only.

Motor trucks of California are to have a road all their own. A special road for these vehicles is being constructed from Los Angeles to the harbor at San Pedro, a distance of thirteen miles. Its width is forty feet and the foundation is of water bound macadam, upon which is placed solid concrete to a depth of eight inches, with a bituminous surface.

CAMOUFLAGE

They're Trying It on American Motor Cars Now, for Various Patriotic and Utilitarian Purposes.

IT had to come, of course. They're camouflaging American motor cars now.

Out in California a dealer has provided a machine which had been temporarily used for military scouting purposes, and a committee of three San Francisco artists has been told to go as far as they like with it. The result will be submitted to the government camouflageurs (is that the word?) for their inspection and edification.

Having roped and tied the car, it is explained, the painters are to cover it with color patches, suggesting earth, trees, sky, cows, etc., so it will look like a piece of landscape.

A New York man also has camouflaged a car. He claims, but does not guarantee, that it will make for low visibility when one is approaching motorcycle and speed trappers.

THE MOTORIST IN COURT

Sometimes the tables are turned. At Hudson, O., the other day a village deputy marshal appeared as defendant before Justice of the Peace H. M. Darling with an automobile club on the side of the prosecution. John Larkin, appointed as a special deputy for the Labor day "rush," was on trial for using indecent language to a party of motorists which included several women. The complaint was made by a member of the Cleveland Automobile club and Winfield Worline, attorney for the club, appeared for the prosecution. After testimony had been introduced as to the exact language used by the officer in "bawling out" the motorists Larkin pleaded guilty and Justice Darling suspended a fine of $10 and costs.

The Appellate court of New York has reversed a decision of a lower court which held the driver of a motor car guilty of contributory negligence because his car struck an unlighted horse drawn vehicle on a dark road on the ground that the motorist was driving on the wrong side of the road. Directing the car to the left, the higher court held, was shown to be necessary in rounding a turn and would have involved no collision had the horse drawn vehicle shown a light as required by law.

A recent Iowa decision holds that an automobile driver may be guilty of negligence if he proceeds across a street intersection at night when dazzled by the lights of another car.

A suit against an automobile driver for running down a child who ran in front of his car on a city street in New York state has been dismissed because of failure to prove that either the child or its parents exercised any care.

An Iowa court offers the ruling that the rights and duties of a pedestrian and the driver of a vehicle, whether automobile or motorcycle, in the use of the streets are reciprocal. Each has the same right to use the street as the other and each is bound to exercise ordinary care to avoid being injured by or injuring the other.

Last Call at Present Prices

This is the last public announcement of the increase in the price of the 33 H. P. Winton Six.

On October 15th the price of the 33 H. P. Winton Six touring car advances from $2,685 to $2,950 and the three-quarter limousine from $3,650 to $3,950. All other 33 models, both open and closed, will advance approximately $265.

Your order will be accepted now, for delivery on or before December 1st, at present prices.

We felt it would be unfair to our friends who are contemplating the purchase of Winton Six cars to announce the advance without allowing them a brief period in which to book their orders at previously advertised prices. But the cost of materials is advancing so rapidly that we have been compelled to limit this opportunity to October 15th. Inasmuch as a saving of $265 is well worth making, we suggest that you telephone us today.

Safety, Decency, and Law Demand Headlight Care

By High Speed.

THE subject of lighting has a double interest for motor car owners in these days. Not only is the man who drives a car anxious to secure the best illumination for his path, but with so many lighting laws, state and municipal, in force, it behooves the motorist to be sure that he is on the right side of the law.

I shall try to explan briefly how the car owner may obtain the best possible illumination and yet not break the law.

In the first place, the motorist should know that there are many lamps which will give a satisfactory illumination only with a certain type and size of bulb. Every car owner should ascertain what special bulb will give the best results with his lamps and he should keep a reasonable stock of such bulbs on hand and in the car when on tour. Bulb cases may now be had that enable the carrying of these devices without danger of breakage.

The motorist should carefully examine all bulbs purchased. Often there is an excess of solder on the base of the bulb and this prevents the proper contact of the bulb in the socket. When such a condition exists in a bulb already purchased it may be remedied by filing off the excess solder or scraping it off with a knife.

When the motorist has obtained the correct bulb equipment, there still remains the matter of adjustment, before he is assured of satisfactory lighting. Unless the lamps are properly focussed only faulty illumination will be obtained at best.

The best way to focus the headlights is to drive the car with lamps lit, to within twenty feet of a wall, a barn door, or some other flat, perpendicular surface. Adjust the lamps so that the bulbs are as far back of the reflector as possible and then observe the image made by the light on the wall. In the center of each circle of light there should be a black spot.

If this black spot does not appear the adjusting device is limited in its movement to the rear. If the black spot shows off dead center, or if it is not exactly circular in form, it is a sign that the filament is not in the axis of the reflector.

This trouble may be caused by the bulb not seating quite correctly in its socket. Try giving it a half turn before returning it to the socket. If, however, the bulb has a tendency to spring away from correct position, the fault must lie in the socket or in the focussing device, which will have to be remedied by the lampmaker or service station.

Now we will presume that the black spot has been duly brought into the center of the image and the problem is to get rid of it. Adjust the bulb by moving it forward until the desired effect is obtained. In some socket adjusting devices the movement toward the reflector is not so great as the movement away from it and the best image is obtained by moving the bulb out of the reflector as far as possible.

The number of adjustment devices is large, some of them attaining their object by moving the bulb, others by a screw at the back and others by moving the rim of the lamp. In manipulating lamps where the focus is obtained by moving the bulb, care must be taken not to loosen the bulb from its base during the operation.

There is another type of defect that is sometimes encountered. This is where there is lost motion between the socket and the bulb. This play displaces the source of light; that is to say, the center line of the filament does not coincide with the center line of the reflector and the result is a distorted image and poor light.

As a matter of fact, some bulbs are made, though not purposely so, that the center line of the filament is offset from the center line of the bulb base. A bulb of this kind is not particularly efficient for the work in hand, but it is sometimes possible to change the position of a bulb of this kind so as to remedy the trouble.

No matter how efficient his lighting system may seem to be, it is a good plan for the car owner to make an occasional examination of his lamps to see that the filaments are properly in line with the bases. If there is any question about the condition of any bulb it should by all means be replaced.

A rapidly increasing number of lighting laws now insist that the headlights shall be so directed that none of the glaring beams shall be more than forty-two inches from the ground. Now, quite aside from comyplying with the law, this is good common sense. The motorist needs the light on the ground and not in the air. The lamps may have an adjustment, or, if not, it is a simple matter to have the brackets bent to achieve this end.

Which brings us to a brief conclusion of the subject of glare eliminators, of which there is an almost endless variety on the market. Methods of removing or controlling the glare fall readily in certain definite classes, depending on whether the light is controlled at the bulb, between the bulb and the reflector, or between the reflector and the lens.

When the glare removal takes place at the bulb it may take the form of an actual dimming of the light, the color may be changed, part of the bulb may be covered, or the bulb may be frosted. At the reflector the color may be changed or the upper portion of the reflector may be offset from the lower to throw the light down on the road, or, again, the upper range of the reflector may have an inclined axis or similar means of deflecting the dazzling rays.

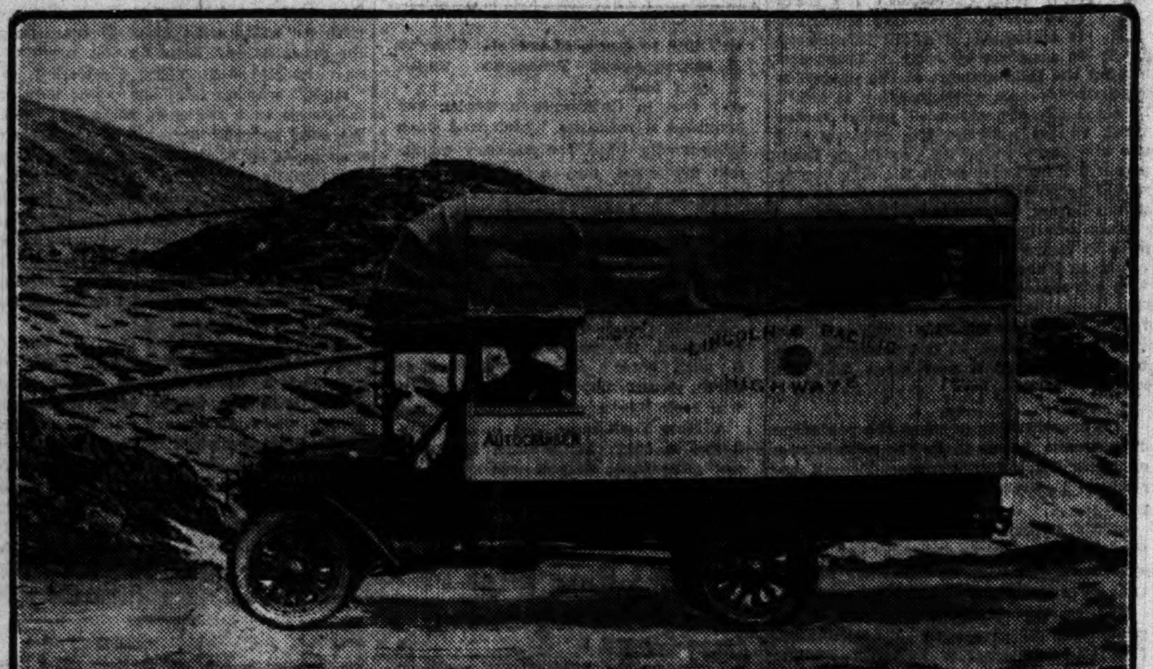
When the elimination of glare takes place at the lens this may be of special construction, which diffuses or deflects the bright beams, it may be frosted or colored, green or amber, or it may be covered with a suitable shield. Some of these lenses or glasses are constructed to cause a bending or redirection of the blinding rays.

In many states some special glare removing device is necessary to comply with the laws, while in others the motorist is perfectly safe if he has his lamps so tilted that the bright rays are never more than forty-two inches from the ground.

Every motorist, as a matter of common decency, ought to have his lights so adjusted or protected that he will not blind other users of the highways.

A TRUCK, SOME BUNKS, A FOLDING BATHTUB—

And Wilderness Were Paradise Enow, Thinks Commodore Magner—Here's His Notion of Solid Touring Comfort.



Robert E. Magner, former commodore of the Seattle Yacht club, calls it his "auto cruiser." People who saw it when it passed through Chicago the other day say it looks like a house and lot.

The commodore, with Mrs. Magner and two guests, are on their way from Boston to their home on the Pacific coast. Having their own ideas about transcontinental touring, they have abandoned the conventional type of motor car and are finding comfort in a one ton truck with fixin's.

The fixin's include a special body, constructed on the general lines of a small hotel; four adjustable bunks laid crosswise of the car; a large dresser; a refrigerator; folding tables and chairs; an acetylene range and oven which carries its fuel in cylinders; an interior lighting system; a porcelain sink with running water from a big tank, and a portable bathtub. Pneumatic tires and a specially designed driving seat contribute to easy riding.

Motor Tests to Prove Value of Military Roads

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Oct. 6.—[Special.]—A notable demonstration of the value of a system of military highways connecting the supply bases with the military cantonments will be made next Thursday, when six two ton motor trucks laden with government supplies for the supply depot of the post quartermaster at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., will leave the warehouse of the depot quartermaster at Atlanta for the 115 mile trip over the Dixie highway. At the same time a test will be made in the transportation of infantrymen, a specially constructed high powered passenger truck, built according to specifications of Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, being used to transport sixteen soldiers from Fort McPherson to Fort Oglethorpe, together with their guns, ammunition, and full marching equipment.

The outcome of the experiments is being watched with the greatest interest by army officers, particularly those in the supply and transportation department. Maj. R. B. Powers, post quartermaster at Atlanta, will prepare data as to the time required and the cost of making a similar shipment by rail. Official observers will compile data relative to the time required in loading, transporting, and unloading the supplies, road conditions, and detailed costs of gasoline, oil, depreciation, etc., on the trip.

The Dixie Highway association, the Georgia State Automobile association, and the Chattanooga and Atlanta Automobile clubs are giving their coöperation in obtaining the information desired.

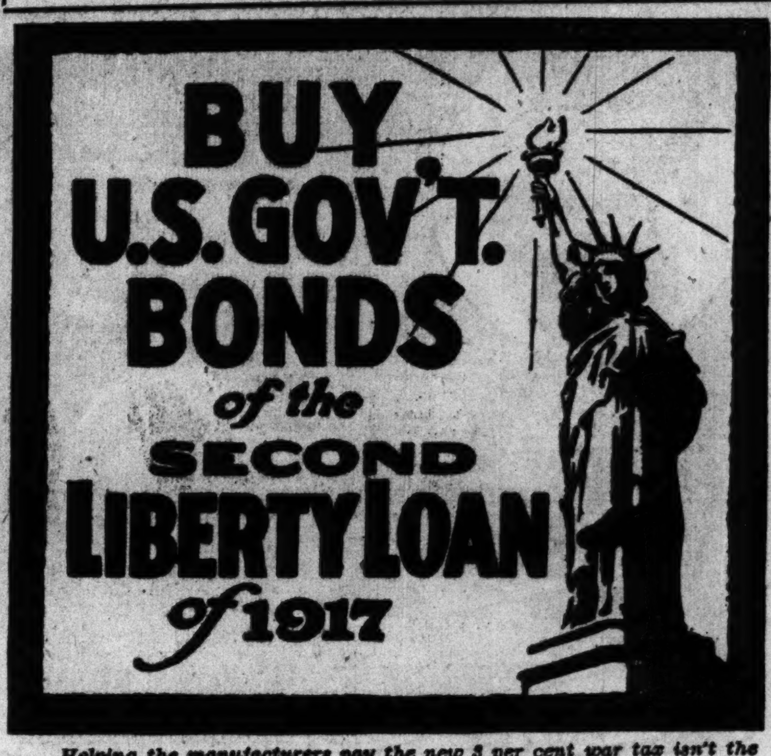
With good weather conditions, when the highway between Atlanta and Fort Oglethorpe will approximate those of an all weather military road, it is confidently expected that from twelve to twenty-four hours will be cut off the time ordinarily required in making this shipment by train. It is likewise felt that a saving in cost may be discovered when comparison between rail and truck costs is made, particularly in view of the fact that the moter truck can load, transport, and unload at destination without the necessity of a double transfer from truck to train. However, the saving in time will be the most important item of consideration to the government at the present time.

$17,000,000 for Roads.

Road work in Pennsylvania for 1918 and 1919 will cost the state $17,000,000, this amount having been appropriated by the legislature for the purpose. More than a third of this sum will come from automobile tax revenues and will be used only for the maintenance of established state roads. A half million dollars will be used in taking over privately owned toll roads. The sum of $6,000,000 is allowed for new road construction.

A CHANCE TO HELP

Uncle Sam Wants Every Automobile Owner to Paste This Sticker on His Windshield.



Helping the manufacturers pay the new 3 per cent war tax isn't the only way motorists may do their bit. To virtually every automobile owner in Chicago the United States treasury department mailed last week one of the stickers pictured above, with the request that it be pasted forthwith on the recipient's windshield. The little poster is lithographed in red, white, and blue, and its face is covered with mucilage, like a postage stamp, ready to be moistened and applied.

Private organizations have used similar methods, but, so far as any one knows, this is the first time Uncle Sam has recognized the publicity value of the w. k. windshield.

Mobilizing in Arizona.

A comprehensive motor car census covering the entire state of Arizona has been completed for the Arizona council of defense. The census gives the make, capacity, and name of owner of every motor truck and touring car in Arizona, all cars of five passenger capacity and up being listed.

With the data included in the census there is now on file with the defense council complete information as to what cars are available in every section of the state for volunteer service of any sort that may be required.

Car owners in Arizona have responded generously to the calls of the defense council for cars to be used in making a crop survey of the state.

In the Salt River valley motorists furnished between fifty and seventy-five cars for this work, supplying their own gas and often driving the car in person. Cars were also furnished for transporting the members of the boys' food battalion, which is engaged in relieving the shortage of labor in the cotton fields. Many women furnished their cars for this purpose and drove the cars themselves.

The name of the Hudford truck attachment has been changed to TRUXTUN. The change has been made because this attachment under our enlarged manufacturing plans of making these attachments to fit all pleasure cars, the name Hudford ceased to be sufficiently inclusive.

In changing the name from Hudford to TRUXTUN, however, we have not abandoned any of our rights to the old name.

We made the name Hudford synonymous with high-grade construction and efficient performance. No one else can now come to you and offer you a Hudford. All the qualities that distinguished the Hudford, all the structural features which gave it its high efficiency are now embodied in the new TRUXTUN. The basic patents which covered these features in the Hudford still protect them in the TRUXTUN. The same high standards of construction will continue under the new name.

A valuable feature of Hudford service is the aid which we give to customers after a sale has been made. We make it our duty to see that every attachment sold shall fulfill to the utmost the promises made for it. TRUXTUN service stations are always at the command of our customers.

Fish, Ducks, and Deer at End of This Auto Trail

By John DeLong.

WITH the roads in that section at their best and with the game fishing season at its height, motorist-anglers are now finding the lake district of northern Wisconsin about the most alluring objective point for their final tours of the season.

It was only a few years ago that the Chicago fisherman was obliged to depend upon the railway as his principal means of transportation to the famous casting and trolling grounds of the north woods, but now he is able to take his car, drive over roads that average fair to good and arrive at the "going in" point of the game fish country within two days. If he likes fast driving and does not mind traveling from dawn until after dark, he may easily reach Eagle river in much less than that time.

Eagle river, which is one of the principal points of entry into the north lake country, is a trifle over 381 miles from Chicago. Minocqua, another popular going in town, is about thirty miles farther on.

You may take it from Larry St. John, THE TRIBUNE's fishing expert, that October is the best month of the year for muskellunge, the gamiest of game fish to be found up north. In addition there is an abundance of large and small mouth black bass, pickerel, pike, and other fish. Then, too, the duck season, which opened in Wisconsin on Sept. 7, will soon be at its height. Later on—for the nine days between Nov. 21 and Nov. 30 to be exact—the sportsman who drives to the northland may be able to bring down the one deer to which the hunter is limited.

There are several optional ways of starting the trip, but the Milwaukee route is considerably the shortest.

The Sheridan road route, which follows the lake shore through Waukegan, Kenosha, and Racine, is in bad condition, as it has been for several years, and it will not be in shape for comfortable traveling until the Sheridan Road Improvement association and the Wisconsin people get together and make good their promise to furnish a hard surfaced road. The two inside routes, being composed mostly of dirt, are not much better, but a combination of the Green Bay and lake shore routes makes a fairly good trail.

This route follows Sheridan road to Fort Sheridan, where the Green Bay road is picked up and followed to the state line. Here the route angles northeast into Kenosha and after continuing north a few miles, again swings east to Sheridan road, which takes the tourist into Milwaukee.

Going out of Milwaukee, both the Yellowstone trail and the Big Fish routes are followed for over 100 miles. The symbol of the first named route is a black arrow, while the mark of the Big Fish route is a yellow fish, with black letters bearing the name of the trail. This route guides the tourist clear through to Eagle river and on to Minocqua, but it is poorly marked until Appleton, 197 miles from Chicago and 107 miles from Milwaukee, is reached.

It is at Appleton that the Yellowstone trail leaves the Big Fish route and goes northwest. From Appleton the route runs through the old lumber towns of Kaukauna and Depere to Green Bay, and thence on to Shawano.

From Milwaukee to Green Bay the roads consist of gravel and dirt, but will be found pretty fair in dry weather. From Green Bay to Shawano the road is sandy, but not at all bad. From Shawano through the Indian reservation and through several small towns to Antigo the tourist will find thirty-seven miles of good, new road, with some beautiful scenery. From Antigo to Crandon, thirty-eight miles, about half of the distance consists of good roads, with the balance fair.

From Crandon to Eagle river and on to Minocqua, the roads are mostly of sand, in good travelable condition, with a few stretches of gravel and macadam. When the tourist reaches his destination, he is in the heart of one of the greatest small lakes districts in the world—one which cannot be rivaled for fishing and hunting.

Eagle river and Minocqua are located in Vilas county, which alone contains 1,028 spring fed and fresh water lakes. If the motorist wishes to reach Woodruff, Trout lake, Mercer, Manitowish, or any of the other hunting and fishing resorts, he may do so over some very good roads.

Exhaust Echoes

George H. Gazley, manager of the Chicago Automobile club and formerly manager of the Hotel La Salle, is now a builder of motor cars. The first edition of his product, to be known as the Mearo Six, will be seen hereabouts this week.

A preliminary view reveals it as a luxurious seven passenger affair, of 127 inch wheel base, and a design as to body lines which exhibits several unusual features. These include a radiator pointed as sharply as the prow of an ocean liner, concave sides which carry out the general impression of nautical design, an exaggerated double cowl effect; massive wind shield supports, and a modified Victoria top with windows of beveled glass.

The car is to be built on a moderate production schedule by the recently organized Mearo Motor Car company, of which Mr. Gazley is president.

From New York to Portland, Ore., a transcontinental trip of 3,489 miles, in exactly twelve and one-half days, is the remarkable record established recently by Dr. Robert H. Ellis of Portland. The fastest time ever made from coast to coast was more than five days, and was made by continuous day and night driving with relays of drivers. Dr. Ellis did his own driving and averaged not more than eleven hours a day on the road. His Franklin consumed exactly 200 gallons of gasoline during the trip—an average for the entire distance of seventeen and one-half miles to the gallon.

A sumptuous display of the new Jordan inclosed cars is now to be seen at the salesrooms of the Chicago Motor Car company, the local distributors. There are four distinctive models—the "sport limousine," a four passenger brougham, a town car, and a novel sedan. It is announced that the entire Jordan factory output of all types of cars has been contracted for up to Jan. 1, 1918.

E. G. Willems, foreign district representative for Dodge Bros., has just completed a 25,000 mile journey on the high seas without a U-boat scare. "The only excitement," he reports, "occurred one night off the coast of Colombo. We came in sight of what we thought to be a German raider and all lights were ordered out. Then nothing happened."

The Mason Tire and Rubber company will hold a general sales convention on Thursday and Friday of this week at its factory in Kent, O. Visitors will include members of the sales force from every part of the United States. The company is now erecting new buildings to double the capacity of its plant and care for the production of 1,500 tires a day.

The Louis Geyler company is now displaying an inclosed type of Elgin, the first to be produced by the manufacturers.

Harry M. Jewett, president of the concern that builds the Paige, has enlisted in the campaign to provide the new soldiers of the national army with gymnasiums and athletic equipment, and is devoting to it much of his time. Mr. Jewett knows something about athletics. One of his achievements in his college days was the establishing of a world's record for the 220 yard dash.

YOU'RE NOT SEEING THINGS

This Sign Really Exists (in California) and Means Exactly What It Says.

PRIVATE-BOULEVARD
SPEEDLIMIT 100 MILESPER HR.
HEAVY-TEAMS PROHIBITED
SAN FERNANDO

Somewhere in Illinois—you may have seen it—there's a sign that reads, "Speed limit sixty miles an hour," but a farmer posted that beside a stretch of deep rutted mire through which you must plow on low. They really mean it on this California road, for it is a special driveway devoted to those who want to move fast and take a chance on dying the same way.

Questions and Answers

Will you please publish as soon as possible a little information regarding the automobile route between Ashland and St. Paul? What kind of roads would one encounter and what is the total distance? M. E., Ashland, Wis.

The trip you have selected is not a good one and you must be prepared for some strenuous driving over mostly poor roads. The distance to Duluth is 106.6 miles and the roads consist of sandy dirt. The roads between Duluth and St. Paul consist of dirt, sand and gravel and would be found bad in wet weather. The distance from Duluth to St. Paul is 167.5 miles.

Can you give me through your automobile department the best route from Chicago to Joplin, Mo.?

S. H. ADAMS, Hurlbut, Ind.

Drive from Chicago to St. Louis via Bloomington and Springfield. From St. Louis go through Ellisville, Gray, Anaconda, Bourbon, Leasburg, Rolla, Edgar Springs, Licking, Raymondville, Houston, Cabool, Mountain Grove, Macomb, Seymour, Fordland, Springfield, McKinley, Aurora, and Pierce City to Joplin. The route consists of dirt roads most of the way. You will find many sections pretty poor.

Is low grade gasoline as suitable for automobile fuel as a higher grade? What proportion of gasoline and kerosene will work together?

ECONOMICAL, Chicago.

Gasoline usually comes in three grades, known as No. 1, No. 2, and No. 3. The lowest grade is No. 3 and is used in large quantities. However, much trouble in using it for motor car fuel will be experienced. If it is allowed to remain in a tank and is unused for a week or so, it is likely that all of the coal oil in the fluid, being the heaviest, will have settled at the bottom of the receptacle. For this reason those who keep their gasoline in a tank often have great difficulty with their fuel when the supply gets low. The proportion of gasoline and kerosene should be about one gallon of gasoline to one gallon of kerosene. However, in using this mixture it would be necessary to carry a small tank of gasoline for starting purposes. Then, when the motor has warmed up enough, a switch should be made to the lower grade fuel.

Can you furnish me with the address of the Yellowstone trail?

P. K., Chicago.

Yellowstone Trail association, Aberdeen, S. D.

What is the best route to take by automobile from Chicago to Mercer, Wis.? Are the roads up that way all right at this season?

SPORTSMAN, Chicago.

Drive through Milwaukee, Theresa, Fond du Lac, Oshkosh, Neenah, and Menasha to Appleton and pick up the Big Fish route, following this through the reservation north of Shawano to Minocqua. From Minocqua drive to Woodruff and take the road that goes to the east of Trout lake, and to Boulder. Then go through Manitowish to Mercer. This route is the best one and will be found in good shape at this time.

Mason Popularity Proves Mason Quality

Wherever they have been introduced, Mason Tires have been popular. First, the Lattice Tread, and now, the Ribbed Tread attract much comment, because of the sturdy endurance and perfect balance that is found in every tire.

Mason Tires have earned their place "in the sun"—with a real reputation for rugged quality, scientific design and honest tire values.

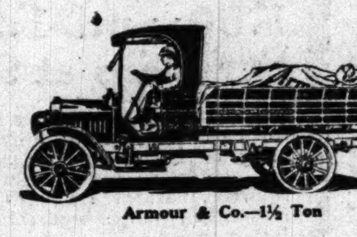
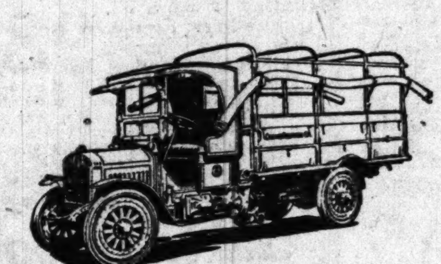
GMC TRUCKS

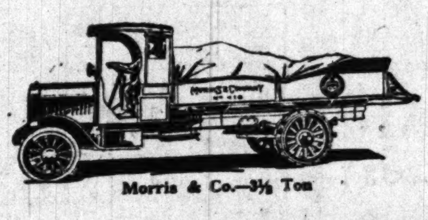
City of Chicago—1 Ton



Armour & Co.—1½ Ton



Chicago Telephone Co.—2 Ton



Morris & Co.—3½ Ton

Wells Fargo & Co.—5 Ton

Year after year the demand for GMC trucks has increased. This has been due to the fact that we have continually built the best motor trucks we could build.

GMC trucks have been built up to quality—not down to a price.

We have proved the old adage that the best is the cheapest in the long run.

A large percentage of our business today is repeat orders.

Our old Chicago headquarters were too small. We have just occupied our new building, containing 39,000 square feet of floor space.

Office, salesroom and service station are under one roof. Our customers are guaranteed prompt, careful and courteous attention.

Our service station equipment is complete and modern, and our stock rooms filled with a complete assortment of parts for all GMC models.

We also have a garage that will accommodate eighty-five trucks.

We want you to call and look us over in our new home.

SITUATIONS WANTED—MALE.

Executives and Managers.

DO YOU WANT A MAN OF ORIGINALITY AND CREATIVE FORCE IN YOUR BUSINESS?

I created and for ten years owned and managed one of the largest specialty organizations in this country. Decreasing demand, owing to conditions, makes change necessary and I am looking for a new opening in the business world, in Chicago or elsewhere. I have had extensive advertising experience, the hiring and directing of sales' forces, and a thorough newspaper training from circulation to editorial.

I am not a salesman in the ordinary sense of the word. It is easier for me to sell a $5,000 proposition than to take dollar orders, although I lay no claim whatever to personal salesmanship.

My strongest points are effective advertising and promotional ideas, creative selling plans and schemes, originality, fertile imagination, high speed energy, quick perception, and executive ability. My handicap is lack of specialized training for any other business than the one I have been engaged in and from which I am trying to withdraw permanently.

My earning income has been very much greater—is now about $50 a week. I want a man's sized job—one without limitations for development. Anything else, or a position paying less than $50 a week salary or drawing account, will not better my present condition, therefore not acceptable.

Am 34 years old, married, of mature judgment, and ready for a position that requires genuine creative force and the ability to "put it over."

Will arrange for interview any time after Tuesday. Address B X 23, Tribune.

SITUATION WTD—AN EFFICIENT EXECUtive of proven ability and experience in selling overstock, obsolete and scrap material, now employed as manager of the salvage and scrap department by one of the large manufacturing concerns, desires to make a different connection. Now have charge of selling all the overstock, obsolete and scrap material of this firm. By making a careful study of this work for the last 4 years I am able to obtain the very best prices on all of the material that is sold and am also acquainted with the very best markets for anything that is salable. I am a young man, 31 years of age, married, and can furnish very best reference as to character, ability etc. Address B X 20, Tribune.

PRINTING SUPT., RIGHT Hand Man, or Buyer Printing and Engraving.

Exceptional experience high class commercial work, booklets, catalogues, color work, embossing, loose leaf, specialty work, etc.; a reputation among best Chicago printers of knowing the business as few men know it—management, planning, mechanical depts., buying, selling, estimating, paper stock, engraving, embossing, etc.; highest possible references. Address K 368, Tribune.

SITUATION WTD—THE MAN WHO EMploys the advertiser will find in him an inborn loyalty, a diplomatic mind, trained under an exceptionally broad gauged executive; the ability to meet and win the confidence of individuals of all classes, and to write well any sort of communication; employed for last five years in present position, which requires not only the characteristics named but as well capacity for detail; age 28; married; salary required, $35 per week. REAL POSITIONS FOR REAL MEN.

We can actually boast of real positions because we have never had so many fine openings in so many different kinds of lines. Remember, all of these positions are with the better grade concerns and at this time it seems to be that they are all working to outdo the other in the way of remuneration and opportunity.

Surely this is the time to entertain a change. If you are in a rut, it is your fault. Don't blame conditions or the war. No matter where you live, if you cannot get in to see us personally, get in touch with us. We can be of service to YOU, and it will cost you nothing unless you get what you want.

Below you will find listed some of the openings crowding our order box. The number is limited because of the lack of space.

RENT FREE.

Have six room apartment in Hyde Park located near Illinois Central station at 53d-st. which I will give to a responsible tenant rent free until Jan. 1. Rent from that time on to be only $42.50 per month. It is located on the fourth floor and is both steam heated and electric lighted. The building is located on the corner, so there is plenty of light. I am making this offer because the cost of maintenance of building is just as much as if apartment were rented. Don't miss this offer. Address F L 205, Tribune.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Michigan.

BIG LAND OPENING

LANDSEEKERS, ATTENTION! 40,000 acres of sugar maple, beech and elm lands in Antrim, Kalkaska and Charlevoix Counties, Michigan, are included in this new tract which we are opening up on Oct. 16. These are the finest cut-over lands anywhere in the United States. When you see the virgin forests adjoining our tract you realize the character of the soil that produces such trees.

HERE YOU WILL FIND the healthful climate for which Michigan is renowned. A bountiful water supply is everywhere present in our tracts. Here are lands which will produce excellent crops of clover, alfalfa, vetch, wheat, oats, corn, rye, beans, peas, potatoes, buckwheat and all vegetables. There is ample proof at hand that the new lands will produce these crops because adjoining well developed farms, with the same kind of soil, are producing them in abundance. There are also many successful live stock and dairy farms near our lands. A chance to secure lands like these at the prices they will be sold for comes only once.

HERE INDEED IS THE LAND for which you have been looking. Excellent soil, climate, water, etc., and in addition, you have the advantage of our service. For the past twenty years we have been colonizers of Michigan land. The experience gained by us in this work is placed at your disposal. Our demonstration farm at Westwood will be conducted as a farm advising department by experts, where our customers may come for free advice on all subjects.

GOOD LOCAL MARKETS are easily reached on excellent gravel roads. Nearly all of our lands are near railroad stations so that products may be easily shipped to the large markets. Telephone lines, rural mail routes and daily newspapers enable you to keep in close touch with these markets.

THE FIRST CHOICE OF THESE LANDS is going to the people who get there on Oct. 16 and pick for themselves or to those who allow us to reserve a piece of land for them until they can inspect it. Right now is the time to get busy on this proposition. Send for full information today. The opening prices will be $18 to $30 per acre. We will sell in tracts of 20, 40, 80, 120 or 160 acres. You can buy for cash or on payments of $2.50 per acre cash down and 25c per acre per month on tracts of 40 acres or more. On 20 acre tracts, $50 down and $10 per month. Payments can be arranged on a yearly basis.

IF YOU CANNOT GO ON THE EXCURSION of Oct. 16 you had better send in your first payment at once and have a piece reserved for you. We will make the best selections possible in the order the deposits are received and hold the land 30 days for your inspection. If you are not satisfied when you make your inspection, we will exchange for any other piece you may prefer at the same price. Titles guaranteed and abstracts furnished with deeds.

IT IS TO YOUR ADVANTAGE to investigate this proposition at once. It means money saved. Don't wait. Get the choicest lands at the lowest prices. Start your plans at once for a farm home of your own by joining our big SPECIAL PULLMAN CAR EXCURSION TUESDAY, OCT. 16. First class accommodations for both men and women at our fine new hotel. Round trip rate, including railroad fare, pullman car, hotel and two days' automobile trip over the lands, $14.70. Leave Chicago at 11:00 a. m. Tuesday, back early Friday morning.

WRITE TODAY for our new handsome illustrated free booklet, giving full information about these lands and their advantages. Also ask for a reservation on our BIG LAND EXCURSION ON OCT. 16.

Mississippi.

FOR SALE—OR TRADE—
865 acres of the famous Yellow Creek bottom lands, 700 acres in the bottom, 150 of which made an average of 50 bushels corn per acre; all of bottom land could be put in cultivation at small expense. Entire 865 acres fenced; free of ticks; 5 good houses and barn. This land is in 6 miles of Iuka, the county site of Tishomingo county, Mississippi, adjoins the corporate limits of Burnsville, Mississippi, within ½ mile of rock road, within 10 miles of where they are now drilling for oil. This territory has been pronounced the most promising of the undeveloped oil fields, being in a line with the West Virginia and Pennsylvania fields. The geological research estimates oil to be reached at a depth of fourteen hundred to twenty-five hundred feet. Why pay two hundred dollars per acre when you can get this splendid bottom farm at forty dollars per acre? Terms 1-3 down, rest easy terms, 5% interest; or will take ½ cash and ½ in city property. H. M. RHINE, Iuka, Mississippi.

Oregon.

THE JORDAN VALLEY

in Southwestern Oregon, is a beautiful, fertile district that you ought to investigate. Many shrewd farmers are buying there because their keen business foresight tells them that investment will pay big returns from the natural increase in the value of the land alone, to say nothing of the big crops that they can produce. Prices low; terms easy.

Texas.

FOR SALE — NEW FARM OPPORTUNITY IN ONE OF THE GREATEST STATES IN THE UNION. A new line of the Santa Fe is tapping a rich and fertile prairie section of Northwest Texas, near the Oklahoma line, where already many farmers have MADE GOOD in a big way with wheat, hogs, and live stock. Here, if you ACT NOW, you can get first choice—get in on the ground floor of a great opportunity. You can get in AHEAD of the railway—ahead of the people whom the railway will bring—ahead of those who act more slowly than you do. This is the chance of a lifetime for a man of moderate means. A certain number of thrifty, farseeing farmers can acquire good land at an astonishingly low figure and on long, easy terms. If you have confidence that a great railroad like the Santa Fe would only recommend what it considers a good thing and because it wants to see new territory developed and wants newcomers to PROSPER and PRODUCE—then write me TODAY for particulars about this district. Mild climate, social advantages, schools, churches, telephones, good roads. Everything there but enough men with their families. Will you be one of the fortunate first comers to reap the advantages of a section that has been minutely inspected by a Santa Fe agricultural agent and pronounced RIGHT? Write me NOW and let me send you a copy of the special illustrated circular we are getting out. C. L. SEAGRAVES, 1105 Railway Exchange, Chicago.

FOR SALE—CHEAP TEXAS LANDS—18 sections; good Panhandle plains land, all in one body, fenced in two tracts, nine sections each, two good wells, house, and other improvements; close to railroad and town; all tillable; one of the best colonization propositions in Texas. BUY CHEROKEE OIL NOW

This company has over 15,000 acres of good leases in the PROVEN OIL FIELDS of Oklahoma, Kansas, and Kentucky.

It has 11 wells producing better than 1,500 barrels daily, and under its active drilling program should continue to bring in at least 5 new wells each month.

It has direct pipe line connections to the CUMBERLAND PIPE LINE COMPANY, whose main pumping plant is within two miles of CHEROKEE property.

The OIL is exceptionally high grade, selling for as high as $2.45 in the field.

Paying 10 Per Cent Dividends

ANNUALLY, and prospects of extra cash dividends, based upon increased production and earnings, are excellent.

PRICE
$1.50
PER SHARE.

CHEROKEE has shown greater progress than any low priced INDEPENDENT OIL stock ever brought out in this market. The company is officered and directed by some of the strongest financial and commercial men in the central west and numbers among its stockholders some of the foremost men of the country today.

GENERAL REFINING COMPANY

Capitalization 300,000 Shares Common Stock (Par Value $10.00).

General Refining Company is successor to:
Mid-Continent Refining Company,
General Refining Company of Kansas,
Carroll Oil Marketing Company. (Paid 100% in dividends in 1917.)

A going Refinery Company which has every evidence of becoming one of the large independent Oil Companies of America.

Now they are going after production—that is the reason for this stock offering.

GENERAL REFINING COMPANY

Is a going Company and has a well equipped Oil Refinery in operation.
Owns and controls by contract over 200 Tank Cars.
Has an established trade for Petroleum Products.
Is supplying large Steel and Railroad Companies with Fuel Oil.
And is now doing a business in excess of $300,000 per month.
This Company is not only conservatively capitalized but is managed by Practical Oil Men.

WE OFFER 10,000 SHARES AT $7.50 PER SHARE. Par $10.00.)

Make reservations now, before an advance in price, which will come shortly.
We recommend this issue as being one of the BEST OIL STOCKS on the MARKET, both from security and earning power.
Those who buy at this price should make a big profit from market advancement as well as from dividends.

PACKARD

USED CAR DEPARTMENT.
THE SAFEST PLACE TO BUY A USED CAR.

Nothing will mar your complete enjoyment of the year's finest touring season if you drive a Packard Twin Six.

Confidence in your car—the full assurance that abundant power, instant control, unlimited reserves both of speed and safety are yours—and touring from now till winter is an unalloyed delight. With a Packard "Twin" you can go anywhere you will. The price of a Packard buys not only the finest car mechanically but a bonus of comfort and security that cannot be measured in mere dollars.

PACKARD 2-25 Twin Six 4 pas. coupe. A roomy outfit, driven only 7,000 miles. Beautifully upholstered in gray cloth and with every appointment to make it elegant and luxurious. 2 extra tires complete with tire covers and complete equipment. An ideal car for the owner driver; $3,500. [No. 551.]

PACKARD 2-35 Twin Six 7 passenger touring car. Has always been under the care of an expert mechanic; has been driven very little and looks like a new machine. Unlimited power, wonderful ease of operation, and flexibility are incorporated in this machine, giving you the most perfect ride you could desire. $2,600.

PACKARD Twin Six 7 passenger touring car. This is the shorter wheel base [model 1-25], making it easy to handle and just the car for the owner who drives himself. Elegantly painted maroon and completely equipped, including 2 extra tires with covers. A car of distinguished appearance, illimitable power, and extraordinary value at our price of $1,900. [No. 656.]

PACKARD 1915 3-38 7 passenger touring car. Mileage only 2,800 since overhauled by us. Paint is like new—Packard standard blue with cream wheels and striping. Good tires all around, one spare; complete with cover and many other extras. $1,600. [No. 660.]

1917 Franklin five pass. town car; beautifully upholstered in tan velour and painted dark green with white wire wheels. The equipment is complete and includes 2 extra wheels. A comfortable, smooth riding car, light in weight, easy on tires; gasoline consumption cut down to a minimum. An efficient machine for $2,000. [No. 630.]

Locomobile 48 7 passenger touring car. Complete equipment, including speedometer and clock and many other extras. Always well cared for and it shows it. A high grade machine with ample power and one that will give satisfactory service. Exceptionally nice in appearance. Remarkable value at our price of $400. [No. 514.]

And many other excellent values.

FOR SALES AND SERVICE.

IF YOU ARE CONSIDERING THE PURCHASE OF A FORD CAR, NEW OR USED, REMEMBER THAT THE S. & L. MOTOR CO. IS A WELL ESTABLISHED, AUTHORIZED FORD AGENCY, WITH A REAL REPUTATION FOR FAIR DEALING WITH ALL ITS CUSTOMERS.

In coming to us you are running no danger of dealing with a sales station organized solely to make quick profits on an individual sales campaign. This agency is A REAL FORD SALES AND SERVICE HEADQUARTERS, backed by responsible parties and with a past reputation to maintain.

Our big new building, located diagonally across the street from the Chicago assembly plant of the FORD MOTOR CO., 39th and Wabash, is designed, built, and equipped to SERVE YOU, today, tomorrow, or next year.

WE CAN NOW MAKE PROMPT DELIVERY ON ALL FORD MODELS.

Why bother with a winter top, with its rattle, when you can make a good trade with us for a new sedan or coupelet?

YATES PREPARES TO ENTER RACE FOR CONGRESS

Announcement Unofficial as Yet; Gossip from the Districts.

Former Gov. Richard Yates is an active candidate for one of the Republican nominations for congressman at large and his name will be on the primary ballot next fall. This was semi-officially announced yesterday to the big crowd of downstate politicians that had been attracted to Chicago by the world's series.

The declaration was accompanied by the information that the Brundage organization in Cook county undoubtedly will support the former governor as its choice for the downstate representative of the two at large.

Medill McCormick, one of the present congressmen at large, as all of the Republican politicians now understand, will be a candidate for United States senator in the 1918 primaries. His colleague, Congressman at Large William E. Mason, is expected to be a candidate for renomination with the full aid and consent of the city hall Republican faction.

The Political Lineup.

The indications now are that the Brundage forces will back a Chicago candidate for congressman at large in succession to Mr. McCormick, who will be supported jointly with former Gov. Yates. At the same time the city hall Republicans will be developing a downstate candidate to be pitted against Mr. Yates.

The bulk of the Illinois congressional delegation is expected back in the state at once, inasmuch as congress has adjourned and the congressional campaign in the several districts may be considered wide open.

One of the significant indications of what may be expected in the Chicago districts deals with the Seventh district on the northwest side. Here, it is frequently heard, Ald. M. A. Michaelson, recognized as Mayor Thompson's council floor leader, is being groomed as a primary candidate against Congressman Niels Juul, who is affiliated with the Deneen wing, but who, in the coming primary fight, expects to have the joint support of the Deneen and Brundage men as against the city hall.

The issue, it is said, will be the support by Congressman Juul of all of the administration's war policies. Ald. Michaelson, if he becomes a candidate, would follow the policies advocated politically by Mayor Thompson.

Talk of Ald. McCormick.

City Controller Pike, it is understood, is seeking a candidate in the north side district, and Ald. Robert H. McCormick of the Twenty-first ward has been suggested as a possibility against Congressman Fred A. Britten.

Smoke Inspector Reid, in the Thirty-first ward, is relied upon by the city hall to rig up another fight against Congressman William Warfield Wilson in the Englewood district. Ald Albert J. Fisher, the city hall candidate in the last primaries, is said to be willing to make another try at it.

Conditions in the Madden district are said to be volcanic. The return of Congressman Madden seems likely to precipitate the crisis. The story is that the city hall demands the immediate and full blooded support of Congressman Madden and Ald. George F. Harding to Mayor Thompson's senatorial candidacy, the penalty of delay or refusal being the development of a city hall candidate against Mr. Madden, who would have the backing of Corporation Counsel Ettelson and Oscar De Priest.

About Congressman Foss.

The city hall, it is reported, is awaiting final decision from George Edmond Foss as to his political intentions in the Lake View district. If Foss runs for the senate against McCormick and the mayor, the Twenty-fifth ward city hall people will have a congressional candidate.

This affair seems to be badly involved and may result in a Brundage candidate who may be started at any minute regardless of what Congressman Foss decides to do.

GIRL BOUND AND $1,000 GEMS GONE; ADMITS A PLOT

It was a thrilling tale that 17 year old Marie Cibulka told yesterday when she was found bound and gagged and locked in a clothes closet of the home of Max Korshak, 5340 South Michigan avenue, where she was employed as maid. Jewelry, a diamond pin and gold watch, valued at $1,000, were missing.

Mr. and Mrs. Korshak, returning home from the theater early yesterday morning, found Marie lying in the closet. After they had released her she told her story.

Two men, armed with revolvers, appeared at the rear door about 10 o'clock in the evening. They forced her to admit them. Then they tied her up and departed with the jewelry.

The Korshaks telephoned the police and Detective Sergeants Ward and Sweeney of the Fiftieth street station came over to talk to Marie. After sharp questioning she broke down and confessed she and her sweetheart, Rudolph Hasucha, 20 years old, 1819 South Peoria street, had carefully planned the robbery. Both are now under arrest.

EPHPHETA SOCIAL CENTER TO ELECT NEW OFFICERS

The Ephpheta Social Center auxiliary will hold a meeting this evening at 8 o'clock in the English room of the Congress hotel. Reports will be made of progress in membership and of preparations for the coming bazaar. The initial election of officers also will take place.

The executive board of the new organization will consist, it is said, of a president, chosen by the archbishop; of a vice president for each grand division of the city, and of the usual subordinate officers.

The phenomenal growth of the movement warrants the hope that a $50,000 building will soon cover the site recently donated by Mrs. R. Philip Gormully.

A social hour and refreshments will follow the transaction of business.

SIMPLE LIFE FOR 106 YEARS

Mrs. Mary Karp, Shown Reading Bible to Her Granddaughter, Attributes Long Life to Diet of Ham and Eggs.

Mrs. Mary Karp and Lucile Weber

Mrs. Mary Karp of 1327 Dayton street yesterday celebrated her one hundred and sixth birthday by eating her usual fare of ham and eggs. She attributed her long life to this diet. Though her daughter made her a big birthday cake the old lady would not touch it.

"I have lived so long on ham and eggs that I do not think cake would agree with me," she said.

Mrs. Karp is very particular about the ham and the eggs, and goes to market every day herself to pick out the right cut of ham and see that the eggs are fresh.

"When I first came to this country from Germany thirty-nine years ago food cost about one-fourth what it does now," said Mrs. Karp. "My husband was alive then, and he has been dead thirteen years. He was 99 when he died."

Mrs. Karp has fourteen grandchildren and eleven great-grandchildren. All of them that are living near here came to celebrate the anniversary with her. Mrs. Karp read her Bible most of the day, and the grandchildren, among them Lucile Weber of Maywood, gathered around Granny to listen.

THAT HORSEWHIP IN PALOS PARK'S SCHOOL DROOPS

Woman Who Threatened Teacher Placed Under Bond.

Palos Park's schoolroom race war was aired yesterday in Oak Park when Mrs. Bertha Thomas, mother of four children and who had championed the cause of the Negroes, was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Kendall on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Miss Bernadette Bremner, teacher of the Palos Park school, told how Mrs. Thomas had threatened her with a horsewhip for keeping the Thomas children after school. She said Mrs. Thomas called her "hussy." Mrs. Thomas was fined $5 and costs and placed under bond of $500 to keep the peace.

Masked Men Visit School.

"After calling me names," testified Miss Bremner, "she, Mrs. Thomas, turned to her own children and told them to go out of the room. They didn't move. She slapped the whip on my desk and commenced asking me questions.

"She didn't touch me with the whip, though. I ignored her questions and kept reading a school program. She grabbed the program from my hands, tore it into pieces, and threw the bits on the floor."

Miss Bremner also testified to seeing two masked men enter the school room one morning and talk to the Negro pupils.

"They stayed in the room about five minutes," she said. "I couldn't recognize them because their features were hidden."

"The men's faces were covered and they tried to scare me," Nathan Eaton, 9 years old, one of the Negro pupils, said. "They told me to keep away from the school."

Boy Contradicts Mother.

Mrs. Thomas testified it was her habit to carry a horsewhip while out riding.

"I called her a hussy and a coward," she asserted. "When I leave my buggy I always take my horsewhip with me wherever I go."

Regarding the horsewhip, Mrs. Thomas' son, Warren, 9 years old, gave contradictory testimony.

"Does she always take her horsewhip with her when she gets out of the buggy?" he was asked by John Owen, assistant state's attorney.

"No, sir," said the boy.

William Homeriding, 12 years old, and James Slight, 13, corroborated Miss Bremner's story with regard to what occurred in the schoolroom.

Mt. Morris College Raises $250,000 Endowment

Mount Morris, Ill., Oct. 6.—Mount Morris college, one of the older Illinois educational institutions, today announced the completion of a campaign for an endowment fund of $250,000.

The returns exceeded expectations, the exact amount received being $259,359.

The largest single donation was made by P. A. Shearer of Auburn, Ill., who gave $20,000 in memory of his daughter, Stella, who was a student at the college several years before her death.

MICHIGAN LOSES 600 IN WAR CALL; SOUTH HARD HIT

Vanderbilt Enrollment Cut 50 Per Cent; West Patriotic.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 5.—[Special.]—With the exception of the medical school, freshman registration in the University of Michigan is about normal. Registration in the upper classes of the literary college shows a fall of approximately 600, due to the war, although the number of women remains the same as in previous years. Nearly 2,700 are now enrolled in this department. In the engineering college the registration has fallen off about 200, this loss being distributed throughout the upper classes. The law school shows a decrease of about 50 per cent, the school of pharmacy a decrease of nearly 60 per cent to date.

In California and Stanford.

San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 5.—[Special.]—The registration at both California and Stanford universities shows a marked falling off in comparison with previous years, as a direct result of the war. More than 800 graduates and undergraduates of the University of California have joined the United States army or navy. The total registration for this year is 5,006, as against 5,671 last year. Stanford's total registration this year is 1,359, 970 men and 439 women. Last year's figures were 500 women and 1,350 men.

Spurs Foreign Language Study.

Seattle, Wash., Oct. .—[Special.]—War will cut University of Washington enrollment about 18 per cent. Great interest is shown in Fench, Spanish, Russian, and Chinese languages and home economics classes. Two years' military drill is required.

Cut Over Fifty Per Cent.

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 5.—[Special.]—Vanderbilt university's enrollment in all departments is much less than 500 students. The normal enrollment is about 1,000. The greatest decrease has been noted in the upper classes. The law school has suffered more than any other department, while the medical and dental schools have a good enrollment. The majority of the students enrolled are not within the draft age. As usual, there is a large enrollment of co-eds.

Tennessee Affected.

Knoxville, Tenn., Oct. 5.—A decrease of 25 per cent is recorded in the enrollment at the University of Tennessee, due to the war. The decrease is in the senior class. A general increase in the lower class has been recorded. Officials attribute this increase to the development of high school training.

Railway Official Quits to Aid Army in France

Washington, D. C., Oct. 6.—Walter N. Kernan of Utica, vice president of the New York Railways company, has resigned to go to Europe to take charge of the work of the Knights of Columbus committee on war activities with the American forces. He will have charge of welfare work at American camps, such as is being done by the committee at camps and cantonments at home.

ALIEN, IN JAIL ON U. S. CHARGE, WRITES DEFENSE

Finlander Says He Came Here Only for What He Could Get.

William Tenner was born in Finland. He looked about for a country that would teach him a trade and give him an education free of cost and at the same time provide work for him to live comfortably.

Five years ago he came to the United States. He found all that he had expected. He took out no citizenship papers, as he expected to return to his own country after he had got what he wanted in America.

The war broke out and spoiled Tenner's plans. When the draft law was enacted he evaded military service on the ground he was not a citizen. When it was rumored that citizens of other nations might be pressed into the ranks of the military he announced that he was an "internationalist."

Now in Jail.

At present he is a resident of the county jail awaiting trial for alleged desecration of the flag and seditious utterances. He is said to have been affiliated with the I. W. W.

During his leisure hours in jail Tenner has worked out an elaborate outline of his defense for his attorney. He filled many pages with notes in Finnish, which have been translated. He proposes to lay great stress on the fact that his mentality may have been affected by too frequent sun baths on the Diversey bathing beach.

Questions for Witnesses.

Tenner proposes that the prosecuting witnesses shall be asked in part:

"Did you ever hear Tenner talk about the government, about hanging the president and desecrating the United States flag?"

"Has Tenner ever distributed any seditious literature in the place where he was working? What was said in such literature?"

"Did Tenner work every day? Why was Tenner absent from his work? How many days was Tenner absent from his work?"

"Did Tenner mention he was taking sun baths? What did he say about these sun baths? Did Tenner complain he was taking these sun baths too frequently?"

Questions for Self.

He suggests twenty-one questions that he shall be asked when he takes the witness stand in his own defense. He wants it brought out that he is an engineer and was employed at tool making when arrested; that he had been ill as a result of sun baths and breathing gas fumes in the manufacturing plant, and that he had once stated that "kaiserism should be abolished."

Several questions and answers are outlined as follows:

Q.—Did you ever desecrate the flag? A.—No.

Q.—Do you believe in any kind of government? A.—Yes; in a government by the people.

Q.—Why did you come to America? A.—In order to learn.

Tenner even has noted what his attorney should say in his closing argument to the jury. One page reads:

"He should strongly point to my yearning for education to improve myself and that I desire to become still further educated if but given the opportunity. Therefore he can make the statement that the United States needs at the present time such men as Tenner."

JURY MIXED ON VERDICT; SENDS MAN TO GALLOWS

Montreal, Quebec, Oct. 6.—A French-Canadian jury by mistake found George Benjamin guilty of the murder of Joseph Pellerin, a 14 year old boy, when they had intended to convict him of manslaughter, at Sweetburg, Quebec, yesterday. Details of the incident received here today show that it was not until Judge Hackett had sentenced Benjamin to be hanged on Nov. 30 that it dawned on the jurymen that a mistake had been made.

One of the jurors informed the court that they did not understand that the death penalty could be imposed for manslaughter. The court explained that the verdict was "homicide coupable." Then it was made clear to the court that the jury had overlooked adding the qualifying word "involontaire," which would have carried the conviction as one of manslaughter.

As it was then too late to rectify the record, the twelve men of the jury drew up a statement addressed to the minister of justice at Ottawa stating the facts in the case and petitioned for a verdict of manslaughter.

Benjamin, who is 40 years old, was accused of the murder of a boy at Farnham, Quebec, on the night of Aug. 17 last.

COMMITTEE OF 15 CALLS MEETINGS TO STIR PATRIOTS

Under the auspices of the committee of fifteen four big patriotic meetings have been arranged for this month in the South Congregational church at Drexel boulevard and Fortieth street, as follows:

Tonight at 8 o'clock Charles E. Merriam will speak on "War for Democracy."

Oct. 14 Jacob M. Dickinson will speak on "The Citizen and the War."

Oct. 21 Miss Harriet E. Vittum will speak on "Women in the Trenches."

Oct. 28 Chief Justice Harry Olson will speak on "War for Peace."

Stretched across the front of the church over the pulpit is a banner, on which is displayed the following text: "Remember the Lord, and fight for your brethren, your sons, and your daughters, your wives and your houses."—Nehemiah, iv., 14.

Collections will be taken at the meetings and the contributions above the cost of advertising will be turned over to the Red Cross.

Garage Keeper Too Hasty.

George L. Moore, a garagekeeper at 3110 South Michigan boulevard, was a bit hasty in causing the arrest of Dr. E. E. Leach, 4813 Kedzie avenue, after the physician had given a $45 check for repairs to him and Judge La Buy discharged him in the South Clark street court yesterday.

MANGASARIAN TO VOICE LOYALTY IN HIS LECTURES

M. M. Mangasarian, for seventeen years a lecturer of the Independent Religious society of this city, and who has been lecturing in the northwest during the last spring and summer, returns to open the first meeting of the season today. Mr. Mangasarian, in a letter which he sent to all the members of the society, says:

"It is well that you should know my attitude on the war, lest you should lend me your aid or withhold your support under a misapprehension. I am in the fullest and strongest sense of the word pro-American. To this country and its institutions I am loyal beyond the shadow of wavering or hesitation.

"My principal task will be to help maintain, in a modest way, the morale of the American people in this hour of world crisis. The major keynote of my lectures, as long as the war lasts and our boys are on the firing line, ready to give their lives for you and me, will be loyalty to the cause of man against monarch, of the people against the war lords, of the pen against the sword, of nationalism against imperialism, of morality against massacre, of civilization against frightfulness."

Mr. Mangasarian will open his lectures at Cohan's Grand Opera house, and he will speak every Sunday thereafter during the fall and winter months. His first lecture, today, will be "Halt! Who Goes There?" Oct. 14, "The Pope's Peace." Oct. 21, "The Old and the New Russia." Oct. 28, "The World After the War."

Cause of Gas Troubles.

John P. Garner, head of the city's department of public service, declared yesterday that there would not be so many complaints regarding the new gas being supplied had the company's men adjusted all burners before a change in the gas standard was made. Complaints against the quality of the gas supplied continued to be made to the department yesterday.

EDUCATOR WARNS SCHOOLS TO END UN-AMERICANISM

Dr. White Urges U. S. to Ship Pro-Germans to Germany.

Dr. R. A. White, former member of the board of education, yesterday launched a bitter attack against pro-Germanism at a meeting of public school principals in Fullerton hall in the Art institute. Dr. White charged that pro-Germanism is next to treason and should be treated as such.

"When a man says that he hopes that Germany wins this war he should be packed and sent back to Germany. I would say to such men, 'Show your red blood and go back to Germany. Go into the trenches and fight for the country that you love and do not dishonor the flag that you are living under in this country.'

"I heard of a father who said that he was born in Germany and would rather see his son dead than have him go with our troops to France and fight against his fatherland.

"Such men should be sent back to Germany, and if his son feels the same way he should also be sent back.

"I can respect a man who fights openly for Germany, but not the traitor who seeks shelter under the Stars and Stripes and fights underhanded.

"The biggest problem for the public school system is to Americanize the un-American element in the schools. Chicago is one of the biggest foreign born cities in the world. If I am not mistaken there are in Chicago at the present time 1,600,000 men, women and children, either born in foreign countries or of foreign parentage.

"Here is your problem and job to perform in the schools. Americanize the school children so that they can go into their homes and Americanize their parents if they are aliens."

Miss Jenny H. Snow, supervisor of the household arts of the board of education, spoke on the conservation of food.

GOVERNMENT STATEMENT

Period covered	Daily (Exclusive of Sunday)	Sunday (Only)
Six months ending Sept. 30, 1917 . .	381,675	614,418

On May 14, 1917, The Chicago Daily Tribune returned to its former retail price of 2c per copy within the city of Chicago and its suburbs, the old price of 2c in the country never having been changed.

On May 20, 1917, The Chicago Sunday Tribune increased its retail price to 8c in the country, the old price of 5c in the city of Chicago and its suburbs remaining unchanged.

The current statement to the Post Office Department, printed below, therefore covers a period of approximately one and a half months at the old retail prices and four and a half months at the new and increased retail prices.

The decreases in circulation under the figures reported to the Post Office Department by The Chicago Tribune for the corresponding six months period last year are, however, only seven-tenths of one per cent for The Sunday Tribune and two and seven-tenths per cent for The Daily Tribune.

Compared with the Government figures for the corresponding period two years ago, The Chicago Daily Tribune now shows an actual increase of 27,155 and The Chicago Sunday Tribune an increase of 56,022.

The Chicago Daily Tribune now enjoys the largest 2c circulation in America, morning or evening, and The Chicago Sunday Tribune's circulation is far greater than that of any other Sunday newspaper outside of New York City.

For the period from January 1, 1917, to and including September 30, 1917, The Chicago Tribune has printed more advertising than in any similar period in its history.

GRAIN MARKETS NEGLECTED AND PRICES DECLINE

Trade in Corn and Oats Is Smallest in Some Time —Product Firm.

The corn market was dull and easier yesterday, volume of trade being smallest in some time. Prices held within a narrow range and at the finish were ⅛@⅜c under previous resting spots. Local traders were disposed to work on the selling side and the commission house demand was not strong enough to readily take the offerings. Heavy to killing frosts over the belt had little effect on the market, as the trade believes that most of the corn is safe, and that frost, if anything, will help dry out the corn. The government crop report for October will be out Monday and this also tended to restrict business.

Cash corn was steady to ½c lower, with local shipping sales 10,000 bu. The country is inclined to sell corn more freely, both new and old, and local industries made fair purchases. Local receipts were 79 cars. Primary markets received 333,000 bu corn, against 541,000 bu a year ago. Local receipts for the week were 922,000 bu, against 522,000 bu a year ago.

Weak Market for Oats.

Trading in oats was also limited and the market tone was weak. Resting spots showed net declines of ⅛@⅝c. Selling of December oats by Barrett attracted some attention, although not of extensive proportions. Bartlett-Frazier sold oats early. Best buying was by the Armour Grain company. The weaker tone in corn had a depressing effect, as did the heavy cash oats market. Prices in the sample market were steady to ½c lower, with local shipping sales 65,000 bu. The country continues to offer oats moderately, despite big yields and favorable marketing conditions.

Primary receipts for the day totaled 1,173,000 bu, compared with 1,363,000 bu a year ago. Local arrivals were 187 cars. Receipts here for the week were 2,857,000 bu, while shipments were 2,282,000 bu. Clearances of oats for the week were largest in some time, totaling nearly 4,000,000 bu.

Provisions Sharply Higher.

Provisions ruled sharply higher with packers' brokers and shorts on the buying side. Demand was based largely on reports of further purchases by the Belgian relief committee. There was little or no selling pressure on the market and closing prices were best of the day. Hog prices at the yards were weak and receipts at western markets for the week totaled [illegible] head, against 251,000 last week and 466,000 a year ago. Local meat shipments for the week were 18,044,000 lbs, compared with 15,493,000 lbs a year ago, while lard shipments were 3,980,000 lbs, against 8,275,000 lbs last year.

Weak Market for Rye.

Rye was ¼@1c lower. Cash No. 2 sold $1.85@1.85½. Receipts were 8 cars.

Barley ruled 2@3c lower. Malting was quoted $1.30@1.40 and sold $1.32@1.39; feed and mixing quotable $1.20@1.32, with sales at $1.30@1.32; screenings were quoted 70c@$1.10 and sold 82c. Receipts, 58 cars.

Timothy seed was firm. October closed $8.25 bid. March sold $8.90@8.95 and cash lots $6.75@7.30. Clover seed ruled firm. Cash lots were quoted $18.00@22.50 and spot prime, $24.20.

Flaxseed closed 4½c lower, with cash quoted $3.11½.

COTTON.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—COTTON—December contracts sold in the cotton market here today up to 25.90c or more than half a cent above last night's closing prices, and approximately $3.50 per bale above yesterday's low level. That delivery closed at 25.52c, with the general list closing at a net advance of 11 to 15 points. The market opened firm at an advance of 11 to 23 points on covering by recent sellers for a reaction. The demand became more active with the general list showing net advances of 45 to 57 points. Frost predictions seemed to create no general apprehension, and after the first rush of covering, buying tapered off. The market then turned easier, under realizing, and the decline later in the morning was partly attributed to rather active selling by houses with southwestern connections. Closing prices showed reactions of 33 to 43 points from the best. Futures:

NEW ORLEANS, La., Oct. 6.—COTTON—Cold weather over the belt and predictions of frost caused a higher market for cotton here today, but after prices had mounted to 44 to 48 points over last night's close, heavy selling occurred. Final prices were at a net gain of 13 to 17 points. Futures:

Spot firm and unchanged; middling, 25.63c.

GOSSIP OF THE PIT

Shipping demand for cash corn and oats shows no improvement and prices in the sample market were again weak, both being steady to ½c lower. The country is disposed to offer corn more freely, both new and old, and evidently the east is holding off pending the movement of the new crop. No. 3 white oats sold 1c over December price early, but later went back to previous basis of 1¼c over. Standard oats were 1¼@1½c over. Country offerings of oats remain light for the season, especially in view of the enormous crop, and there is no question but what farmers are determined to hold out for higher prices. Local shipping sales were given as 10,000 bu corn and 65,000 bu oats.

"Grain dealers in Minneapolis tell me that Minnesota has a much larger corn crop than was expected, that it is all made and will move early, possibly the latter part of this month or early in November," said W. H. Perrine. "Farmers have just commenced selling. There was a heavy frost in northern Illinois last night, but most of the corn is in shock and what is left standing is yellow, so frost was needed to dry it out."

Crary-Johnson have advices from north central Illinois saying that the holding policy of the farming community is more pronounced than ever regarding oats and that the movement of new corn will be slow owing to the scarcity of labor and the reluctance to pay the prices asked for picking, which is 8c and 10c per bu.

"The seed trade looks for an extremely heavy foreign demand when the war closes," say Somers-Jones. "Meadows the world over will have to be rehabilitated. An unusually large proportion of the meadow lands in this country is going into grain and a heavy domestic seed demand may also be looked for next year. This accounts for the strong bullish sentiment in timothy and clover seed, with another small crop in sight for 1918."

Minneapolis and Duluth received 3,202 cars wheat for the week, compared with 3,389 cars previous week and 4,060 a year ago. Winnipeg had 6,914 cars, against 5,807 previous week and 5,947 a year ago. Kansas City, St. Louis, and Omaha had a total of 927 cars for the week, against 2,491 a year ago.

Michigan state report for October, as wired by C. A. King & Co. of Toledo, makes wheat acreage sown this fall 106 per cent of last year's and rye acreage 103 per cent. Farmers marketed only 250,000 bu wheat during September in that state.

Receipts inspected Saturday: Wheat, 35 cars; corn, 79 cars; oats, 187 cars; rye, 8 cars; barley, 58 cars. Hogs estimated for Monday, 20,000 head, and for all next week 80,000 head.

Little rain is indicated for the major portion of the corn belt for next week, according to the official forecast. Frequent alternation from warm to cool weather is promised.

John Barrett had a message from Omaha saying that quite a lot of corn was offered there from Nebraska points at $1.30 per bu, track Omaha, November shipment.

Minneapolis wheat stocks increased 3,000 bu for one day, against an increase of 10,000 bu for same time last year.

SWEDISH SELLING SAID TO BE ONE CAUSE OF DECLINE

Eastern Authority Has a New Explanation for Drop.

A prominent eastern authority has on the market situation the following, which is regarded as expressing an important phase of current conditions:

"There is some reason to believe that the distinct weakness has not been altogether or even mainly the result of pressure of short commitments. With such a sustained decline there must have been actual liquidation, and the fact that the selling has been most severe in the special securities that have in the past been favored investments of foreign interests suggests that the foreign liquidation has been a substantial factor.

Swedish Holders Sell.

"A month or so ago—immediately after the disclosures of the unneutral action of the Swedish minister in Argentina in forwarding messages for the German chargé d'affaires—there was quite a severe wave of liquidation in the local market that was ascribed to sales of American securities by Swedish holders. Since that development it may not be said that our relations with the northern Europe neutrals have improved or that the possibility of a conflict with any of them is completely beyond the range of probabilities.

"It is worth recalling that the neutral countries have been making huge profits during the entire period of the war, having occupied a position similar to that of our own country before we became actual participants. Scandinavian and Dutch financial interests became prominent in New York, and it would certainly not appear illogical to believe that profits that were so freely made were invested in American securities. The Dutch for years have been large investors in American railroad and industrial securities; thus, with the serious questions arising from the export embargo problem, there has developed incentive to withdraw to some extent from such investments—a feature to which at least some part of the recent heavy liquidation may be attributed.

Another Source.

"Another source of foreign liquidation is undersotod to have been associated with sales on behalf of the British treasury. This, too, is a development connected with our entrance as a belligerent. Before that date financial arrangements of Great Britain with America were on the basis of governmental borrowing through our bankers.

"The moment we entered the war an entirely new situation arose. Our treasury advanced funds and private banking loans no longer were necessary. As private loans matured the collateral that had been deposited as security became unnecessary, and as a matter of fact, useless for further loans. Hence the next best use to make of it was to sell it on the open market. The extent of this liquidation is one of the secrets that will most probably not become known until after the war. That it has been one of the sources of recent depression in stock exchange circles there seems slight reason to doubt."

Subscribe for a Bond.

The new loan, subscriptions for which are now being taken, is the most attractive one that has been offered by the United States government since the Civil war. It is better in one point than the preliminary announcements a month ago indicated. Yielding 4 per cent and not being subject to the normal income tax, as was stated then, it is also exempt from the excess profits tax and the supertax, if the investor holds no more than $5,000 of the bonds. As the average person cannot well subscribe for more than $5,000, these bonds have for him all the advantages of the recent 3½ per cent loan, together with the higher rate of interest.

The interest on the former loan was a little low in comparison with the yields obtainable on other good bonds, but on this one it is ample to justify everybody in subscribing, simply on the investment merits of the issue, leaving motives of patriotism out of the reckoning. A vast number of small subscriptions is necessary to make this loan a success.

The previous loan being entirely exempt from supertaxes offered a special attraction to people of great wealth, and there is no doubt that many very large subscriptions were made. There will be fewer large subscriptions this time, and therefore there must be many more small ones. As the bonds are in small denominations and subscriptions are payable in several installments, every person who receives regularly wages, salary, or income, should subscribe to the extent of his ability.

St. Louis Southwestern.

L. B. L., Litchfield, Ill.—The St. Louis Southwestern railway has outstanding $16,356,100 of common stock, $19,893,650 of preferred, and a bonded debt of $56,124,250. The debt is large, fixed charges take the greater part of earnings, and the balance applicable to dividends is subject to wide fluctuations. In 1916 about 10 per cent was earned on preferred stock. The balance for common after allowing 5 per cent for preferred was 7½ per cent, thus far this year a better showing has been made. The average of the last decade has been 1¾ per cent on common. Some dividends were paid on preferred from 1909 to 1914, but none since. In the last year the company has cleared off a large floating debt and improved its position.

Charcoal Iron Company.

C. W. I., Kalamazoo, Mich.—The Charcoal Iron company is a reorganization formed early in 1915 of a failed company. The new company bought the plants at auction and issued $5,217,250 of 6 per cent preferred stock and $2,839,350 common. There are no bonds. Dividends on the preferred stock did not start till a year ago. Accumulations were cleared up March 31, and since then regular dividends have been paid. Dividends on the common began with a payment of 1½ per cent on April 15. This was repeated on July 5. On Oct. 1 2 per cent was paid. The iron and steel business has been enjoying great prosperity in the last two years, and it is not known yet just how good a showing this company can make in dull times. Probably for that reason the preferred stock sells rather low.

Brief Answers.

W. A. F., Appleton, Wis.—In the mere fact of a bond's being listed there is no advantage. The supposition is that a listed bond enjoys a ready market, and evidently a ready market is an advantage. The fact is, however, that not more than half of the listed bonds have a ready market.

C. H.—Kennecott sold ex dividend on Sept. 7. If you held your stock until Sept. 14, you should have received the dividend of $1.50 a share paid Sept. 29.

Only 4,000 hogs were received at Chicago yesterday and they found an early outlet at steady prices, topping at $19.65, with the bulk at $18.40@19.40. Trade was soon over. Pigs were unchanged, with most desirable shipping grades selling at $17.50@17.75.

Final prices made hogs 20 to 60c lower than a week ago, with the mixed, grass fed packers showing the big end of the decline. The average price of all hogs here this week, however, was $18.90, or the same as last week's, which was the record weekly average for this market. Pigs were 50c to $1.00 lower than a week ago. Total receipts of hogs this week were 65,700, an increase of 4,000, but less than half the arrivals of the same week last year.

Hog purchases for the day: Armour & Co., 1,900; Anglo-American, 300; Swift & Co., 300; Hammond, 400; Wilson & Co., 500; Western Packing company, 300; Roberts & Oake, 100; Miller & Hart, 200; Independent, 200; Agar, 100; butchers, 300; shippers, 800; total, 4,900; left over, 2,500.

CATTLE.

Good to choice, handy weight beef steers finished the week steady to strong, compared with a week ago, while other natives were 15@25c lower. Range cattle closed 25@50c higher for all but the most expensive steers, which were steady at the season's record level. Native cows and heifers finished 25@40c higher, while calves were unchanged. Receipts for the week showed a big decrease, which proved a good thing for the market after the rush of stock here the previous week, and the trade finished in a healthy condition.

Cattle at seven markets for the week 339,000, against 373,000 the preceding week, 273,000 a year ago, and 248,000 two years ago. Total for 1917 to date, 7,669,000, against 6,355,000 the same period in 1916.

SHEEP.

Highest prices of the season were made by sheep and lambs here this week and final quotations showed net gains of 25@50c for matured sheep and 75c@$1.00 for lambs, as compared with a week ago. Lambs topped at $18.60 for natives and $18.55 for rangers. Sheep reached an extreme price of $13.00 for wethers and $12.00 for ewes, while yearlings topped at $14.25. Receipts for the week decreased more than 15,000 head and were little more than half the volume of arrivals the same week a year ago.

COFFEE.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—COFFEE—There was further covering in the market for coffee futures here today, with the near months relatively firm. Opening prices were 2 points higher and December sold up to 7.31c shortly after the call, or 8 points above last night's closing figures, while March touched 7.56, or 9 points net higher. The advance was checked at this level by realizing or a little trade selling, and the close was slightly off from the best, showing a net gain of 4@5 points. The business included exchanges from near to late months. Closing bids: October, 7.12c; December, 7.28c; January, 7.36c; March, 7.51c; May, 7.71c; July, 7.88c; September, 7.97c. Spot coffee was quiet. Rio 7's, 8⅝c; Santos, 4's, 9⅝c. The official cables showed an advance of 50 reis in the Rio market and of 5-32d in Rio exchange on London. Santos was unchanged. Rio cleared 36,000 bags for New Orleans. Brazilian port receipts 71,000 bags; Jundiahy, 45,000 bags.

$1,700 for a Carload of Vegetables
That is what we received from J. P. Wilson, a Philadelphia Commission Merchant, in February of this year, but this will be a common occurrence next spring, as the demand for Florida vegetables becomes greater. The North is more dependent than ever this coming winter on Florida for its fresh vegetables.
The business of the Indian River Gardens Corporation is the production of beans, cabbage, potatoes and other vegetables and the growing of grapefruit, oranges and tangerines. The great demand for these necessities makes this a lucrative business which is conducted on an absolutely cash basis.
You can share in the profits of this business and at the same time protect your investment by subscribing for some of the remaining portion of the 7% cumulative preferred stock of this company, which carries with it a 20% common stock bonus.

CHICAGO BANKS ISSUE DIGESTS ON WAR TAXES

Northern Trust company, through President Soloman A. Smith, is issuing to friends of the institution a "War Revenue Tax Digest" of the act of October, 1917. The booklet contains thirty-three pages. It is a comprehensive digest, but does not attempt to cover every detail of the act's measures. The purpose is to give the reader offhand a general idea of how the tax burden has been distributed and how his own personal and business interests are affected.

The Corn Exchange National bank has also issued "A Summary of the New Revenue Bill," which emphasizes special features of the act relating to excess profits, income tax, and stamp taxes.

FINANCIAL -NOTES-

It is reported that the United States Smelting company earned about $80,000 in August from its Mexican properties, the first considerable showing of monthly profits reported from this source thus far this year. Friends of the company expect that from now on the silver properties in Mexico will return at least $250,000 a month. The new silver strike continues to meet expectations and as soon as capacity can be increased to take care of this ore earning should show still further improvement.

Specific instances of the bearing of the excess profits tax section of the war revenue bill upon railroads confirms the early impression that in its present form the tax bill bears less heavily upon the railroads than it did as it passed the senate.

Failures reported by Dun in the Chicago district numbered 25, as compared with 24 last week, 84 in 1916, and 35 in 1915. Those with liabilities over $5,000 number 8 against 9 last week, 17 in 1916, and 18 in 1915.

The export demand for tin plate has become heavy. Urgent requirements of foreign consumers is indicated by the payment of $22 a base box on a fair sized order and other exporters have bid $25 a base box without being able to obtain plates.

The Ætna Explosives company says that the statement that the company had been awarded a contract for 12,-000,000 pounds of picric acid by the United States government was incorrect. No contract has yet been signed, although negotiations for business of this character with the government are under way.

Cerro Gordo Pays 2½ Extra.

Cerro Gordo Mines company has declared the regular quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent and an extra of 2½ per cent, both dividends payable Oct. 15 to stock of record Sept. 30.

CHEERING NEWS FOR HOLDERS OF RUSSIAN BONDS

American Banker Sees Hope Ahead for the Slavic Ruble.

An American banker, with broad experience in foreign finance and in touch with the leading financial powers of the new republic, now traveling on business in Russia, writing to A. B. Leach & Co. of New York City, expresses the conviction that the situation in that country is basically a sound one as regards the interests of investors in Russian securities.

Upon the authority of the big banking institutions of Russia, he asserts that the new government is generally considered exceedingly able and energetic and that the majority of the population is absolutely back of the government.

Americans, he says, should not look for tremendous exports from Russia or decrease of her imports immediately after the close of the war.

Will Take Time.

He points out that the reorganization of factories now employed in making war materials will take some time. "There will be no demobilization of the army," he writes, "and the dividing of all these hands between agriculture and industry. Furthermore, the tremendous stores of grain, potatoes, beets are being consumed rapidly, and it would be a mistake to think that they remain ready for export right away. The position will be as follows:

"Imports will continue; exports will commence on a small scale. Gradually the home industry will be able to prevent imports of such things as can be produced here, and once agriculture is in full swing again we may look for large exports. And these exports will be increased by the enormous quantities of timber and minerals and oil Russia can export and thus turn the trade balance largely in favor of this country.

Big Profits Probable.

"The ruble will again improve and gradually work itself back to normal. Gradually but slowly things will develop and those who have bought Russian bonds will have a very fair chance of making a great deal of money gradually, while having an investment as good as gold though payable in paper.

"I apologize whenever I put the question of repudiation. The answer is: 'Not a ghost of a chance.' I am saying this on the highest authority.

"The working class is making money. All good working men are employed in government factories, and instead of 100 rubles a month make 400 to 500. They all of a sudden are rich, and as there is no vodka and consequently less desire for spending it on gambling, etc., the only thing for them to do is to put their money into the savings banks and to buy bonds.

Deposits Stupendous.

"The deposits in the banks are stupendous, including the savings banks. They are increasing at the rate of 400,-000,000 rubles a month."

There has been heavy purchasing of Russian bonds by American investors, and the report to Leach & Co. will be the first details from first hands they have had. All other previous reports to banking interests and others have been general in their nature.

CHICAGO CURB QUOTATIONS

Compared with sharp declines in all listed markets, local curb stocks remained quite steady during the past week, although trading was on a limited scale. There was no forced selling in any of these securities. Moline Plow preferred changed hands at 97½, closing at 97 bid, offered at 97½. Emerson Brantingham preferred was slightly easier with sales at 44, closing at 43 bid, offered at 45. Avery common advanced from 87½ to 90, and closed at 89 bid, stock offered at 91. The preferred was wanted at 95½. Reo Motor Car was slightly lower with sales at 24½. Continental Motor was unchanged at 6 to 6½. Paige-Detroit was offered at 24¾, with stock wanted at 24. Great Lakes Dredge and Dock sold at 71.

Cities Service common declined to sales at 220, but improved to 224 bid, 226 asked. Northern States Power common changed hands at 73, and closed at that price bid with stock offered at 76. Odd lots of Middle West Utilities preferred changed hands as low as 66. United Light and Railways preferred sold at 67½, and the common at 37.

After the recent advance in Butler Brothers the stock reacted from 210 to 200, closing at 202 bid, offered at 205. Kellogg Switchboard and Supply company was offered at 266 with very little interest on the buying side.

CHICAGO STOCK TRANSACTIONS

On the local stock exchange the Carbide-Carbon issues showed further improvement. Union Carbide closed at 170, against the closing price of 152 on Thursday. The decline in shares appears to have been a kind of slaughter. Prestolite closed at 137½, a gain of three points on the day's trading. Other issues were irregular, with no special tendency in the market.

ON THE BROAD STREET CURB

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—[Special.]—The volume of business on the Broad street curb was restricted in the aggregate during the last week because of the progress which is being made to an adjustment of trading in that market to new conditions. In this step the curb may be regarded as preparing the way for similar steps on the stock exchange. Interest continued to diminish in war orders issues, although the knowledge of large government expenditures and possible liberal profits caused activity to be maintained in the airplane issues. Only a few issues were traded in even to a small extent, and these issues sagged off slightly on a trifling amount of business.

Oil stocks were without demand because of the policy to wait until the government has completed its investigation of the trade and announces terms at which it desires petroleum product sales will be conducted. Mining stocks generally also were lower.

There was no special change in the position of the motor stocks.

MOTOR GOSSIP

According to the Boston News bureau, it is clear that the motive of the directors of the Maxwell company in passing the common stock dividends, as well as the 6 per cent dividend on the second preferred, was purely precautionary, since earnings for the fiscal year ended July 31 were equal to 29.6 per cent on the common share issue.

The move was designed to conserve working capital, protect the integrity of the first preferred dividend, and put the company in a position to weather changes which may arise in the future because of war conditions. The company will have a heavy excess profits tax to pay. Based on the results of the last fiscal year, this tax, including the 6 per cent income tax, will run between $1,000,000 and $1,200,000.

The 3 per cent tax on all motor cars—passenger and truck—is now added to the price as a separate war item. At a meeting of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, representatives of about 100 manufacturing companies decided upon this action. All automobile prices are now quoted by dealers as the list price plus the war tax, which approximates 3 per cent of the wholesale price.

A vacancy on the board of directors of the Chevrolet Motor company has been filled by the election of R. F. McLaughlin, president of the Chevrolet Motor company of Canada.

The twenty stocks are Anaconda Copper, American Car and Foundry, American Smelting, American Telephone, Atchison, Baltimore and Ohio, Brooklyn Rapid Transit, Chesapeake and Ohio, Erie, Great Northern preferred, New York Central, Northern Pacific, Pennsylvania, Reading, Southern Pacific, Southern Railway, St. Paul, American Sugar, Union Pacific, and United States Steel.

Total sales of stocks, 240,000 shares.

Total sales of bonds [par value], $1,-775,000.

MARKET LEADERS ACTIVE.

New York, Oct. 6.—The stock market's turnover today was largely restricted to so-called market leaders. Gains ranging from large fractions to 1½ points marked early dealings, notably in war shares and active specialties. In the main this advantage was lost later.

Steels, oils, and related stocks yielded 1 to 3 points. Texas company was weakest, falling 5¼ points on relatively large offerings.

Rails Show Strength.

Rails held best, Canadian Pacific and several low priced issues, including coalers, gaining 1 to 1½ points. New Haven advanced 1⅝ despite adverse earnings for August.

Bonds were heavy on small offerings, the Liberty issue holding at 99.72@99.78. United States coupon 3s advanced ⅝ per cent on the week, other issues remaining unchanged on call.

MARKET COMMENT

Wall Street continues to be perplexed over the source of selling of St. Paul. One suggestion is that the stock is coming from the estates of two large holders who died about a year ago. One of these is said to have been next to the largest individual owner of the stock.

Concerning St. Paul, it is pointed out that the current price of the shares is not as high as Chesapeake and Ohio sold at during intervals of dividend suspensions.

The Dow-Jones news agency yesterday issued the following: "It is generally rumored throughout the street that the activities of bold raiders have been checked by a warning which was allowed to go out from the stock exchange authorities to brokers handling the accounts of the principal raiders. It is understood there was nothing official in this action. The brokers who were large sellers were appealed to not to wantonly destroy securities' values at a time when the United States government was doing all in its power to sell $3,000,000,000 of bonds."

The copper stocks are creating a great deal of comment, but the business position of the companies seems to warrant the uncertainty. The price at which the output must be sold has been fixed, while labor is paid on the basis of at least 5 cents higher than the selling price and other cost sare contributing to a reduction in profits.

Certain banking houses are said to be taking the position that the peak in the increase in operating expenses of the railroads has not been seen, but that it will be passed before the end of the year. Meanwhile the roads will be able to present some good reasons to the interstate commerce commission for higher freight rates.

New financing applications as soon as the Liberty loan is out of the way are being talked of in Wall street. It may be doubted, however, whether financing applications will receive much consideration during the remaining period of the war, unless the applications be for loans on short time notes.

Specialists report some further accumulation of American Can common. Their comment also is to the effect that the offerings are limited. The impression is that when the market turns for an upward swing Can will make one of the best recoveries.

Yesterday's market opened firm on short covering, but lost some at the close. The street thought the buyers on Friday and a few days earlier had turned sellers.

There was unusually large trading in Midvale Steel, which sold down from 50½ to 48⅛, the lowest price at which it has been quoted since being traded in on the New York stock exchange.

SEPTEMBER BUILDING.

	No.	Cost.
1917	321	$4,334,400
1916	910	8,579,550

THE week's real estate market was of an exceedingly encouraging character, the business reported, as well as that made a matter of record, including an unusual number of really important transactions, some of which involved highly important building projects. The latter feature is of unusual interest at this time in view of the sharp falling off in building operations, owing to the high prices of building materials and the general tendency to postpone large undertakings particularly in the hope that with the coming of peace there is likely to be a sharp decline in the most of materials as well as labor.

It probably is safe to say, however, there is a slowly growing belief that so far as the cost of materials, particularly steel, is concerned there is not much likelihood of any considerable reduction in prices for a long time after the coming of peace, for the reason that the structural needs of the world, owing to the destruction incident to the war and the centralizing of the productive forces of the world on the manufacturing of war materials, to the exclusion of structural products, will more than absorb the surplus products of this as well as the other great manufacturing countries of the world for a number of years to come.

Reduction Long Time Away.

In this connection it is interesting to note the findings of a prominent New York City architect who was commissioned by wealthy clients to investigate the situation and report whether, in his opinion, there was reason to expect any material reduction in building costs for a considerable time to come. According to a summary of his report, which was published in the New York World, there is not much probability of any pronounced reduction for a long time to come.

The feature of the week's market in a building way, and of unusual interest for other reasons, was the announcement that the old Avenue house in Evanston, erected sixty-five years ago at the northeast corner of Davis street and Chicago avenue as the first village hall of the north shore town and for the last half-century used as a hotel, and around which has centered much of the social and political activity of that city, is to be replaced by a modern, fireproof hotel building to cost about $700,000. At a meeting of the Evanston council plans for the new hotel were passed on and a building permit granted.

$700,000 Hotel Planned.

It is to be built by Frank M. Anderson, Louis M. Nelson, and John Lundquist, who have just closed the purchase of the property from a syndicate headed by B. Edward Powers, who purchased the property about a year ago through Ernest H. Lyons. The lot fronts 170 feet on Davis street by 264 on Chicago avenue and the purchase price is said to have been $170,000, which is at the rate of $1,000 a front foot for the Davis street frontage.

In the sale of the property Stafford & Trankle represented the purchasers and in connection with the construction of the proposed building they have negotiated a serial bond issue loan for $550,000 at 6 per cent with Lackner & Butz Sons. The same brokers will have the management of the property. Ernest H. Lyons represented the sellers.

Playground for Children.

The property was for many years owned by the Quinlan estate and the old house now stands on the north part of the property.

It is stated that the work of razing the present building will begin in about ten days and it is expected the new building will be ready for occupancy by May 1, 1918. The plans for the building have been prepared by Architect Robert E. De Golyer. It will be six stories high and will contain 350 rooms with baths and showers.

Owing to the large ground area, as the building will occupy the entire lot, there will be many attractive features, including a solarium, large patio with sliding skylight, large banquet hall, playground for children, and other features. The ground floor will furnish space for nineteen shops.

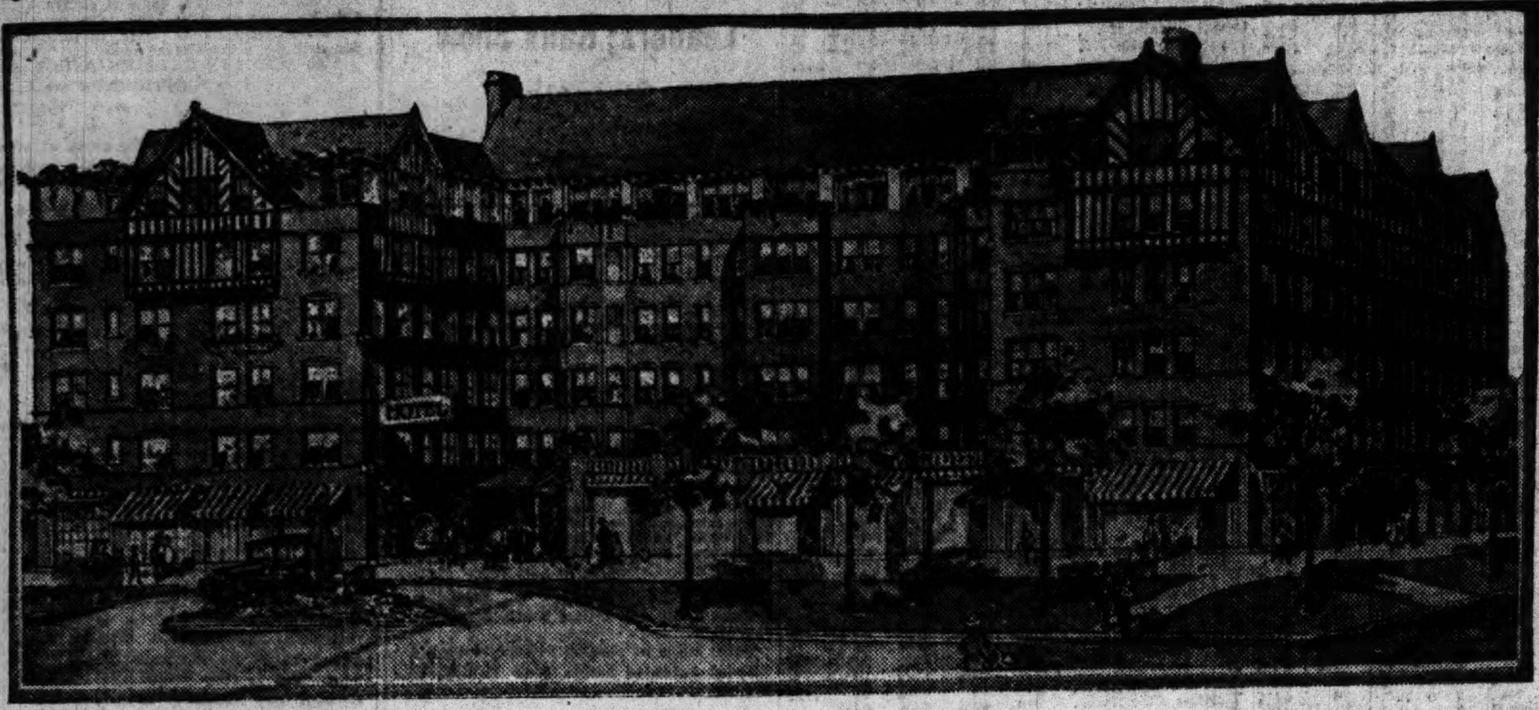
Ben M. Smith looked after the legal details for the purchasers.

Project 18 Flat Building at Cornell and 76th Street

William K. Young et al. have conveyed to Ariel M. Lemay the vacant 120x109 feet at the southeast corner of Cornell avenue and Seventy-sixth street; consideration nominal, but said to be about $6,000. It is understood the purchaser plans to improve with a high grade eighteen apartment building to cost about $65,000.

EVANSTON'S NEW $700,000 HOTEL

Work Is Soon to Begin on the Wrecking of the Famous Old Avenue House to Make Way for a Modern Hostelry. The New Structure Is Expected to Be Completed During 1918.



Evanston's proposed new $700,000 hotel, which was designed by Robert S. De Golyer, is suggestive of the domestic architecture of the Elizabethan period. The exterior walls are to be of variegated red brick, with the upper stories of stucco and half timber and the gabled roof of slate.

Most of the shops on the Davis street front, as well as those on Chicago avenue, are one story high, the deck over which will be used as an open air terrace, opening from the second floor. The terrace has a balustraded parapet wall of stone.

The entrance from Chicago avenue leads through a garden into the lobby and gives a vista through to the fountain and garden wall of the patio, from which the dining room and ballroom open. On the top floor is a solarium, with a maximum amount of glass both to the west and east, giving a fine view of the lake. The bedrooms start on the second floor, they being large rooms with exceptionally large closets.

FAIRLY GOOD DEALS IN HOME PROPERTIES

Residence property did not cut as much of a figure in the week's market as during the previous week; nevertheless, there were several fairly interesting transactions.

Mrs. Kathryn McCoy Mussey, wife of William P. Mussey, 57 West Madison street, has purchased from Susan H. V. Champin of Pasadena, Cal., formerly of Chicago, the residence property at 4711 Woodlawn avenue, a 12 room stone dwelling with 29x187 feet of ground, for a reported consideration of $15,000. James J. Parker & Co. negotiated the sale.

C. J. Krause has sold to Thomas H. Matthews the residence and six flat building at 809-11 Michigan avenue, Evanston, lot 100x135 feet, for a reported consideration of $35,000, subject to an incumbrance of $15,000, the purchaser giving in part payment the six flat building at the northwest corner of Millard avenue and Fifteenth street and other west side property. Krause, Beak & Co. were the brokers.

The three story stone front residence at 1156 North Dearborn street, between Elm and Division streets, lot 22½x150 feet, has been sold by Catherine Jensen to Frank and Emma Marcy for a reported consideration of $10,000. S. A. Crowe Jr. of Crowe Bros. & Co. was the broker.

O. H. Hull conveyed to Thomas E. Grubb the residence property at 504 Ash street, Winnetka, near Sheridan road, a nine room frame and stucco on a lot 75x187 feet, for $12,000 clear. This, together with the vacant, 173x187 feet, at the northeast corner of Glendale and Elm streets, Winnetka, which went in at a valuation of $6,000, was traded for the equity in the high grade six flat building on 50x123 feet, east front, at 7614-16 Greenview avenue, just north of Howard street, which was conveyed at a consideration of $36,000, subject to $18,000. Murray & Terry represented Mr. Hull and Moore & Dearborn Mr. Grubb.

Dr. Wellington T. Stewart of Rogers Park has sold his residence property on South avenue, Glencoe, on the lake, to Morris M. Townley, a north shore attorney, for a reported consideration of $30,000. The property consists of large grounds on a corner improved with an attractive eight room bungalow and garage. E. P. Maynard & Co. represented both parties.

Mandel Brothers Buy Cottage Grove Vacant

Mandel Brothers have purchased from Mary C. Meadowcroft, through H. G. Howard & Co., 101½x250 feet of vacant at 4814-20 Cottage Grove avenue, through to Evans avenue, consideration nominal, but said to be $13,000. While it adjoins their delivery station, the Mandels have no plans for the immediate improvement of the property. They also have acquired from the Murphy Varnish company the 50x100 feet of vacant, west front, in Federal street, 220 feet south of Twenty-second street, for a stated $7,000. This also adjoins a station of Mandel Brothers, but it is not planned to improve it at present.

Leasehold at Lake and Clinton Streets Conveyed

Charles H. Gekler has conveyed to Michael B. Warnimont the leasehold interest in the 111x80 feet at the northwest corner of Lake and Clinton streets, a nominal consideration being given. The property was leased July 1, 1907, by Ransom R. Cable to Ben I. Greenebaum for ninety-nine years at an annual rental of $4,500 for the first five years, $5,500 for the following five, and $6,000 for the remainder of the term. The leasehold interest was subsequently assigned by Greenebaum & Gekler.

Leases and Loans.

Several leases of large building space in the wholesale district were features of the leasing market of the week, there being nothing of any moment in the retail district.

In one of the most important of these George A. McKinlock leased to Ederheimer, Stein & Co., wholesale clothiers, the fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth, and tenth floors and the west fifty feet of the store and basement of the building at the southwest corner of Jackson boulevard and Fifth avenue for a term at an annual rental of $35,000. The lease was negotiated by Albert H. Wetten & Co. and Robert White & Co.

Jackson Boulevard Lease.

Another was the lease by Lucy B. Anderson and George Boddie to George P. Ide & Co., large manufacturers of shirts, collars, and cuffs, of the store and basement at the southwest corner of Jackson boulevard and Franklin for a term rental of $60,000. It is the purpose of the lessee to convert the premises into an unusually attractive salesroom. Albert H. Wetten & Co. and John T. Boddie were the brokers.

Albert H. Wetten & Co. also leased for Mary F. Kellogg to Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co., Dessauer, and others the six story and basement building at 326 West Adams street, for an aggregate term rental of $115,000; also for Seipp realty trustees to Schoenfeld, Yatter & Co., T. A. Shaw, and others, space in the building at the southwest corner of Market and Van Buren streets, for a term, at an aggregate rental of $45,000; also for the estate of J. M. Williams to George E. Harrison, the store and basement at 207-209 West Monroe street, for a term rental of $28,500; also for the estate of Max A. Meyer to Alfred Decker & Cohn, the store and basement at the southwest corner of Franklin and Van Buren streets, for a term rental of $23,000; also for John V. Farwell & Co. to S. & A. Cohen, the basement at 134-136 South Market street, for a term rental of $20,000.

$60,000 Loan Negotiated.

Edgar M. Snow & Co. have made a loan of $60,000 five years, at 5½ per cent, secured on the premises 1272-1278 Milwaukee avenue, lot 64x100 feet, northeast front, just west of the intersection of Milwaukee avenue, Ashland avenue, and Division street, improved with a four story and basement building occupied as a department store.

Snow & Co. also made a loan of $45,000, five years, at 5½ per cent, on the property at the southeast corner of West Madison and Leavitt streets, 132x125 feet, improved with three story brick store and apartment buildings. They also have made a loan of $34,000, six years, at 6 per cent, on the property 4400-4414 Magnolia avenue, improved with an eighteen apartment building.

Baird & Warner have made a loan of $46,000 at 5½ per cent on the high class twelve flat building at the northwest corner of Blackstone avenue and Fifty-seventh street. They also report a number of smaller loans.

SOME DEALS IN FACTORY PROPERTIES

An interesting transaction in manufacturing property was the purchase by the Zin-Ho Manufacturing company, large manufacturers of portable air compressors, of the entire plant of the Briggs-Chicago company at North Chicago, comprising a large one story factory and office building on three acres of land, including machinery and tools, for a reported consideration of $40,000. The property is served by a switch from the Elgin, Joliet and Eastern railroad. Hool & Goodman represented the sellers and Louis D. Beardslee the purchasers.

The Great Western Smelting and Refining company has purchased from the Forsyth estate a tract of twenty-five acres at the intersection of New York avenue and Indianapolis boulevard with the Indiana Harbor Belt road at Whiting for a reported consideration of $40,000. The first unit of the plant will comprise a foundry building to cost about $60,000.

William Seymour has sold to the Riley-Schubert-Grossman company mail order house the property at the southeast corner of Fifteenth and Laflin streets, now occupied by the company under a lease. The property formerly was occupied by the Otis Elevator company, is 288x125 feet and is improved with five story mill construction buildings. The consideration is withheld. Hugo D. Loeb and Miltenberg & Guettel were the brokers.

EVANSTON SALE INVOLVES A BIG BUSINESS BLOCK

An interesting transaction in Evanston business property was the sale by Kate J., Theodore C., and Paul J. Cratty to Ralph C., Walter, and Helen M. Fox of property at northeast corner of Kedzie and Chicago avenues, lot 60x183 feet, improved with a building containing four stores, eight offices, and thirteen apartments, for a reported consideration of $60,000, subject to an incumbrance of $31,000. In part payment the purchasers conveyed a three apartment building in Evanston, subject to an incumbrance of $9,000, and a residence in Lake Forest, subject to an incumbrance of $6,600. E. E. Stults of E. R. Haase & Co. represented all the parties to the transaction.

Thomas Conran & Co. sold for Catherine McCarthy to Joseph Balata the property at 5925-27 South State street, lot 50 x161 feet, with 5 story building containing two stores and fourteen flats, with a two story flat building in the rear, for a reported consideration of $35,000, subject to $16,000 incumbrance, the purchaser conveying in part payment a farm of 220 acres in Van Buren county, Mich.

Three Purchases Made by Forest Preserve District

Record was made of three purchases by the forest preserve district with aggregate considerations of $67,899. From Joseph Dreveny it acquired seventy-three acres on the Desplaines river, west of Harlem avenue and north of the Santa Fe right of way in Cicero, for $46,554; from John H. Dymond et al., fifteen acres north of Catalpa avenue and east of the St. Paul road, for $13,097; and from Menard M. Gabel 20.62 acres in Niles, north of Dempster road and east of St. Paul tracks, for $8,248.

Ask Bankruptcy for Smith Form-a-Tractor

An involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed yesterday against the Smith Form-a-Tractor corporation of Clearing, Ill., in the United States district court. The Western Foundry company, with a claim of $6,035; the Electric Steel company with $5,200, and W. W. Harless with $800 are the petitioners. Referee in bankruptcy Sidney C. Eastman, in the absence of Judge Carpenter, appointed E. D. Buell receiver and fixed his bond at $25,000.

The petition alleges that the company is worth approximately $100,000 and that the liabilities are $150,000.

On Friday the tractor company was made a co-defendant with the Smith Motor Truck corporation and the Smith Form-a-Truck company in a suit for $12,500 by the Perfx Radiator company of Racine, Wis. Officers of the co-defendants said the tractor company has nothing to do with their organizations.

SHARP ACTIVITY IN OUTLYING REALTY IN WEEK

Sale at Sheridan Road and Pratt Boulevard Is Largest.

There was unusual activity in outside business property during the week, in respect both to the number as well as the importance of transactions.

In point of magnitude the most important was the transfer by the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee for Kusel & Harris, to Lawrence F. [illegible] of the property at the northwest corner of Sheridan road and Pratt boulevard. The lot is 178x150 feet and it is improved with a four story building containing sixty-nine apartments of three rooms, and eleven one room bachelor apartments on the upper floors, with stores, lobby, and restaurant on the ground floor. The consideration is not disclosed, but the property is said to be valued at around $400,000, the [illegible] being subject to an incumbrance of [illegible] 000. The property is said to have a [illegible] annual rental of about $40,000.

A noteworthy northwest side deal was the sale by E. A. Roser to Emil Reichl and Samuel Ladenyi of the property at the northwest corner of Lawrence and Sawyer avenues. The lot is 58x125 feet and is improved with a three story building containing three stores, two suites of offices, and thirteen apartments, having a gross rental of [illegible]. A reported consideration of $85,000 is given, the purchaser assuming an incumbrance of $36,000, and conveying in part payment the property at the southeast corner of Madison and Aberdeen streets, improved with a three story store and flat building at a valuation of [illegible], subject to an incumbrance of $14,000, and a fourteen room residence on a lot 81x175 feet at 549 Arlington place, at a valuation of $15,000.

It is stated that Mr. Roser will wreck this and immediately will improve with a thirty-eight court apartment building of two and three rooms. G. A. Boersta & Co. negotiated the deal. This is the second Lawrence avenue purchase made by Reichl and Ladenyi.

Three Deaths, 12 New Cases of Baby Plague

Twelve new cases of infantile paralysis were reported yesterday by the health department. There were three deaths from the disease. Health Commissioner Robertson said there was no change in the seriousness of the situation.
